By CAROLYN WILLET Canadian Press Staff Writer OTTAWA (CP) — Popcorn bags rattling and the children's theatre group of Ottawa steps upon the stage.

Youthful audiences tilt on the edge of their seats as the graceful actors presents the ageless story of make-believe and fairy land. Skilled in presentation of children's plays to children, the performers usually present three different plays each year, doing each play at least three times to accommodate young theatregoers in various sections of the city.

They've been doing it for eight years now. In the 1956 season more than 3,200 children—mostly under 12—attended Children's Theatre presentations, paying 25 cents for a seat.

The venture is an off-spring of the Ottawa Little Theatre. Although it is an amateur group, the Little Theatre helps bear the cost of production because it feels the program is worth while. An active women's committee headed by Mrs. J. K. Murray looks after ticket sales and poster advertising.

COLORFUL PRODUCTIONS

The current season opened recently with three performances of The Glass Slipper, a version of the Cinderella story with music. A ballroom number, using eight dancers from Ottawa's Classical Ballet Studio, was included for the first time in the group's productions.

An excited audience revelled in the play's characters with their exaggerated actions and colorful costumes.

"We try for color and lots of movement," explained director-actor Bill Glen.

A minimum of dialogue, carefully selected to be easily understood, is also important, said the 22-year-old director in an interview.

He began directing the plays three years ago, and came up through the ranks as a student actor and helper.

An energetic young man who directs a drama school here, Mr. Glen this season is also directing or helping to produce about 10 amateur theatrical productions in the capital.

Robin Hood is the next production slated for the Children's Theatre. The season ends with performances of Peter Pan.

Say Princess Should Have Been On Best Dressed List

LONDON (Reuters)—Two British newspapers insist that Princess Margaret should have placed high up in the New York Express Institute's 1957 list of best-dressed women.

The princess, second in 1956, was dropped to ninth place in the list released Wednesday.

In an article headlined, "Who Do They Think They Are?" the Daily Mail says the "fatuous" listings by the "self-appointed pontifical body" are "a lot of nonsense."

The whole world, it adds, admired the cotton dresses the princess wore on her Nigerian tour last year—"but the institute does not take cotton into account."

It also argues that the judges had rarely seen the princess, Margaret, or any of the leading figures in their list—during the last year.

MOST GLAMOROUS

"The Daily Sketch" unhesitatingly selects the princess as the most glamorous and best-dressed girl in the world.

But the News-Chronicle says that perhaps the princess has ignored the importance of simplicity in dress.

"She has bought chic tailored suits that show her at her most elegant—but forgotten to throw away the blouse and pearls that clutter the neckline."

"She has turned up at garden parties in draped silk and chiffon dresses—but forgotten that they are sufficient unto themselves and cannot take diamond brooches and fancy shoes, bracelets, pearls and frilly hats."

Top positions in the annual fashion poll were taken by Boston-born Mrs. William Paley, who has held first place for several years, the Duchess of Windsor, another perennial favorite who last year tied with Princess Margaret, and Princess Grace of Monaco.

The closing exercises of Burton School was held on Thursday afternoon, Dec. 20. A large number of parents were present to enjoy the well prepared Christmas program presented by the pupils. At the appointed time Santa arrived to present the children with gifts from a well laden tree. # Drama Festival Adjudicator Submitted Tape Recording

By JACK VAN DUSEN Canadian Press Staff Writer OTTAWA (CP) — In October, 1956, the Earl of Bessborough, then governor-general of Canada, called a meeting at Ottawa of experts from across the country to discuss live theatre.

The result was the first Dominion Drama Festival, held here in April, 1957.

Since then amateurs and professionals have competed annually in regional festivals from St. John's, Nfld., to Vancouver for the right to enter the national finals.

This year's finals will be held in Edmonton Jan. 20-25. The regional festivals begin on Toronto Jan. 6.

IN TWO LANGUAGES

The festival covers a wider territory than any other in the world and also is unique in its bilingual character. In both French and English are judged by the same adjudicator on the same merits.

The festival is proud of its two-language heritage and this year's adjudicator, Cecil Bellamy, British actor and producer, submitted a tape recording of his voice speaking both languages to prove he could do so fluently.

