

DR. AND MRS. D. R. SAMPSON

Bride's Uncle Performs The Marriage Ceremony

Caledonia Presbyterian Church was the scene of a late summer wedding when Lorna Joan, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M.N. McGowan of Kilmuir, became the bride of Dexter Reid, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. C.D. Sampson of Fredericton, N.B. on August 30th. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J.A. McGowan, uncle of the bride, of East River, N.S.

The church was decorated with baskets of white and pastel gladioli, and the guest pews were marked with white ribbon and pastel pompon dahlias. Mrs. A. F. Campbell was organist and accompanied Mrs. L. D. Johnston, who sang "The Lord's Prayer" during the ceremony and "Calm as the Night" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of antique white satin. The bodice was fashioned with long fitted sleeves, a neckline high in front and coming to a low point in back, and a lowered waistline closed with tiny matching buttons.

The full skirt had a short train, and wide panels of satin which were swept back from the side front to fall to the hemline in back.

She wore a small cap of matching satin with a shoulder length veil of silk illusion, and carried a bouquet of red roses.

As maid of honour, Miss Jessie McGowan was her sister's only attendant, wearing a ballerina length gown of pale blue silk crystalet, with a hem length sash of deeper blue. Her feather cap matched the sash and she carried a bouquet of pale pink carnations.

David Sampson acted as best man for his brother, and the guests were ushered by John McGowan and Kenneth Sampson.

The bride's mother wore a fitted two piece suit of champagne beige lace over satin, styled with a wide shawl collar, and with it a pale pink feather hat and pink gloves. Her corsage was of pink roses.

The mother of the groom was gowned in powder blue lace over taffeta, and wore a hat of dusty rose velvet with matching gloves, and a pink carnation corsage.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride for sixty guests. The bride's table was centered with a three tier wedding cake, topped with pale pink roses. Small vases of matching roses and pink candles in silver candelabra decorated the dining room.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. J.A. McGowan, after which the groom made an appropriate response. Mrs. Cyril Johnston and Mrs. S.A. Weatherbie, aunts of the bride, poured, and Mrs. J.M. Bruce, Mrs. William MacLeod, Mrs. Hugh Robbins, Mrs. George Forsythe, and Misses Jean Marsh, Winnifred McGowan, Lou Ann Nicholson and Peggy Johnston assisted in serving.

For travelling the bride wore

BONSHAW SCHOOL

The following is the report of Bonshaw School for the month of Sept:

Senior Department:

Grade X: - 1. Harvey MacRae.
Grade IX: - 1. Douglas MacNevin, 2. Donna MacPhee, 3. Blair Ferguson.

Grade VIII: - 1. Sandra MacDonald, 2. Vicki MacNevin and Paulette Buchanan (equal), 3. Bonnie MacRae.

Grade VII: - 1. Gail Buchanan, 2. Norman MacLae, 3. Connie MacPhee and Shirley McNevin (equal).

Grade VI: - 1. Donald MacLeod, 2. Larry Simpson, 3. David MacLeod.

Principal: Anna E. Inman.
Primary Department:

Grade II: - 1. Susanne Mac-
2. Dawnie MacDonald, 3. Hazel MacRae.

Grade IV: 1. Veda Beaton, 2. Norma MacQuarrie, 3. Joan McManus.

Grade III: - 1. Wayne Crosby, 2. Gordon MacLeod and Blois Ferguson (equal), 3. Alan MacPhee.

Grade II: - 1. Susanne Mac-
2. Kenny Crosby, 3. Janice MacNevin.

Grade I: - 1. Cery MacPhee,
Joyce Ferguson, Assistant.

MOVING!
LONG DISTANCE
FURNITURE MOVING
ETC.
AGENTS ALLIED VAN
LINES
JENKINS TRANSFER

Women

Lena Caroline McLure, Women's Editor. Phone 4566

Page 6 The Guardian Thur., October 9, 1958

HAPPENINGS

Miss Marion Shaw has arrived by plane for a two weeks holiday in Toronto. She will be the guest of her sister Miss N.A. Shaw of the Royal Conservatory of Music.

Mrs. H.E. Hyndman entertained at a tea Tuesday afternoon at the Charlottetown Hotel.

Flying Officer Donald E. Cameron, R.C.A.F. Station Centralia, Ontario, has been promoted to the rank of Flight-Lieutenant. Mrs. Cameron, the former Constance L. MacClure, is the daughter of Mrs. Ivan and the late Ivan MacClure. At one time Mr. MacClure was in business with his brother R.L. MacClure. Their firm, one of the first large dry cleaning businesses in the Maritimes, was known as the New Method Cleaners of Charlottetown.

