

AUTHENTIC "PROP" FOR PLAY

A charming addition to the setting of tonight's production of "I Remember Mama" at the Confederation Theatre is this status symbol of a romantic earlier era... the wicker pram. Once upon a time it boasted an up-shade with ruffles of satin and lace, and upholstery of ivory corduroy, and its be-ribboned occupant was little Agnes Flynn (daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Flynn of Charlottetown), now the wife of Lieutenant Governor W.J. MacDonald. Mrs. MacDonald's seven children were but a fraction of the many babies wheeled to church on Sunday morning by proud parents. It's interesting to note the pram, admired here by Sherry Finley who plays Mama's sister, Trina, is convertible into a stroller, an early version of today's baby carriage.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Paths Must Be Uncovered After The Snowy Drifts

"This is a sort of a lonesome wind" we observed at break-fasting, noting the sound of its passing. There's the west in it" James commented. "See the sun is breaking through!" Some-what palely it parted the cloud-cover, to brighten the all white about. What miracles of day these are: the sunrise and sunset. Ever new and different. And yet so commonplace we sometimes in our busyness, neglect to give either more than a passing glance.

What charms are to be found in what we may consider to be commonplace, even in the play of the sunlight over the fields... It is said that "Claude Monet, the great French painter, used to set off at daybreak with his luncheon basket and his paints and canvases. He would seat himself before a haystack, just a common haystack in a field and begin to paint. All day long he would paint, covering canvas after canvas till at last it grew too dark to see. Twelve pictures, and all of the same haystack! But what an infinite variety of color as the hours passed, the sun rose and sank again, and the light played upon the stack from every angle and in every degree of intensity." Lost paths must be uncovered this morning, in the wake of last night's snowfall and today's restless drifts. Certain roadways must be cleared. Somewhat isolated we are at Alderlea at present, after a day or more of less drifting snow which allowed no opened road, and in consequence no mail, no school. How casually we accept all these things in more sum- mery days, unmindful of all the privi-leges of then, not the least of which is to leave the imprint of our shoes lightly on the good earth.

The day's wind retired up the creek this evening, on the wings of the pair of wild ducks that went to shelter in some flimsy fastness there... We noticed at the time, that Peter's rope swing in the white birch was caught in a drift, and above it the robin's nest was forlorn.

"Make us a pot of fudge, Ellen" James suggested with a twinkle this evening, when he followed Mack outdoors to join the other farmer at ends of the choring.

"It would be good" Mack agreed. "You would at least have no scarcity of snow to test it on!" he added with a grin.

The extent of choring, one sees and hears of it: "Did you feed those cows up in the pole-barn? What about the flippers? Did they get water And the

Baptist Church Hears Talk On Africa

An interesting evening was spent recently in the Baptist Church at Central Bedeque, when Rev. Donald M. Quigg, B.A., B.D., field secretary of the Canadian Bible Society gave an illustrated lecture on Africa. Mr. Quigg reported that communists are sending tons of literature, and are spending one and a half billion dollars a year on reading material for the African people, who are fast becoming literate.

A film "Freedom In Their Souls" which was taken a year ago in Africa showed missionaries at work in the foreign field and also an artist carving an image of a man out of a block of wood.

UCW Speaker Conducts Study On Bible

Rev. D. Hamilton conducted a study on "Understanding the Bible" at the February meeting of the Brae UCW, held at the home of Mrs. Fred MacLeod. A meditation stating that the Word of God dwelling in man causes the individual to be alive with His life, was read by worship leader, Mrs. Robert Oulton.

In the absence of both president and vice-president, Mrs. Fred MacLeod presided, and roll call was answered with a donation of get-well cards.

The chairman of committees reported activities during the past month and an announcement was made concerning Women's World Day of Prayer service to be held at O'Leary Baptist Church on March 5th.

Next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Nell MacKay, when the roll call will be answered with a verse of scripture containing the word "Cross". The worship leader will be Mrs. Alice MacPadyen and hostesses will be Mrs. Eriss MacLeod, Mrs. Preston MacKinnon, Mrs. Roy Oulton and Mrs. Lorrie MacNevin.

During the study period, Mr. Hamilton used a flip-chart and presented the following questions for discussion: Is all scripture of equal inspiration? What is the Word of God? Is the Bible a book of dictation or a book of inspiration and lastly why do you think Jesus Himself did not write a book similar to the Bible.