It is unusual in many other ways.

For example, its 50 honorary members hold that position only because they agree to donate $1,500 annually to promoting the theatre in Canada.

All executives travel at their own expense. The only paid officials are national director Richard MacDonald and his secretary, who operate a small permanent office in Ottawa.

PAID ADJUDICATORS

Adjudicators are also paid. Mr. Bellamy will receive $1,500 and expenses for the three months he's in Canada. His passage to and from Canada is paid.

The adjudicator of the finals, Robert Speaight, British actor-director, who adjudicated the finals and the regional festivals at different times in the past, will receive $500 expenses.

The festival also has the distinction of being under the patronage of the governor-general and being sponsored by a liquor manufacturing firm—a situation which caused quite a furor in art circles last year.

Governor-General Massey is understood to have told festival president David J. Ongley, a Toronto lawyer, to either resign or retract a letter he had sent out urging support of the distillery's products, or Mr. Massey would withdraw his patronage.

Mr. Ongley ended the controversy when he sent out a second letter to clear up the "misunderstanding."

Both letters, sent to some 3,000 persons across the country, were written on festival letterheads which bear the name of the governor-general.

1957 DATES

Thirteen regional drama festivals will be held this year. The schedule: Central Ontario, Toronto, Jan. 8-12; eastern Ontario, Ottawa, Jan. 17-19; western Ontario, Kitchener, Jan. 23-26; British Columbia, Vancouver, Jan. 27-31; Alberta, Edmonton, Feb. 6-9; Manitoba, Winnipeg, Feb. 20-23; eastern Quebec, Trois-Rivières, Feb. 26-March 3; western Quebec, Montreal, March 4-9; Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, March 12-14; Prince Edward Island, Charlottetown, March 18-20; New Brunswick, Bathurst, March 21-23; Nova Scotia, Halifax, March 25-27; Newfoundland, St. John's, April 3-6.

This will be the first year Edmonton has been the site of the Dominion finals, which until 1938 were held annually in Ottawa.

Since then they have been held six times in the capital, three times in Winnipeg, Ontario, Calgary, Saint John, Victoria, Hamilton, Regina and Sherbrooke, Que. During the Second World War, there were no regional festivals or Dominion finals from 1940 to 1948 inclusive.

ELLEN'S DIARY

New Year's Resolutions

"Gone!" Today we found this inscription written in a child's hand on successive leaves of the calendar of last year, kept intact out of respect to affairs of the farm. James had more than once come in to leaf through the pages. Sometimes with a look of concern to wish as he turned away that Mother Nature that ever-companion of the farmer, had planned some expected miracle of birth in a sty, to take place "at least not before this wind and cold moderates."

"Gone!" We turned each leaf, the act bringing many a picture to mind. We saw snow white on the hillsides and presently, heard the trickle of Spring-freed streams; watched a cloud of daffodils catch the new of the strengthening sunlight and breathed the clean scent of the land fresh-stirred; heard the blossoms of orchards and hedgerows, and the clovers lush against the hay; found the glory of the harvestmoon... and that of the hunters'. And in short dappish days saw the year wane.

And now in another year again see "the weaver Winter" set her quiet enchantment along the reach of valley and hill.

"Bring me a match, will you Ellen?" a farmer had come by on an evening of December smiled after a fruitless search in his pockets.

"I must have a draw or two on the old pipe. Though I do believe that I'm smoking too much of late," he added. "I guess I'll have to..."

"...make a New Year resolution," we suggested brightly.

"Well, it wouldn't be a bad idea. But" he chuckled "I guess I'll leave that until the New Year is here."

"This year of 1957, I resolve to..."

"Now the promises are being heard, the subject matter varied widely, but relevant usually to the making over of self that old habit we shall break, this new virtue we will court. And some will be honored forever it may be, while others are only brittlely made."

"I resolve to appreciate more the things I am now apt to take for granted."

"To love the fine people about me, to praise where it is due, to be tolerant and patient and kind to the weaker of spirit, to rejoice in good and to remember to forget, for there is much peace of mind in that."