Flying Officer Pitcairn and Wing Commander Wylie Spafford of the R.C.A.F. MacDonald, Manitoba, spent the weekend in Charlottetown at the former's home.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Morrison,

Pleasant Cove, have received word of the safe arrival at Chilli-wack, B.C. of their son and family. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Morrison and two children Jack and Grant. Mr. Morrison is with the engineer corps of the R.C.A. Enroute they visited Mrs. Morrison's brother Arwell at Saint John, N.B. and two sisters in Montreal. Sr. Wendolyn Marie and Sr. St. Zita C.N.D. and Mr. Morrison's brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morrison at Moose Jaw, Sask. Charles is with the R.C.A.F. there. Mrs. Morrison is the daughter of Mrs. Wendolyn Morrissey, East Royalty.

Misses Allene and Anne Beaton of Halifax, employees of the Maritime Telegraph Co., accompanied by Miss Carol Sharpe of Halifax, are presently spending two weeks holidays in Montague.

Sigmin, Ron Diamond, R.C.C.S. son of Roland Diamond, Montague, left Montreal by plane on Monday en route to Egypt. His wife and daughter will reside in Montague during his absence.

Quinlan-McKenzie Marriage Is Solemnized

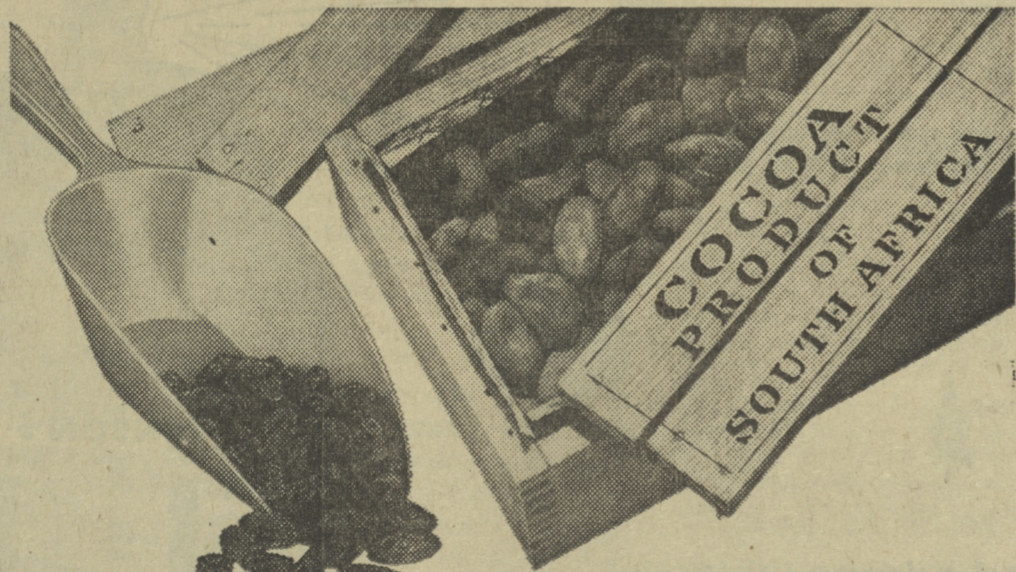

A pretty wedding was solemnized in the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception when Rev. Carl Hickey officiated in marriage, with nuptial mass and a double ring ceremony. Miss Catherine Geraldine McKenzie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony McKenzie, Murray Harbor North, P.E.I. and William Francis Quinlan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Quinlan, Ashburn Lake Road. The altar was decorated with vases of gladioli and the guest pews were marked with satin bows and lily of the valley.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Gordon Haslett, sister of the groom, as matron of honor, and Miss Lorraine McKenzie and Miss Diane Quinlan, sisters of the bride and groom, as bridesmaids. Little Patricia McKenzie, sister of the bride, was flower girl. The groomsmen were Gordon Haslett, brother-in-law of the groom, the ushers were Robert Quinlan, brother of the groom, and Vincent Boudreau, uncle of the bride. The nuptial music was played by Prof. Albert Vaiuculenas. The bride was given in mar-

