LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Boston Letter.

SIR,—A short time ago I promised you to write for THE EXAMINER an occasional Boston letter, and recognizing the fact that there is scarcely a family in Charlottetown but has some member or relative in this locality, employed in one or other of the numerous industries of this busy city, who naturally feel an interest in anything that concerns Boston life and work, and also the fact that you have with you in Charlottetown many who in former years made this their home, who will also, I am sure, be pleased to hear occasionally from the Boston of their great expectations at one time, even if their hopes were not altogether realized. When here I take this opportunity of redeeming my promise.

In a city such as this, there is scarcely a day but there is some exciting incident or affair of a sensational character developed, but it is not my intention in any letter I may write you, to devote much attention to matters of that kind.

The readers of THE EXAMINER become acquainted with the main facts in the more important of such cases almost as soon as the writer himself. Instead, I will try from time to time to note things as they come under my own observation, and there are events occurring here at the time of a different nature, which, if written up by one more capable than your humble correspondent, to make entertaining reading even for one who feels no interest in this place whatever.

Last Sunday was not a particularly eventful Sunday, and yet there were occasions which will furnish the material for this letter, for on that afternoon Dr. Lorimer, of Chicago, and formerly Pastor of Tremont Temple, this city, lectured in Music Hall on the subject of "Problems of Patriotism," and in the evening Rev. W. H. H. Murray, commonly known as Adirondack Murray, from the fact that he is who first explored the Adirondack wilds and mountains, and by his brilliant work and pen paintings of the grandeur of that now famous pleasure resort gave the first impetus to tourists and holiday-seekers in that direction, made his last bow as a public platform speaker to a Boston audience.

Mr. Murray's subject was, "The religious questions, or what the Christianity of the Christ is, and what it is not." Mr. Murray was also at one time Boston pastor, being for many years in charge of the Park Street Church, familiarly known as Brimstone Corner, a very wealthy and orthodox society, from which pastorate he resigned because of his liberal views.

Mr. Murray is known all over this continent as one of the most brilliant and thoughtful platform speakers in this country. His lecture might have been called "The Method of Jesus." What Jesus came to do, to use Mr. Murray's own words, was to introduce a new habit of feeling and conduct among men, and to persuade them to adopt a new habit of life. Mr. Murray would strip the church of all formalism, and his lecture was an argument for a return to the simple methods which Christ employed among men. Music Hall, which will seat about 3,000, was packed, and the audience evidently were in touch with the speaker.

Mr. Murray leaves the lecture field for journalism, having accepted, I believe, a position on the Arena, a new Boston publication which proposes to discuss religious, educational and social questions. With Beecher, Gough, and Wendell Phillips dead, and Mr. Murray's retirement, the lecture platform is shorn of the brightest lights it had when attending lectures was a more popular form of entertainment than at present.

I was up to Music Hall in the afternoon to hear Dr. Lorimer—in fact I don't miss an opportunity of hearing him if I can help it. The lecture was advertised for half-past two o'clock, and knowing by former experiences that, in order to secure a seat, it was necessary to be there early, I got there at twenty minutes of two, and even then the best seats in the body of the hall and galleries were occupied, and when the lecture commenced hundreds were standing in the aisles and hundreds had been turned away. The time was whiled away, during the hour in which the audience waited, by the Ashman Family Instrumental Quartette—father, two daughters and a little son, the latter of whom cannot be more than nine or ten years of age, and who plays a sliding trombone with remarkable skill. Mr. Ashman was formerly, I believe, a bandmaster in Her Majesty's service, but now resides here. At about half-past two the stage doors were opened, and Dr. Lorimer, headed by an escort of clergymen and others entered, and the quartette struck up Auld Lang Syne, and then there was extended to the eloquent lecturer such a welcome as I never saw a man get before.

Good, orthodox Charlottetown church people would have been shocked, I think—at least some of them—at the demonstrations of love shown for this man on a Sunday. The applause was tremendous, and women—it seemed to me every woman in the hall—waved their kerchiefs till the place seemed a sea of white. This thing continued for nearly a minute, and was repeated at short intervals during the progress of the lecture. It has been said of the late H. W. Beecher, that he would have gained a reputation as an actor, should he have chosen that profession instead of the ministry, as great as that he had as a pulpit orator.

Well, I have heard Mr. Beecher preach several times, and if Mr. Beecher would have been a star as a stage artist, Dr. Lorimer would be a bright particular one. His manner on the platform is intensely dramatic, and yet is not a copy of any celebrated actor I have seen. He is rather a disappointment at first to one who hears him for the first time. He commences his discourse in an easy, conversational manner, and in a rather low and monotonous tone of voice, but once he is fairly under way his whole manner changes, and you are at once struck by the originality of the methods he employs to carry his audience with him. Now he rushes up and down the stage like a tornado, the eloquent, burning words falling from his lips the while; and then he will fold his arms across his breast, as if in the presence of an enemy he despised, his whole manner changed in a second, and apparently without the slightest trouble. He is a master of sarcasm as well as wit. Wit not of the average clergyman kind, which is generally of a sickly nature, but bright and sparkling and introduced at the right moment. His peroration was very beautiful, and when he sat down there was a repetition of the wild applause which greeted him on entering. His lecture was suggested by the recent Catholic congress at Baltimore, the Bruno incident at Rome, and Daniel Dougherty's eloquent oration at the congress. As I go out and up the street Tremont Temple is also unloading its load of humanity on the street. Here from two to three thousand people assemble every Sunday afternoon for what they call a service of song. They have an orchestra of about twenty pieces, and the immense organ to lead congregational singing, besides solo, quartette and other part singing. It is very enjoyable, and much appreciated by persons who like to sing.

Yours truly,
Boston, Nov. 20, 1889. M. W. L.

