A small mirror, developed by a Tokyo manufacturer, attaches to a pair of eyeglasses like the rear view mirror on an automobile and gives a pedestrian the advantage of seeing what's coming from behind without turning around. The gadget costs about 30 cents. (AP Wirephoto)

BEDBUGS BEING TRAINED FOR ACTION IN VIET NAM

WASHINGTON (Reuters)—Smelling bedbugs could one day be added to the huge American weapons arsenal for the Viet Nam war, officials said here.

Their task would not be to sting the Viet Cong guerrillas into surrender, but to "sniff them out".

This is one of the many methods under study to enable American soldiers to detect Viet Cong ambushes.

The experiment rests on the bedbug's lust for human blood, and its habit to let out a "yowl" of excitement once it smells a victim at distances up to 200 yards.

Military scientists now are working on methods to amplify the bug's cry, so that it becomes audible to human ears.

Once this is achieved, the bug can be carried by scout parties preceding American columns on jungle patrol and warn of any hidden guerrillas it smells.

A device as simple as a pill bottle would be enough to prevent them from wrongly giving an alarm about their own keepers, the officials said. The bug would be completely screened off from them but a small opening in front would let in the smell of anyone else.

The "battle bug" used in the experiments is a particularly big and noisy specimen that can grow to the size of a thumbnail, the officials said.

Whether it will ever see combat depends on many factors, particularly on progress made in research of other, ambushing-detecting devices.

There also was the problem of "caring for the bugs and keeping them both healthy and hungry."

However, one official said, "in a war like Viet Nam, even a small help is worth exploring."

HEY FELLOWS ---

I've Got A Job!

I HAVE MY OWN NEWSPAPER BUSINESS

HERE'S HOW I GOT IT ---

Dad was always telling me about when he was a boy and had a newspaper route.

How he learned ---

To make and save money,

To sell and keep records,

To work with people and fellow carriers

So ---

I dropped in to see the Carrier Supervisor at the Guardian and Evening Patriot office and found I had the same opportunity as Dad. Now I have a route near home and find the Carriers are a swell bunch of fellows, all anxious to succeed in their first business venture.

The Carrier Supervisor has some new routes opening up and needs more boys. Come on in and see him. Join the team and enjoy the fun of having your own business.