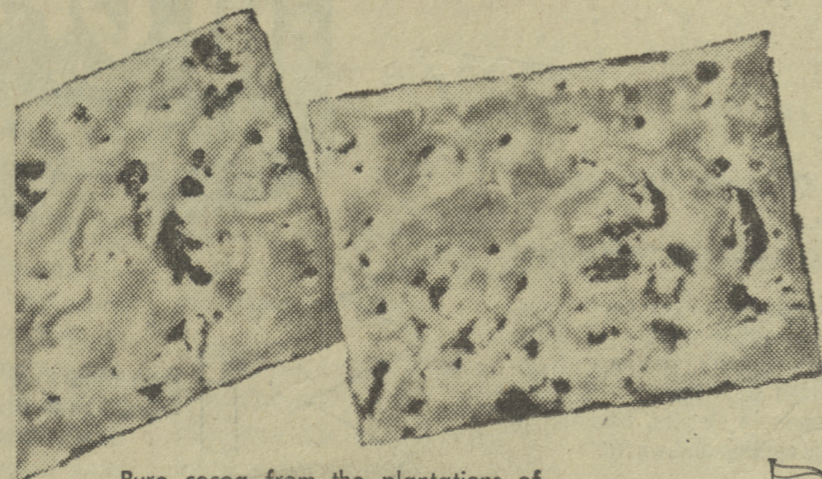

WE STOCK, SELL AND INSTALL

Beatty
WATER PRESSURE SYSTEMS
For Farms, Cottages, Rural Homes, Motels

DOUGLAS BROS. & JONES LTD.
155 KENT ST. DIAL 6565

IT TAKES THE
FINEST INGREDIENTS
TO MAKE
CHRISTIE'S
THE QUALITY BISCUIT

Pure cocoa from the plantations of West Africa... plump, sun-ripened raisins from the distant shores of Australia... these are only two of the specially-imported ingredients that make Christie's the biscuits you'll serve with pride.

CHRISTIE, BROWN AND COMPANY, LIMITED
This week—be sure to try Oreo and Sultanas by Christie's.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Flowers And Cabbages Are Both Needed In Life

Sunbeams, we caught today in the morning-loaves we moulded, mellow little fellows, bright-eyed and cheerful. There too as we worked by a window, we tucked in sights, seasonal and lovely: Autumn scenes colorful along hill and valley, clear blue sky above, floating fleecy cloudlets. Pastoral-eyes nibbling down by the stream, cattle basking in the sunlight on the slope above, horses, coats shining, grazing content near by.

Young cattle were brought in today in a purchase which gave us, noting it, assurance that farming would continue. No matter, it came to mind, how persistently nations may continue to quibble and spar, while time is, land will be plowed, crops gathered and stock cared for. Autumn-leaves will fall. But winter will pass and spring call her faithful husbandmen off to the seedtime in a rite ancient though always interestingly new. Out to the furrows and that peace that is to be found in the fields, peace and a healing of the heart and mind.

"For me" a Scottish lady says "healing is to be found among the foothills where the shepherds' cottage nestles, and the ewes and lambs now scarce distinguishable from their mothers nibble contentedly on sweet pasture lands. To watch the woolly clouds float by, gently brushing the green slopes as they go with darker shades of green, and leaving behind them patches of golden sunshine on the grateful earth: to stroll or sit by the side of a gently-flowing river edged with silver-birch, and rowan trees, and study reflections, this is peace. And if by reason of a strong breeze blowing the peace is disturbed, there is the song of the wind in the trees for company, and the rippling laughter of the river for joy."

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

"There are pumpkin plants growing at the foot of the garden" one of the children said through the Summer. "I wonder how they came there?" How the vines grew and rambled about the dahlias and beneath the fence into the shadowy recesses of a young and wilding plantation of cherry!

"There's a honey of a pumpkin down there" Mack called later this evening when he was trundling a small barrow of wood from the shed to the house across the lane. "Yes," he smiled happily "just what I'll need!"

"What we need, Ellen," James offers now coming in from his day "is a good stiff wind, and sunshine, to dry out the stooks and let us get to our threshing. The stars are out. We just may get it tomorrow." — Diary, Good-night.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

"There are pumpkin plants growing at the foot of the garden" one of the children said through the Summer. "I wonder how they came there?" How the vines grew and rambled about the dahlias and beneath the fence into the shadowy recesses of a young and wilding plantation of cherry!

"There's a honey of a pumpkin down there" Mack called later this evening when he was trundling a small barrow of wood from the shed to the house across the lane. "Yes," he smiled happily "just what I'll need!"