Following a very interesting discussion period, Rev. Hamilton closed the meeting with prayer.

IDA BAILEY ALLEN

Chocolates And Raisins Appetite-Raising Treat

INVARIABLY included in most any box of excellent, mixed chocolate candies is the all-time favorite cluster of rich chocolate - raisin "drops," one of the most delectable chocolate nibbles one can enjoy, especially with a demi-tasse.

Today's dessert was inspired by this favorite chocolate-raisin combination. You might even stir in 1-3 c. of chopped toasted filberts, if that's your pleasure. Measurements level; recipes for 6

ORANGE-GLAZED BAKED HAM
Bake 10-12 lb. whole smoked ham, bone in, uncovered, at 325 degrees F. for 20 min. to the lb., or until a meat thermometer registers internal temperature of 165 degrees F.

While ham is baking, make glaze by combining and simmering together for 5 min. 1 tbsp. grated orange rind, 1/4 c. fresh can slightly chilled large Spanish sardines; sprinkle sparingly with herb vinegar. Garnish sardines with strips of pimiento and/or halved small cherry tomatoes and sprigs of dill or parsley.

THE CHEF GLAZES HAM
Mediterranean: is most a savory food, or is it to be classed as sweet?

"What's our Chef thinking about?" you ask. "Of course it's a savory food." Right, Madamames.

Then why is more and more sugar being advocated in cooking meat, for a sweet-sour taste?" you ask. Sometimes this is the reason, Madamames. Sometimes it is to create a so-called Oriental flavor. And when as much as 1/2 c. of brown sugar is used for glazing a ham, as has been advocated, the situation becomes ridiculous.

Besides adding "hidden" sugar calories to the menu, the fine savory taste of the ham is impaired.

May I suggest a real gourmet method for glazing a 10-12 lb. smoked ham in which only 1/2 c. sugar and 1/4 c. light corn s are used

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Use a long-handled automobile snow brush for getting under the stove or refrigerator when you wash the kitchen floor.

A small sponge on your stove serves as a handy spoon rest. When it's dirty, just squeeze through hot suds and rinse.

Use cake cooling racks as bases for stacks of stored linen. This lets air circulate, prevents mildew, stinky odors.

When washing hooded items stuff the hood with a blown-up balloon to hold it open while it dries to shape.

MARY HAWORTH

Husband's Ideas Mask Own Sex Inadequacy

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married to Jesse for 11 years and in most ways I couldn't hope for a better husband. I am 34, he is 35, and we have lovely children, ages 6 and 9.

I come from a small family, warm-hearted and close-knit. My husband's family was large, but due to circumstances he and his brothers and sisters were farm-ed-out to foster homes when he was about 12.

Fortunately for Jesse his foster-parents were good God-fearing people (of grandparent age), who gave him a good home and a conscientious upbringing. After graduation he enlisted in the Army and is making it his life work.

He is a devoted father and spends as much time as possible with the children, which isn't much recently, however, as he holds a part-time job, evenings and Saturdays, since we've been stationed in the East—to make ends meet.

He is generous with us, and frugal with himself. He doesn't gamble, drink or smoke. He accompanies us to church, takes us wherever we want to go, and always tells me to get whatever I want or need.

Now you may say: What problem could this woman possibly have? It is a certain phase of our sex life, that I just don't feel I could discuss with a clergyman or doctor, face-to-face so I am turning to you. I do love my husband and I know that sex is important to any marriage. While he says I am absolutely frigid (and maybe I am), I feel, very desperately, that his whole concept of married lovemaking is altogether wrong.

One of us has to be wrong, and I urgently need to know, for certain, whether I should try to see things his way. Or whether he is mistaken, as I feel he is. I would be terribly grateful for a straightforward reply, as I am becoming increasingly confused and upset. Sincerely,

DEAR E.V.: As a matter of discretion, I have deleted the details of your debate with your husband in the area of sex. However, on the basis of the data supplied it is correct to say that your husband is altogether wrong in the depressing dispute, even assuming that you are absolutely frigid, as he alleges. If such is your predicament, he probably is chiefly accountable at this date, inasmuch as the husband's performance, for better or worse, as lover in marriage, rather conclusively inaugurates either sex concord or sex discord, as the case may be.

Interesting Guest At WI Meeting

Mrs. Robert McCloskey was hostess for the February meeting of Hampshire WI when 17 members answered roll call with something for a fish pond.
