HOME FOR LIFE

Seventy-four-year-old Joe Doll went when told Thursday that a judge had ruled he could stay in his Indianapolis home for the "rest of your life." Public health authorities had declared Doll's home for 71 years unit for habitation. Doll had pleaded, "I want to stay here. I won't live long anyway." He's shown holding one of his several cats which he says keeps rats away. (AP Wirephoto)

Canadian Literature Called Interesting

NEW YORK (CP)—Canadian literature "has at least become decidedly interesting," American writer and critic Edmund Wilson concludes in an extensive review of Canadian culture published in the New Yorker magazine. The article, first of a series of three which are to be included in a book scheduled for publication in the spring, ranges widely over Canadian life and letters. It touches on everything from Toronto traffic—"reckless to a degree that I have never seen elsewhere"—to the Stratford Shakespearean Festival which he says has "a brilliance and an originality that astonished me in contrast to Broadway." Wilson, whose own literary career goes back over almost a half-century, gives particular praise to writers Morley Callaghan, Hugh MacLennan, André Langevin and Marie-Claire Blais. But he stipulates that his study is not meant to be comprehensive, dealing only with "some writers who have attracted my own attention."

Among his observations on Canadian life, Wilson says he found Montreal had emerged from a "drab and crass provincial town" to become one of the most attractive cities on the continent. He found Eastern Canada "now perhaps more interesting than it has ever been before because it was going through a triple crisis involving a struggle with the United States, a struggle between French- and English-speaking Canadians and a movement for drastic reform within the Roman Catholic Church." Wilson says an important difference between the Canadian and U.S. society is that the former is compartmentalized into various ethnic groups, rather than welded together. He finds a conformity of a some times restricting kind within these groups but says the pattern is something of a relief from "insistence on conforming to a national ideal." The series of articles, and the book to be published by Farrar, Straus and Cudahy, is entitled O Canada, An American's Notes on Canadian Culture.

Scientists Plan To Drill In Hunt For Old Meteorite

By JOHN E. BIRD
OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian scientists in January will drill 5,000 feet to 3,500 below the bed of Manitoba's deepest lake in an attempt to establish whether the lake is in a crater created by a meteorite which plunged to earth millions of years ago. The drilling operation will be conducted on West Hawk Lake in southeastern Manitoba near the Manitoba-Ontario boundary as soon as the ice is thick enough to support heavy equipment. The research project will be conducted by the Dominion Observatory, department of mines and technical surveys. Dr. Leo Halliday, head of meteor physics research at the observatory, said in an interview the crater likely was created by a 1,000,000-ton meteorite with a diameter of some 200 feet. It probably struck the earth travelling at a velocity of 10 miles a second, gouging a crater more than 500 feet deep in solid rock.

Refineries Cut Price Of Sugar
MONTREAL (CP)—Three major Montreal sugar refineries have reduced the wholesale price of sugar by 10 cents to 88 a 100-pound bag.

The price change by the three refineries, Canada and Dominion; Atlantic and St. Lawrence, was a 10-cent drop Nov. 13 to 88.10. The price of sugar has changed 64 times this year, 49 decreases and 15 increases. Last year the price changed 97 times, 55 decreases and 42 increases. A spokesman for a big retail food chain said there would be no immediate change in the retail price, which has been steady at 49 cents for a five-pound bag and 97 cents for a 10-pound bag despite the changes this month. "We don't intend to be the first to change our price," he said. "If the price is changed, it will probably go to 47 cents and 95 cents."