"What we need, Ellen," James offers now coming in from his day "is a good stiff wind, and sunshine, to dry out the stooks and let us get to our threshing. The stars are out. We just may get it tomorrow." — Diary, Good-night.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

"There are pumpkin plants growing at the foot of the garden" one of the children said through the Summer. "I wonder how they came there?" How the vines grew and rambled about the dahlias and beneath the fence into the shadowy recesses of a young and wilding plantation of cherry!

"There's a honey of a pumpkin down there" Mack called later this evening when he was trundling a small barrow of wood from the shed to the house across the lane. "Yes," he smiled happily "just what I'll need!"

"What we need, Ellen," James offers now coming in from his day "is a good stiff wind, and sunshine, to dry out the stooks and let us get to our threshing. The stars are out. We just may get it tomorrow." — Diary, Good-night.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

"There are pumpkin plants growing at the foot of the garden" one of the children said through the Summer. "I wonder how they came there?" How the vines grew and rambled about the dahlias and beneath the fence into the shadowy recesses of a young and wilding plantation of cherry!

"There's a honey of a pumpkin down there" Mack called later this evening when he was trundling a small barrow of wood from the shed to the house across the lane. "Yes," he smiled happily "just what I'll need!"

"What we need, Ellen," James offers now coming in from his day "is a good stiff wind, and sunshine, to dry out the stooks and let us get to our threshing. The stars are out. We just may get it tomorrow." — Diary, Good-night.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

"There are pumpkin plants growing at the foot of the garden" one of the children said through the Summer. "I wonder how they came there?" How the vines grew and rambled about the dahlias and beneath the fence into the shadowy recesses of a young and wilding plantation of cherry!

"There's a honey of a pumpkin down there" Mack called later this evening when he was trundling a small barrow of wood from the shed to the house across the lane. "Yes," he smiled happily "just what I'll need!"

"What we need, Ellen," James offers now coming in from his day "is a good stiff wind, and sunshine, to dry out the stooks and let us get to our threshing. The stars are out. We just may get it tomorrow." — Diary, Good-night.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

"There are pumpkin plants growing at the foot of the garden" one of the children said through the Summer. "I wonder how they came there?" How the vines grew and rambled about the dahlias and beneath the fence into the shadowy recesses of a young and wilding plantation of cherry!

"There's a honey of a pumpkin down there" Mack called later this evening when he was trundling a small barrow of wood from the shed to the house across the lane. "Yes," he smiled happily "just what I'll need!"

"What we need, Ellen," James offers now coming in from his day "is a good stiff wind, and sunshine, to dry out the stooks and let us get to our threshing. The stars are out. We just may get it tomorrow." — Diary, Good-night.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

"There are pumpkin plants growing at the foot of the garden" one of the children said through the Summer. "I wonder how they came there?" How the vines grew and rambled about the dahlias and beneath the fence into the shadowy recesses of a young and wilding plantation of cherry!

"There's a honey of a pumpkin down there" Mack called later this evening when he was trundling a small barrow of wood from the shed to the house across the lane. "Yes," he smiled happily "just what I'll need!"

"What we need, Ellen," James offers now coming in from his day "is a good stiff wind, and sunshine, to dry out the stooks and let us get to our threshing. The stars are out. We just may get it tomorrow." — Diary, Good-night.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

"There are pumpkin plants growing at the foot of the garden" one of the children said through the Summer. "I wonder how they came there?" How the vines grew and rambled about the dahlias and beneath the fence into the shadowy recesses of a young and wilding plantation of cherry!

"There's a honey of a pumpkin down there" Mack called later this evening when he was trundling a small barrow of wood from the shed to the house across the lane. "Yes," he smiled happily "just what I'll need!"

"What we need, Ellen," James offers now coming in from his day "is a good stiff wind, and sunshine, to dry out the stooks and let us get to our threshing. The stars are out. We just may get it tomorrow." — Diary, Good-night.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

"There are pumpkin plants growing at the foot of the garden" one of the children said through the Summer. "I wonder how they came there?" How the vines grew and rambled about the dahlias and beneath the fence into the shadowy recesses of a young and wilding plantation of cherry!

"There's a honey of a pumpkin down there" Mack called later this evening when he was trundling a small barrow of wood from the shed to the house across the lane. "Yes," he smiled happily "just what I'll need!"

"What we need, Ellen," James offers now coming in from his day "is a good stiff wind, and sunshine, to dry out the stooks and let us get to our threshing. The stars are out. We just may get it tomorrow." — Diary, Good-night.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

"There are pumpkin plants growing at the foot of the garden" one of the children said through the Summer. "I wonder how they came there?" How the vines grew and rambled about the dahlias and beneath the fence into the shadowy recesses of a young and wilding plantation of cherry!

