The University of Prince Edward Island is being sued after an employee was injured following a University staff party last year.

Roy Lannigan, a former employee of the University, has filed a suit which claims for damages against the University after he was struck by a car last December. Mr. Lannigan's claim states that on December 21, 1990 at a staff Christmas party, he was served liquor contrary to the Liquor Control Act of PEI and that this caused and allowed him to become intoxicated to a point where his judgement was impaired and he was struck by a car while crossing the street.

It goes on to state that the University is negligent having served liquor to an intoxicated person, failed to have an adequate trained bartender to

Dear Editor,

This past Wednesday, I found myself with some free time, and decided to put a couple of loads through the wash. So off I went to the laundromat with books and dirty clothes. While studying and waiting for my second load to finish, I spotted this little bear rolling around in my clothes, laughing and diving all through my clean gitch. "Hi, I'm Snuggles," he said. So I went and grabbed a mallet and brained the little idget. Soft clothes is one thing, but a furry bum through my clean rayon is another!

Sincerely,

Chris Elson

dispense the liquor, failed to arrange for safe transportation for intoxicated people, failed to monitor the degree of intoxication of the people at the party, and allowed intoxicated people to leave the party.

After Mr. Lannigan left the party, he was struck by a car driven by Ms. Stephane Drake, who is also named in the suit, at the corner of Belvedere Avenue and Maple Avenue in Sherwood while he was trying to cross the road. Mr. Lannigan received head injuries, multiple leg fractures, a dislocated shoulder along with other minor cuts and scrapes. The claim states that Mr. Lannigan suffered pain, loss of income, and loss of earning potential.

The suit was filed at the courthouse on November 21, 1991 and the University has 20 days after being notified by the sheriff to reply. The University has as yet given no reply to the suit.

Dear Art Director of the Rugby Team:

This is in response to your tasteless pub advertisements. I am certain of you dig down into your creative spirit you could find a more intelligent way of drawing a crowd to your social event.

The way you depict social issues such as AIDS, Prostitution, and Sexism is a sign of your ignorance and insensitivity. Your slogans "Don't worry your results will be HIV negative," "Our hookers will be glad to serve you," "Bring you bikini briefs," don't cut it in the 1990's. These are insults to students, faculty and staff of U.P.E.I. and will not be tolerated.

Remember. respect for others draws a bigger crowd.
