THE RUM BILL.

The following is from the Journal of the American Temperance Union:

At a late country temperance meeting which we attended, a plain farmer rose and said, that he was one day going to work, and an officious sort of a man overhauled him, exclaiming.

"Mr.———,Mr.———,I have a bill against you."

"Against me," was the reply, "I guess you are mistaken this time—I owe you nothing."

"O, it is not my bill," said the man—I am only the collector. It is a tax bill."

"Ah, a rum bill!"

"Yes," said the collector, "if you've a mind to understand it so—and about half I call upon are of this opinion—they mutter terribly upon the rum taxes, the number of lazy, drunken fellows in the poor-house, and the criminals taken up every day, making an enormous cost to the country, and I believe if it was not for the rum shops, the taxes would not be one quarter so heavy as they are—you have given it about the right name—rum bill—only I should not like to have the name of rum bill collector."

On saying this he sat down—but it proved a most effective speech, for others took up the thought, and the rum bill, assessed upon temperance men, was not lost sight of to the close of the meeting. Indeed, the idea that a temperance man should be met with a demand which could only appropriately be made of a drunkard. "Sir, I have a rum bill against you," and be compelled to submit to it, and pay it, while it was at first quite ludicrous, soon excited burning indignation—words are wanting to express the strength of a demand, and that immediately, for a Maine Law.

Would that we could traverse the State, and show to every hard working man, the amount of his rum bill—that we could sit down by the shoemaker, working day and night to pay his rent, and support his family, and ask him how much was his rum bill.

"Rum bill? I never drink rum."

"Very well, sir, but you pay a rum bill. What was your taxes last year?"

"Sixteen dollars, twenty-five cents."

By the blacksmith. "Sir, you swing the hammer at the anvil by day and by night, in summer and winter. Hard way to get a living! Pray, sir, how much is your rum bill?

"Rum bill! don't insult me; never a drop comes into my shop."

"That may be, sir, but you pay a heavy rum bill; and it won't be anything less when these drunken fellows, who I see hang around your furnace, get, with their families, into the poor house."

By the hard-working thrifty farmer.—"Sir, you've a very fine farm, will you not set apart a lot for the missionary or Bible cause?

"I would if I could, but it requires all I can raise to support my family."

"Sir, you are now devoting the produce of your best lot to a worse purpose."

"I am, sir, what do you mean?"

"I mean to pay your rum bill."

"Sir, you're mistaken in your man. Rum used to cost me twenty and thirty dollars in haying and harvesting, but I have not paid a rum bill these six years."

"Have not? what were your taxes last year?"

"Over forty-dollars."

"Well two thirds of that was a rum bill. The pauper tax of the State of New York in 1849, according to the legislative Reports, was $817,441; of this, $670,173, was set down to intemperance, and you had to pay your share of it. Now go for a Maine Law, and you may have nearly the whole of the produce of your farm for yourself and children."

A London Converzatione.—"Good Heavens! what do people mean by going there? What is doing there, that everybody throngs into those three little rooms? After being rammed to a jelly in a doorway (where you feel your feet going through Lady Barbara Macbeth's lace flounces, and get a look from that haggard and painted old harpy, compared to which the gaze of Ugolino is quite cheerful); after withdrawing your elbo out of poor Bob Guttleton's white waistcoat, from which cushion it was impossible to remove it, though you knew you were squeezing poor Bob into an appoplexy—you find yourself at last in the reception-room, and try to catch the eye of Mrs. Botibol, the conversazione-giver. When you catch her eye, you are expected to grin, and she smiles too, for the four-hundreth time that night; and if she's very glad to see you, waggles her little hand before her face as if to blow you a kiss, as the phrase is. Why the deuce should Mrs. Botibol blow me a kiss? I wouldn't kiss her for the world. Why do I grin when I see her, as if I was delighted? Because we are both performing the ceremonies demanded by the Great Snob Society: whose dictates we all of us obey.

A German writer says, the people of the United States can burst more steamboats and chew more tobacco than any other five nations in the world.

A young widow was asked why she was going to take another husband so soon after the death of the first. "O, la!" said she, "I do it to prevent fretting myself to death on account of dear Tom."

"I shall die like a hero," said the coal, when it was being consumed; "for I shall mix with the ashes of the grate."

Astonishing efficacy of the Oxygenated Bitters,

In a case of eighteen years' standing.
From Fitzhenry Homer, Esq., of Boston, Mass.
Boston, September 28, 1848.

Dear Sir—It is now eighteen years since I was first troubled with the water-brash and derangement of the stomach. I have taken advice of the best Physicians in this city and New York, in London, Paris, Germany, and Italy, followed their prescriptions, and visited the several sulphur and other springs in this country, the watering places of Germany, and elsewhere in Europe, and had found no relief. Since taking the Bitters I have never had a return of the Water-brash, which daily troubled me of late years to a very great degree. My appetite has returned; the extreme flatulence, severe constipation of the bowels, general debility, and sleepless nights unde which I suffered, have entirely left me. Having found so great relief from this most discouraging disorder. I have recommended a trial of your medicine to many of my friends, who are now using it to great advantage. And I cannot refrain from writing to you in its favour and praise, for the good you have bestowed upon the community; and trust that what little is in my scope to offer in extending the circulation of your "Oxygenated Bitters," will be done with grateful pleasure at all times.

Yours very respectfully,
FITZHENRY HOMER.

Leonard Scott & Cos.' LIST OF British Periodical Publications.

FORWARDED by mail, under the provisions of the late Post Office Law, at merely nominal rates.

1. The London Quarterly Review (Conservative).
2. The Edinburgh Review (Whig).
3. The North British Review (Free Church).
4. The Westminster Review (Liberal).
5. Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine (Tory).

These Reprints have been in successful operation in this country for twenty years, and their circulation is constantly on the increase, notwithstanding the competition they encounter from American periodicals of a similar class, and from the numerous Eclectics and Magazines made up of selections from foreign periodicals. This fact shows clearly the high estimation in which they are held by the intelligent reading public, and affords a guarantee that they are established on a firm basis, and will be continued without interruption.

Although these works are distinguished by the political shades above indicated, yet but a small portion of their contents is devoted to political subjects. It is their literary character which gives them their chief value, and in that they stand confessedly far above all other journals of their class. Blackwood, still under the masterly guidance of Christopher North, maintains its ancient celebrity, and is, at this time, unusually attractive, from the serial works of Bulwer and other literary notables, written for that magazine, and first appearing in its columns, both in Great Britain and in the United States. Such works as "The Caxtons" and "My New Novel," (both by Bulwer), "My Peninsular Medal," "The Green Hand," and other serials, of which numerous rival editions are issued by the leading publishers in this country, have to be reprinted by those publishers from the pages of Blackwood, after it has been issued by Messrs. Scott and Co., so that Subscribers to the Reprint of that Magazine may always rely on having the earliest reading of these fascinating tales.