And we stepping away with James and the family into the mist which veil "the untired way," saying a long farewell to the old year, "forgetting the things which are before," hail the new as a kindly friend, with every hope and much faith in its ultimate good.

"O good New Year!" we clasp, this warm shut hand of thine, Loosing forever, with half sigh, half grasp, That which from ours falls like dead fingers' twine. Aye, whether fierce its grasp, Has been or gentle, having been, we know, we know, we know, That it was blessed: let the Old Year go."

"Friend, come thou like a friend; And whether bright thy face, Or dim with clouds we cannot comprehend, We'll hold our patient hands, each in his place, And toward thee to the end, Knowing thou leadest onward to those spheres Where there are neither days nor months nor years."

Until tomorrow — —Diary— Good-night....

Work For Women Of Any Age Now

By CAROLYN WILLET Canadian Press Staff Writer OTTAWA (CP) — Grandmother, once pictured as the little lady decked in lavender and lace, today is more often a chic woman who steps into an office wearing a trim business suit.

Today, women go to work at any age, says Marion Royce, director of the women's bureau of the federal labor department.

Suitable employment, job training and counseling are important considerations in this new pattern of living.

Four Toronto women, experts who deal with the older working woman, have discussed these problems. The women's bureau compiled their views in a booklet titled Women Go to Work at Any Age. It is filled with thoughtful and reassuring views on the part of older women can play in Canada's labor force.

MORAL SUPPORT

Miss Royce said one-fifth of Canada's working women are 45 or older. Many women return to work after spending years as homemakers, others must change jobs when company policies enforce retirement at a fixed age.

Usually an older woman seeking work meets a vague but underlying prejudice against older workers, Miss Royce said. Often at this time, she needs moral support and perhaps additional training.

Useful activity is a "wonder drug for the older citizen," said Mrs. A. C. Kenny, national personnel director of a large insurance company.

Her company finds middle-aged and older women can learn new skills. But she suggested that mature women seeking work should themselves attempt to increase their labor skills.

Fear and anxiety about the unknown often confront an older woman faced with learning new skills, said Dr. Margery King, director of the Toronto branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association.

TRAINING IMPORTANT

"The older person... is quite capable of learning but, because she lacks practice in dealing with unknown situations, she may take longer to learn and may be quite insecure during the learning process."

Dr. King suggested older persons start doing different things now to develop a feeling of security to help meet an unknown future.

Employment counselor Margaret McIrvine stressed the importance of helping persons young or old to relate their training and experience interests and abilities to job requirements and occupational trends.

Wissen McIrvine, co-ordinator of women's employment for the unemployment insurance commission's Ontario region, said job placement should be the end result of successful employment counseling.

Retirement should be approached positively, in terms of an adjustment, said Helen Monkhouse, a medical-social worker at Sunnybrook Veterans Hospital in Toronto.

The emphasis should be on "retirement to, rather than from" present work, she said.

Was With Diesels From 'Way Back'

MONCTON (CP) — After 30 years of nursing "doodle - bugs," "skunks" and "peanuts," Ernest J. Feasey has retired from Canadian National Railways.

He is neither entomologist, zoologist nor horticulturist, but rather a diesel expert—CNR's general supervisor of diesel equipment, and the first diesel-electric passenger cars to appear in Canada in 1926.

Mr. Feasey came from England as a representative of the Wm. Beardmore Co., English diesel builders, to wet-nurse the Canadian cars.

Since then he has seen the development of diesel locomotives that today haul crack trains.

When Mr. Feasey became a full-fledged CNR employee in 1930, old-time railroaders scoffed at anyone associated with "doodle - bugs."

Accustomed to nothing but steam power, they revile the cry of "get a horse" whenever a diesel broke down.

But American electric-motor and gasoline - engine manufacturers watched the Canadian tests closely and when they decided to start building diesel locomotives, Mr. Feasey played an important part in influencing their decision.

In 1948, he was appointed chief inspector of diesel equipment for the CNR and in 1952 became general supervisor, handling maintenance and repair of 981 diesel units.

On his retirement in Montreal, Mr. Feasey was given a table lamp, with a base of the first three CNR diesels. The shade pictures the locomotives in color.