"There's a honey of a pumpkin down there" Mack called later this evening when he was trundling a small barrow of wood from the shed to the house across the lane. "Yes," he smiled happily "just what I'll need!"

"What we need, Ellen," James offers now coming in from his day "is a good stiff wind, and sunshine, to dry out the stooks and let us get to our threshing. The stars are out. We just may get it tomorrow." — Diary, Good-night.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

"There are pumpkin plants growing at the foot of the garden" one of the children said through the Summer. "I wonder how they came there?" How the vines grew and rambled about the dahlias and beneath the fence into the shadowy recesses of a young and wilding plantation of cherry!

"There's a honey of a pumpkin down there" Mack called later this evening when he was trundling a small barrow of wood from the shed to the house across the lane. "Yes," he smiled happily "just what I'll need!"

"What we need, Ellen," James offers now coming in from his day "is a good stiff wind, and sunshine, to dry out the stooks and let us get to our threshing. The stars are out. We just may get it tomorrow." — Diary, Good-night.

October's cool nights bring the calves in from pasture to the shelter of stables. Apparently it was an October anticipation, that took a lad this evening on a purposeful walk across the yard to the garden. We saw him search with much absorption the frost-scorched foliage at its foot, where for beauty's sake and our own enjoyment we had planted tubers of the left-over dahlias. And then remembering the reminder "Plant flowers, that thou mayest eat and live;"

We dropped some seeds near by. Not so much for food as for the satisfaction of small ones we had seen before this hollowing with might and main a turnip toward October's most bewitching day.

"There are pumpkin plants growing at the foot of the garden" one of the children said through the Summer. "I wonder how they came there?" How the vines grew and rambled about the dahlias and beneath the fence into the shadowy recesses of a young and wilding plantation of cherry!

ST. ANTHONY C. W. L.

The monthly meeting of the St. Anthony sub-division of the C. W. L. of Bloomfield was held in the Parish Hall, Monday evening, Sept. 29th. Twenty-three members were in attendance.

The Spiritual convener led the opening prayer, which was followed by the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting. Education, spiritual social welfare, radio-T.V.-films, press, and membership conveners reported.

A committee was named to conduct a rummage sale at the suggestion of the social welfare convener, in aid of the Social Welfare Agency of Summerside. It was decided that the sub-division subscribe to "The Pope Speaks," and that articles from this publication be read at each meeting.

A card party was planned to be held at the home of Mrs. Emmanuel Gallant on the 20th of October. A committee was named to organize a variety concert to be held at a later date.

The Spiritual Director, Rev. C. J. Pitre in his remarks, urged the members to try to increase

LONG RECORD

Lambeth Palace has been the official London residence of archbishops of Canterbury since 1179.

"PARAMETTE" SYRUP
21 VITAMINS
MINERALS and
TRACE ELEMENTS
The dietary supplement with the delicious candy flavour

Write Call or Phone
Sample's Pharmacy
178 Queen St. Dial 471
Free City Wide Delivery

POLICEMAN'S BALL

ROLLAWAY CLUB
Monday, October 27
Dancing — 9-1 a.m.
With The Downtowners
Tickets Available At
Police Station

AT LAST MONTY TALKS! A PATRIOT EXCLUSIVE!

Here's publishing news the whole world has been awaiting. At last Field Marshal Montgomery is to tell his gripping, significant story following his recent retirement from the politico-military post of Deputy Supreme Allied Commander in Europe.

Viscount Montgomery of Alamein writes with great frankness and force. On Prince Edward Island his articles will appear only in The Evening Patriot, in the Weekend Magazine section, which holds exclusive publishing rights for Canada.

Telling the story as it has never been told before, Monty's articles in the next four Saturday issues will start with an account of the Battle of Alamein, as he planned it and as he fought it. In succeeding issues, with complete candor, he will tell of the invasion of Normandy — the battle of Europe — his differences and showdowns with U. S. generals — exactly what he thinks of the military mind of Eisenhower — and the folly of Dieppe which cost many Canadian lives.

The material to be presented in this Patriot series is soon to appear in one of the most important books scheduled for 1959 publication — the story of Field Marshal Montgomery's life. It is a great privilege to present these articles ahead of book publication as an exclusive feature for Patriot readers.

Starts Next Saturday ONLY In The Patriot

Don't Miss An Issue

THE EVENING PATRIOT

Serving The Island's Urban Audience