Associated Press photographer Horst Faas, 32, reads that he has been awarded the Pulitzer prize for his dramatic pictures of the war in Viet Nam. Faas was in the AP Bureau in Frankfurt, West Germany Monday night when he learned he had won the prize. A native of Germany, he is on his way back to Saigon. (AP Wirephoto cable from Frankfurt)

Soviet Union Authority Bids For More Trade With Can.

OTTAWA (CP)—Even though Canada and Russia are competitors in many export commodities, a Soviet Union trade authority says the two countries should work towards expanding mutual trade.

getting it back by selling their goods in Canada. "The Soviet Union produces, and Canada is known to import, a variety of goods. That is why the range of goods purchased by Canadian firms in the USSR could be expanded considerably."

"The extension of such information is probably the task of both sides," says the professor of foreign trade at Moscow's institute of international relations. The fact the two countries have largely similar economies and are big exporters of similar goods on world markets "does not rule out the possibility of developing mutual trade."

Husband Of Year Suggested

OTTAWA (CP)—The husband of the Canadian Mother of the year almost stole the show when he called at Government House with his wife. "Are you the father of the year?" Mme. Georges P. Vanier asked handsome Pieter van der Breggen of Weyburn, Sask. When he said shyly he wasn't the governor-general's wife replied: "Well, I think there ought to be one."

Prof. Dymulien writes that the USSR exports mining and drilling equipment, metal and wood - working machine tools, welding equipment and hoisting mechanisms, which Canada buys from other countries abroad.

Exports Equipment. In turn, the Soviet Union would readily buy many machines and items of equipment manufactured in Canada, such as equipment for the mining, paper and pulp, food and other industries.

He writes that Soviet economists expect a more than four-fold increase in Russian foreign trade in the next 20 years. In 1960-63, Canadian purchases in the Soviet Union were about one-fifteenth Russian purchases from Canada.

Bureau of statistics trade figures show Canadian exports in 1964 totalling $315,942,000, including an exceptional sale of over $300,000,000 worth of wheat. Other main exports were sulphur, tobacco, purebred cattle, abrasive wheels and stones, and mining, oil, and gas machinery parts.

She also chatted with Mrs. John Diefenbaker, wife of the Conservative leader, about the need for children to become international in their interests, and to learn as many languages as possible.
