
THIS FLAG WON'T FLY

B. C. Lions Norm Fieldgate and Bob Swift (35) hold the proposed Canadian flag which the club said it would fly Tuesday at Empire Stadium in Vancouver during a CFL game between B.C. and Ottawa. The club said it wanted people to see what the flag looked like, but stadium owners, the Pacific National Exhibition, said the flag couldn't fly because it might involve the PNE in politics. Scandinavia Said Impressive Minister Suggests Industry

Natural Resources Minister Leo Rossiter, back from a recent tour of Norway, Sweden, Denmark and a visit to Switzerland with a group of Canadian businessmen, said he was impressed by the wide diversification of small industry in Scandinavian countries.

Mr. Rossiter, who made the trip on a Canadian-Scandinavian Industrial Foundation award, said even small towns had many small businesses such as furniture, plastics, textiles and mattress making and potato alcohol and flour plants.

He suggested a plant such as one which produces potato alcohol and flour and uses up to 2,500 carloads of potatoes per year, could be profitable in this province. Some of the flour is exported to Canada, he pointed out.

The minister said he felt small industry could be successful here as in Scandinavian countries, where transportation facilities are not always good.

The group also visited a number of fish and farm product processing plants, and in Switzerland, visited the office of Findus International, the firm that will distribute processed foods from Gulf Garden Foods Limited in Georgetown.

'Fit As A Fiddle' Charmer Hits 100th At Wellington

By ALAN C. HOLMAN
S'side Bureau, The Guardian

WELLINGTON — Back in 1864, just seven days after Sir John A. Macdonald and his compatriots from Canada arrived in Charlottetown, Mrs. Madeline Gallant was born on a farm on the Line Road, near Egmont Bay. Yesterday Mrs. Gallant celebrated her 100th birthday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Faustin Richard, Wellington, where she now lives.

Mrs. Gallant did not marry until she was 27 years old when she took Laurent A. Arsenault, a widower with eight children, as her first husband. They were married in 1891 and from that union there were nine children, seven of whom are still living and they were all in Wellington for the big birthday party.

Five of Mrs. Gallant's children are living in the United States. They are: Cyrus, in Mexico, Maine; Mrs. Stanley Richard (Bertha) Islington, Mass.; Leo, Allston, Mass.; Mrs. Alfred Arsenault, Wakefield, Mass., and Aleide, Mansfield, Mass. In addition there are two living in Wellington, Mrs. William Maddix (Exeline), who is the oldest at a youthful 72 and Mrs. Faustin Richard (Anita), with whom Mrs. Gallant lives.

Mrs. Gallant has besides her own seven children, 21 grandchildren and 37 great-grandchildren.

REMARRIED IN 1921

After the death of her first husband Mrs. Gallant remarried in 1921 to Prosper Gallant of Abrams Village. He died in 1932 and she came and lived with her daughter in Wellington at that time.

Between the time of her first husband's death and her remarriage she lived for a time with her son Cyrus in Maine.

Mrs. Gallant's first husband was a school teacher at Urbanville and was paid only $25 a month. In order to make ends meet, the then Mrs. Arsenault used to weave all the family's clothing herself. Also she did weaving for her neighbors at eight cents a yard and she was able to weave about 15 yards a day.

She also processed raw flax into cloth and made dresses and other articles of clothing for her family on her loom. One of the happy occasions remembered by her family is playing around an outdoor fire used for drying the raw flax.

NEVER SERIOUSLY ILL

Mrs. Gallant, never seriously ill in her life, is still fit as a fiddle and right as rain. She still sews occasionally and is an avid Auction 45 player. She also watches tv, though she objects to the love scenes.

Mrs. Gallant's only schooling was a brief three weeks, but her first husband taught her to read. She still eats very well, especially her favorite foods, french fried potatoes and puffed rice. Her only concession to old age is a slight loss of hearing.

There were many members of her family and numerous friends who called on the centenarian yesterday to wish her well and much luck for the years to come.

Coin Collectors Hold First Fall Meeting

The first fall meeting of the Prince Edward Island Numismatic Association was held at the Y.M.C.A. in Charlottetown last evening.

Consideration was given to an agenda for regular fall meetings to be held on the first Tuesday of each month.

The meeting felt that coin collecting is definitely catching on in the Charlottetown area as evidenced by the enthusiasm shown by the members present.

Many long-time collectors in the Charlottetown area are just becoming acquainted with each other as coin collectors through the auspices of the club, it was stated.

As a result of these meetings, a large and varied selection of coins and tokens is providing interesting and educational information to the members, they agreed

The meeting went on record as favoring the organization of a coin display to be held at some advantageous location within the city to acquaint the public with the aspects of this hobby.