Letter from Dr. McLellan.

SIR,—I noticed in the Daily Patriot of the 21st inst., a piece taken from the Gloucester Argus, under the heading of "A League of Regularities," in which there are certain charges against Consular Agent Carlton of this place, and I being the "young student just from college" referred to, I think in justice to Mr. Carlton I should at least exonerate him from the serious charge of having recommended me to Col. George as a physician to attend the sick American seaman of this port.

I may state that the fact of my being called a student had not the effect the promoter of the said paragraph intended it should have. I am at present a student, always have been, and my desire is that I always will be a student; and if some of my medical friends (I) were a little more studious in their medical studies, our profession would be at a much higher level in this Province than it is at present.

I may say, for the benefit of those who are buying themselves so much about this small matter, that I did not apply for the position I now hold, nor was I aware, before my appointment, that such a position existed. The first intimation of the fact I received was word from Consular Agent George to call at his office on my first visit to Charlottetown. This I did, and there received my appointment. I do not yet know who recommended me, but I do know it was not Mr. Carlton.

I am not anxious to enter upon a newspaper controversy, but I hope that the above statements will free Mr. Carlton from the charge—if a charge it be—concerning myself.

Yours truly,
A. A. McLELLAN, M. D.

The Cronin Murder Trial.

THE DEFENCE TESTIMONY WEAKENING—A WITNESS RATTLED AND HIS STORY TORN TO PIECES.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Pat Dinan was the first witness in the Cronin case to-day. He swore that the white horse now on exhibition at the museum was his own and his only white horse.

Louis Beidenderfer, a young man from Hoboken, N. J., was called. He said he had seen the horse on exhibition at the museum. It is not the one driven to the Conklin residence. He was standing in the cigar store, on the evening of May 4th, opposite Cronin's office. He noticed the horse particularly. It was gray and not white. The witness said he saw the horse on the street the day before yesterday. The cross-examination was very searching. He said he could not tell who pointed Cronin out to him, but some one did. He was very familiar with his looks.

His attention was directed to the rig by the haste with which the doctor and his company departed. A little further along, he said, before driving away, a third person came up and held a conversation with the doctor, who took something out of his pocket and gave it to him. "How long did this conversation last?" asked Attorney General Ingham. "Four or five minutes." "Yet you say the doctor came from the house and was evidently in great haste?" "The inconsistency of the hasty departure, occupying five minutes, was painfully apparent to the witness, and his face turned very red. He bit his lip and tried to bridge over the chasm suddenly opened in his testimony by saying that he meant the haste with which the doctor got into the buggy. He first heard on May 1 that Cronin was supposed to have been taken away with Dinan's horse. This was seven or eight days before the publication of our report. Beidenderfer did not tell the authorities what he knew, because he had no interest in doing so. He told some of his friends and they probably told Attorney Forrest, who summoned him. Last August, the witness said, he remembered that while standing in a doorway from which he saw the doctor, two or three black horses, three or four gray and three bays passed.

The witness said the horse which took the doctor away stood between him and the electric light, and as it was still daylight, no shadow was cast. As the witness left the court he was summoned by the State to appear as a witness. The expert testimony was taken up, and Prof. Marshall Ewell and Dr. H. M. Moyer were examined. Both professed proficiency in microscopical observations and declared it impossible, in their opinion, to detect the difference between the blood and hair of a horse or dog and that of human beings.

At the afternoon session Dr. Lester Cur-ts, at one time president of the Illinois Microscopical Society, was called to add weight to the testimony of Ewell and Moyer. During his examination Attorney Foster dropped off to sleep, several jurymen nodded, and many spectators, wearied by the retelling of the possibilities and limitations of medical science, left the room.

Court adjourned.

Long-Standing

Blood Diseases are cured by the persevering use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

This medicine is an Alterative, and causes a radical change in the system. The process, in some cases, may not be quite so rapid as in others; but, with persistence, the result is certain. Read these testimonials:—

"For two years I suffered from a severe pain in my right side, and had other troubles caused by a torpid liver and dyspepsia. After giving several medicines a fair trial without a cure, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was greatly benefited by the first bottle, and after taking five bottles I was completely cured."—John W. Benson, 70 Lawrence st., Lowell, Mass.

Last May a large carbuncle broke out on my arm. The usual remedies had no effect and I was confined to my bed for eight weeks. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than three bottles healed the sore. In all my experience with medicine, I never saw more Wonderful Results.

Another marked effect of the use of this medicine was the strengthening of my sight."—Mrs. Carrie Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

"I had a dry scaly humor for years, and suffered terribly; and, as my brother and sister were similarly afflicted, I presume the malady is hereditary. Last winter, Dr. Tyson, (of Fernandina, Fla.) recommended me to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and continue it for a year. For five months I took it daily. I have not had a blemish upon my body for the last three months."—T. E. Wiley, 146 Chambers st., New York City.

"Last fall and winter I was troubled with a dull, heavy pain in my side. I did not notice it much at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost unbearable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the stomach and liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared, and I was completely cured."—Mrs. Augusta A. Furbush, Haverhill, Mass.

Celery! Celery!

GAY & SONS are taking orders for winter supply of Celery. Celery packed in boxes or barrels, and delivered on board car or steamer without extra charge. Orders taken at the Market, Charlottetown, or address J. J. Gay & Son, Pownal. Prices range from 25 to 40 cents per dozen, our best at $3 per hundred. Taking the medicinal properties of Celery into consideration, and the prevalence of fevers in our midst, it is a wonder that even more of this truly medicinal plant is not used.

My dear fellow dyspeptic sufferers, have you tried munching a stalk of Celery as a finishing off (so to speak) at each meal? If you have not, make a start; if you have, I need not tell you why.
