Founder's Birthday Marked At Mother, Daughter Banquet

Guides and Brownies of the First Baptist Church held their first mother and daughter banquet in the church hall Tuesday evening, Feb. 20.

The purpose of the occasion was to celebrate Thinking Day, which commemorates the birthdays of Lord and Lady Baden-Powell and the Guide sisterhood throughout the world.

Guests also included Rev. and Mrs. H.L. Milton, Mr. and Mrs. R.J. Rupert, Mrs. Malcolm MacDonald, district commissioner, Dr. A.L. Roberts, and members of the local association: Mrs. F. Myatt, Mrs. E.G. Dennis, Mrs. Robert Abel and Mrs. LeRoy White.

Mrs. A. L. Roberts, Brown Owl, and Nancy Roberts introduced and welcomed the guests.

The Guide Company presented a Thinking Day candle-lighting ceremony. Those participating were Mrs. George Colpitts, Captain of the 9th Charlotteville Guide Company, Rev. H. L. Milton, Guide Isabel Lewis and Gail Colpitts, and Brownie Connie Dennis and Lena Webster.

A group of the Ladies Auxiliary entered, with Mrs. Bruce Lewis as convener. The tables were decorated with candles, carnations, and models of Guides and Brownies created by the girls of the Guide company and Brownie pack. Rhonda MacInnis thanked the caterers.

A display of handiwork and Guide and Brownie tests was arranged as a background. The group participated in an informal singsong, and the Brownies concluded this part of the program by dramatizing the folk song "The Shepherd Maiden".

The program concluded with the Guide and Brownie Taps.

Assisting the captain and Brown Owl in preparation for the evening were Mrs. Ross Dawn, Tawny Owl, Mrs. Lloyd Gibson, Snowy Owl, Miss Karen Anne Willis, Packle, and Miss Irene Norris, Lieutenant.

MARY HAWORTH

One-Sided Love Affair Can Often Be Unfulfilling

Dear Mary Haworth: I am 38, a professional woman and a decent person. It seems a decent girl doesn't have a chance any more.

For approximately two years I have been seeing a bachelor attorney who is 45. He tells me he loves me, yet I have cause to believe he is having an affair with another woman. He doesn't know that I have knowledge of his seeing her regularly and staying until the early morning hours.

I love him very much and have told him so. He calls me at intervals of one, two or three months. Then he shows up—as at Christmas—with a gift expressing his love for me. On several such occasions I have asked if there is someone else in his life and he always denies it.

I have shown him every courtesy and consideration. I remember him with gifts for Christmas, Valentine's Day, his birthday, etc., some quite expensive, because I do sincerely love him. But he has given me little in return, though I don't expect much; just a phone call as a token of his interest in my welfare.

I see him at church, but recently I switched to a different Sunday service, thinking of trying to forget him; but that is difficult when you truly love someone. I can't figure him out. Should I forget him? Should I mention the other woman? If he calls again, should I refuse to see him?

As I say, I love him; but I want a responsible love partner. Recently I doubt his love for me and feel suspicious of his whereabouts. What is your advice?—R.S.

Dear R.S.: "Blessed are they who expect nothing, for they shall not be disappointed," some wag has said. This seems to sum up your one-sided love life and hard times in respect to the bachelor attorney.

I think you should forget him. Begin the weaning process by realizing that your attachment is more a matter of heart-hungry self-deception than it is real love.

It is a symptomatic sort of fixation, born of your habitual loneliness, social isolation and crying need to establish a sentimental alliance with somebody. You haven't got such a relationship with him. You have only the illusion of it— which you keep primed, so to speak, by clinging to and magnifying memories of crusts of attention he tosses your way at intervals of one, two or three months.

If it were your good fortune to be surrounded and courted by sympathetic friends whose companionship banished loneliness, you wouldn't rate this bachelor worth a moment's heart-ache.

Essentially your problem has to do with social maladjustment. It seems due to handicapping emotional patterns probably ingrained by family example, you are leading a self-defeating existence. You need first-hand psychological or analytical re-education of your unconscious attitudes, to put you on the beam of more abundant living.

Meanwhile, don't mention the other woman to the bachelor. Actually his sketchy attentions to you don't afford warrant for you to quit him about his other activities. As you aren't engaged, he is no more than a friend; and as such, he is accountable to his conscience, not to your expectation, on the score of how he spends his time.—M.H.