Definite consideration is being given to holding an auction of duplicate coins at the next regular meeting.

The remaining four rescues were minor ones.

Safety measures used by the lifeguards warded off numerous accidents. The lifeguards also took time out to teach 200 persons in swimming classes, and gave first-aid treatment to 176 persons.

terests of national unity. Any pipsqueak can cling subbornly to a position long after it's untenable."

Just before Mr. Douglas spoke, the division bells rang for 85 minutes before a roll-call could start on a motion that would adjourn the flag debate, at least temporarily.

ATTITUDE INDICATED

Mr. Douglas said the vote clearly indicated the attitude of the House toward the prolonged flag debate, and he placed most of the blame on the Conservative party.

The Conservatives, he said, seem determined to keep Parliament from reaching a decision. He said most of the speakers have been Conservatives, and while they plead with members of other parties to speak, the moment such members rise they are heckled by the Conservatives.

"There seems to be a weakness in one's defence when one has to keep others from presenting their views."

He said there were only three ways out of the present impasse —an election, closure of debate or the formation of a committee. An election could split confederation and closure would be unthinkable. But a committee would be a reasonable solution.

The NDP leader suggested a committee of 15 members, seven Liberals, five Conservatives and one from each of the smaller parties. It would report within 60 days and party leaders would decide on a time limit for the subsequent parliamentary debate.

At earlier meetings of the party leaders, Mr. Pearson suggested a three-weeks time limit on the committee's work. Or Diefenbaker suggested three months. Mr. Pearson wanted a time limit placed on the debate in advance. Mr. Diefenbaker would accept that only if the committee's report was 80 - 90 per cent unanimous.

Mr Douglas said his suggestions are closer to Mr. Diefenbaker's position than Mr. Pearson's, but "it think the prime minister . . . can and will demonstrate the kind of stature necessary. . . ."

P.M. IN HIS SEAT

Mr. Pearson was in his seat during Mr. Douglas' speech. Mr. Diefenbaker had to leave for a trip to Fredericton.

Dog Ordered Destroyed

A complaint brought by Robert McCannell against James Reginald Dunn, an elderly Mount Stewart farmer, was heard in a special sitting of magistrate's court last night, with James B. Johnston, QC, presiding.

A black and white dog belonging to Dunn allegedly bit the 13-year old Mount Stewart boy nearly two months ago. McCannell advised the dog's owner in a letter under the Dog Act that he wanted the dog destroyed. Prior to the hearing last night Dunn had pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Seven witnesses were called during the hearing. The Crown, represented by prosecutor Alan K. Scales, called four: Dr. George Shepherd, who examined the boy; Robert McCannell, the complainant; Joseph Hector MacDonald of Mount Stewart who apparently saw the incident; and investigating RCMP Cst. Charles M. Clarke.

Dunn, his 17-year old daughter Jean Anne, and Daniel Jerome O'Connell, a friend of the family, appeared for the defense.

According to the magistrate's verdict, the dog must be destroyed within three days.

St. Dunstan's Requires More Accommodations

About 75 to 100 St. Dunstan's University students require accommodations in the Charlottetown area, registrar Michael Hennessey said yesterday.

Around 550 students are expected to set a record enrollment at SDU this year. Freshmen students registered Monday and Tuesday and the remaining students register Thursday, Sept. 17. Classes begin Sept. 18.

Mr. Hennessey has asked assistance from citizens who have room for students in their homes. He said those who called in respone to a recent newspaper advertisement need not call again.

Goldwater Charges LBJ With Tax-Cut Gimmickry

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Senator Barry Goldwater accused President Johnson Tuesday night of "impulsive, massive, politically - motivated tax - cut gimmickry," and offered his own plan for a 25-per-cent income tax reduction spread over a five-year period.

The Republican candidate for president said a Goldwater administration could cut taxes, balance the budget and reduce the national debt.

Goldwater spoke here at the end of his first full day of California campaigning. Earlier in the day he was heckled by Negroes while speaking outside a hotel in San Diego. During the same speech, a steel fire escape on the hotel suddenly lowered narrowly missing onlookers.

In his address here, Goldwater said he would use the growing revenues of an expanding economy to finance a tax cut and keep the federal budget in the black.

More than 4,000 persons turned out for Goldwater's speech in San Diego. The crowd was overwhelmingly pro Goldwater and shouted down the Negroes who heckled the Arizona senator.

A few persons screamed when the hotel fire escape came down.

Police said two 16-year-old boys opened a fire door that automatically touched off an alarm and lowered the fire escape. The boys said they were trying to get a better view of Goldwater.
