ELLEN'S DIARY

Good Workman Takes Pride In Always Doing Good Job

Smartly now the plowing is being continued at Rob's where, in the main, Jamie's plowman, and at Alderlea where the younger farmer takes care of such rites. We saw James pause in his choring today to look away along the fields to a patch of stubble falling then beneath the spell of the busy plowshares. What was he seeing we wondered? Just an old field of the farm he had cultivated in its turn and sowed and reaped, being prepared once more for the spring-time-hopes? Much more than that it came to mind.

He was recalling how as a lad given permission to attempt his first plowing he had eagerly and not without some difficulty, because their heads were so high, bridled and harnessed the team, much thrilled to enter thus to a farmer's estate. Remembering... looking back to this milestone of moment on his road of life... back we knew to the quiet year and young, before the family circle of his world was broken by death; to olden days and the former ways of living that depended for well-being and comfort on a kerosene lamp and lantern, wood-stoves in kitchen and rooms, a dug well—or maybe the magic of a wooden pump in the yard, for the light, heat and water, nowadays in such easy and abundant supply.

Instead of the several shares flashing at times in the sunlight, he would again be feeling his grip on the reins and the handles of the old single plow... and see the sod peel away red from the plow-share. And when at length in his experience he could strike out the opening furrows in a field, how furrowed too would be his brow eyes trained on the far stake which beckoned!

"How goes the plowing?" he questioned James this evening. "On good," Jamie smiled. "I am getting it turned over... You should see it!"

"I reckon" James offered "perhaps it's just as well, I don't it would bother me to see other than a nice smooth job."

"Smooth or rough" Jamie chuckled teasingly "straight furrows or crooked, the crops will grow on them just as well!"

"Maybe so," James smiled. "But it's the good workman who always takes a pride in doing good work."

White gulls came up from the river on earthy gusts in connection with the plowing. And seeing them hover above and, we knew, settle there in the red loam—could also see Fall's cold shadow—or was it not Winter himself that in the sign of "Gulls inland" indicated "unsettled weather ahead?"

However, gracious this day has been. And the night starlit and beautiful, as lovely Fall nights can be.

Until tomorrow — — — Diary. Good-night.

MR. AND MRS. MERRILL R. JOHNSTON

Young Couple Pledge Vows At Trinity Church Ceremony

A pretty fall wedding was solemnized at Trinity United Church on September 22 when Beryl Constance Shelfohn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Shelfohn, was united in marriage to Merrill B. Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raulston Johnston, both of Charlottetown.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. A. Frank MacLean.

Baskets of pastel gladioli formed a lovely setting in the church and tiny white satin bows marked the guest pews. Before the ceremony Miss Joyce MacCallum sang "The Lord's Prayer". During the signing of the register, Misses Lynne and Karen Johnston, sisters of the groom, sang "How Great Thou Art". Mr. Royston Muzford was the accompanist and organist for the ceremony.

The lovely young bride entered the church on the arm of her father. She chose a ballerina length gown of white peau de soie made with a scalloped neckline and full skirt. The long sleeves ended with points over the hands. Her shoulder length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a Juliette cap decorated with sequins and seed pearls. Her only jewellery was a simple strand of pearls and carines, a gift of the groom. She carried a nosegay of pink and white roses.

Miss Joyce Shelfohn was her sister's only attendant and chose a ballerina length dress of yellow nylon over taffeta. She wore a head dress and gloves of matching yellow nylon and carried a nosegay of yellow and white carnations.

Mr. Cyril Whedley, friend of the groom was best man and the cashiers were Ivan Duvar and Jack Hobbs.

Mrs. Shelfohn chose for her daughter's wedding a corsage of yellow carnations.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's aunt and uncle Mr. and Mrs. George Shelfohn. The bride's table was charming with lace cloth and flowers and centered with a three-tier wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Joseph Shelfohn, uncle of the bride and was capably responded to by the groom.

Mrs. Elmer Johnston, aunt of the groom, and Mrs. George Shelfohn, aunt of the bride, poured. Assisting in serving were Misses Jean MacDougal, Margaret Rodd, Anne MacDougal, Barbara Cameron. In charge of the guest book was Miss Jean Murphy.

Leaving the reception, amid showers of confetti the bride wore a sheath dress of green wool with burnt orange accessories with corsage of yellow carnations. After a honeymoon trip to Maine, U.S.A., the couple took up residence in Fredericton, N.B.

Prior to her marriage, Mrs. Johnston had been widely entertained by her friends.

Winds have scattered the maple leaves in the lane where the rose was queen; The song of the birds has ever died in the meadow that was so green.

There's a pine-rich tang, in October air And the moon comes silver dressed On shoo will the diamond-fairies dance On the hills that face the west.

There's peace for the taking everywhere In the wood where the birds have fled; By the river-side, where the violets died And the trees are gold and red.

The fleecy clouds are hidden well Beyond where the mountains rise For winds may sweep, from oceans deep Across October skies.

The last bright leaf of autumn dies And the last love-song is spun. Oh, October twilight, God, We pray, Thy will be done.

Blanche Judson, Summerside.