Dear Mary Haworth: I am a Protestant. For a while my family and I attended an independent, separated church of a certain denomination. But this branch considers sinful anything done for personal amusement—dancing, movies, TV-watching, etc.

I know the Bible tells Christians to separate themselves from the world and worldliness, but is it wrong ever to enjoy oneself without feeling guilty? I don't mean getting drunk and raising the roof; just occasional card games or respectable dances.

I respect this church for its firm beliefs but don't go along with all it believes. Will you set me straight? I don't seem to know anything, any more.—J.L.

Dear J.L.: Vital church membership presupposes understanding acceptance of and willing obedience to, that church's rules for safeguarding its flock. But a man's conscience deserves a hearing; and your searching second thoughts call for a heart-to-heart talk with your pastor or a possibly higher ecclesiastical authority.—M.H.

ELLEN'S DIARY

February Strolls Along Frosty, Glistening Path

On silver shoes, February strolls tonight on paths that glisten frostily, whereas the moonlight falls on the yards, and the fields, and descending to the stream, which in these midwinter days is caught here and there by ice.... But if you stop on the bridge of our lane, or there where the road follows close to the stream, coming there preferably on foot, as we have so often when strolling with James, you may hear it now as it croons its winter tune. A quiet little air it sings as it curves and ripples and flows down toward the mill and dam below. Numberless times in this season when homing with James from a visit at this or that house of this Road we have paused to hear its music fading in softly with the wide white peace of the winter-night.

The spring tune of the stream James most enjoys. When the peepers are into their piping, giving out their full volume of music and then suddenly observing a silence, before picking up the lost air again. And there is a merry tone in the stream's ripple, and there is fragrance then of the earth fresh-stirred. And worries of the stable-kind have come once more to the pastures. Spring to him is so many things: those and all the little things of it—the sights and sounds, the new greens, the rose in the maples, the beat of a lambkin, the song of a robin, sacks of grain along a headland, and the pattern of the sowing again on the fields.

For it is the little things that set the seasons in mind. What is a season but a composite of all that is remembered of it?—"Sometimes" one reflects on a wider and more inclusive note, "when I consider what tremendous consequences have come from the little things—maybe a smile from a stranger you have met on your way, a poem, a blossoming tree, a bird singing near your window, a child's face smiling up at Mother, an early fall-sunset, the handclasp of a friend, sunlight on sparkling glass, a favorite song, a compliment, falling leaves, a letter, a rainbow—I think there are no little things!"

"It keeps cold. But it's great weather, we're having" a farmer who came by this evening commented.

"Clean" James smiled. "No trouble with drifts!"

"It's not like some Februaries," we said.

"No indeed!" the visitor offered. "February mostly brings a goodly share of snow."

"Why, I can mind, dear, dear the deep cuttings there would be in the yards and on the roads" James remembered.

"But we mustn't be too optimistic about it—we're not 'out of the woods yet'" we chuckled.

But almost "fresh out" of this day we are. And as someone has queried "whatever would we do without tomorrow? The past, though usually nice to remember is over and done with. The present is always tugging at us. But tomorrow, that is the dreamer's paradise. Everything is possible with tomorrow; a dream too foolish, no goal too high!"

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good-night.

WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

Pot Luck Supper Is Held By Clinton WI Members

A pot luck supper for the members and their husbands started off an interesting and informative evening for the Clinton Women's Institute on Monday, February 5, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Pickering. Next came the Lady's Night Farm Forum Broadcast on the radio, after which a discussion took place and reports were filed out.

Following the broadcast and discussion, the president, Mrs. James E. MacKay opened the regular monthly meeting with the members singing, "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," and the Mary Stewart Collect.

Ten members responded to call by paying 25 cents for the March of Dimes. One visitor was present. The secretary, Mrs. Wilfred Pickering read the minutes of the January meeting. It was decided to buy another case of soup for the school children. The Red Cross convener distributed more work and some was passed in. Copies of the Women's Institute News were distributed to the members. A "thank you" note was received. $1.00 was voted for the "Home Economics Scholarship Fund".

A paper on Home Economics was read by Mrs. Bruce Clark. The March meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Leslie Pagnier, roll call to be answered with a joke. A paper on Education will be given by the teacher, Mrs. Duncan Picketts.

GLEN VALLEY W.I.

Mrs. Alban MacDowell was hostess to the members of the Glen Valley Women's Institute on February 7. Roll call was answered by 13 members with Mrs. Basil Matthews; press secretary, Mrs. F. J. Carpenter.

A vote of thanks, moved by Mrs. Basil Matthews, was extended to the retiring president, Mrs. Wilkie, who has held office for the past ten years. In her reply Mrs. Wilkie reviewed accomplishments of the organization during these years.

Plans for an Easter Tea were discussed and further preparations will be made at the next meeting.

During the social hour a contest provided by Mrs. Erskine Clark was enjoyed and refreshments were served by the hostess.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. F. J. Carpenter with Mrs. Basil Matthews as devotional leader.

ST. THERESA'S C.W.I.

The regular monthly meeting of the St. Theresa's sub-division of the C.W.I. was held recently at the home of Mrs. Peter McKenna. The spiritual director, opened the meeting with a prayer.

The secretary, Mrs. Reginald MacDonald read the minutes of the previous meeting and the correspondence was dealt with, and committee reports were heard. It was decided to take up another collection for "More Rosaries for Chile".

A number of members reported that they had quilts ready for social welfare. They are to be passed in to Mrs. Thomas Curran.

Following the meeting lunch was served by the hostess and the spiritual director showed a number of films.

SOUTH LAKE W.I.

Mrs. Elmer Fraser entertained the February meeting of South Lake Women's Institute which was attended by eight members.

Correspondence was read and dealt with, including a very gracious letter received from the Superintendent of an orphanage in Korea, thanking us for our help and telling about the work and need in that country.

It was voted we give $3.00 to March of Dimes and $5.00 to W.S.C. The secretary was asked

Walter P. DeSilva Addresses P.E.I. Home Economics Club

The Prince Edward Island Home Economics Association had Mr. Walter P. DeSilva, provincial town planner, as guest speaker for their February meeting.

In his address, Mr. DeSilva told the members of the early development of town planning and read them the commendation of Capt. Samuel Holland concerning the early laying out of the city of Charlottetown.

He noted that much basic research was necessary before developing plans for a locality and that public interest would do much to assist implementation of these plans. Where a town is allowed to expand without previous planning, Mr. DeSilva said, and where public open space is taken for building there will result undesirable crowding leading to poor living conditions and unattractive surroundings.

He also noted that much improvement can be made in rural areas by the removal of crude advertising signs.

Mr. DeSilva praised the work of the Rural Beautification Society in improving the appearance of rural areas in the province and pointed out that an attractive countryside with good, well-marked roads is an aid to the tourist industry.

In conclusion, it was noted that planning is needed to prevent misuse of land in order to accord an orderly and aesthetic growth in a community.

Following his address, Mr. DeSilva, was thanked by Rev. Mother Loyola, president of the association.

Margate UCW Hold Meeting

KENSINGTON — At the first general meeting of the newly organized Margate United Church Women, the president, Mrs. Wilfred Pickering, thanked the group for placing confidence in her, by electing her president. She urged "that we put 'must' into our new organization. Jesus did this while he laboured here on earth. He said 'I must needs go to Jerusalem' and 'I must work the works of Him that sent me'. If we put 'must' into our work it will go forward with success.

Mrs. John Johnson conducted the opening worship service on the theme "Handicaps," and led the group in prayer and meditation. The hymn "Blessed Assurance" was sung. The meeting was held in the church vestry on Tuesday evening, February 6.

The secretary, Mrs. Arthur Profit was asked to read the Purpose and the Function of the Women taken from the Constitution By-Laws Handbook. She concluded with the words of Dr. Sydney Gilchrist, "If there are enough who care, who believe that our Master has what the world needs, who are so sure in their own lives of the wonders that He has wrought for them, whatever the mechanics of the church organization may be, the missionary witness, work and sacrificial outpouring of love and material goods, must continue and increase."

Twenty-four members answered roll call.

A motion was passed that the United Church Women envelops be used for the givings of this group. A motion that memorial cards be given, rather than flowers, at the time of bereavement, was carried. It was decided that all the members act as a visiting committee to the sick. Eight o'clock was the time set for the meetings to be held on the first Tuesday of each month. A motion was passed that the new organization here, be called "Margate United Church Women". Roll call for next meeting will be answered with a verse of scripture containing the word "light". It was unfortunate due to power failure, that the film, "Beyond the Bell", procured by Mrs. Elliott, could not be shown. The meeting closed with a hymn and benediction.
