Fall Tips For Producers Of Horticultural Crops

DOUG KILPATRICK, Horticultural Specialist
P.E.I.
Department of Agriculture
Some of the things which you do in the next month will mean the success or failure of next year's crops. The fall is the time to get these odd jobs done, so they will not interfere with the heavy spring work load.

SOIL TESTING
Soil testing is a little job which should be done in the fall. As soon as the crop is off—that is the time to take soil samples. It is much easier to take them in the early fall, before the ground gets frozen, and before it gets so cold that it becomes a miserable job. Also, you will get the results of your soil test back in plenty of time to order your fertilizer and lime early. If you wait until the spring to take your soil samples, you may not get the results back before you want to start planting, so WHY WAIT FOR SPRING—DO IT NOW.

FALL LIMING
It is well known that the fall is the best time to apply lime. Since all our Island soils are, by nature, acid or sour, most of our crops require lime. By applying it in the fall, and working it in, it has a head start in helping to neutralize the soil acidity. So, by the time you are ready to start planting in the spring, the lime has already started to work, and the soil will be in much better condition than if it was applied in the spring. Another thing which supports fall application of lime is the fact that if you are getting your lime applied by a bulk spreader it is easier to get it done in the fall. These bulk spreaders are fairly heavy, so they have to wait until the land is sufficiently dried out before they can get on the land in the spring. This could mean the difference between early and late planting of your crops, so, WHY WAIT FOR SPRING—DO IT NOW.

FALL PLOWING
Fall plowing is desirable, if not necessary, for early planting in P.E.I., especially where sod is to be turned under, and heavy soils which dry out slowly in the spring. There are many advantages to fall plowing, and a few of these are: (1) to reduce erosion by collecting water in the unbroken furrows—this is especially true on our lighter, sandier soils; (2) to improve the physical condition of our heavier soils by exposing them to frost action (alternate freezing and thawing tends to break up clods of soil); (3) to aid in the control of insect pests by exposing them to the weather—any soil insect that overwinters in the soil will be affected by this such as white grubs, weevils, cutworm, and wireworm; (4) to reduce the pressure of the spring work load; (5) to make possible earlier soil preparation for earlier planting; (6) to bring about the decay of coarse vegetable matter turned under—such as green manure crops, vegetable refuse, grain stubble, etc. These are just a few of the advantages of fall plowing, so WHY WAIT FOR SPRING—DO IT NOW.

STRAWBERRIES
This is also good weather for repairing fences, and this is especially important for strawberry growers and cole crop growers. You are well aware of the damage that a few cattle can do to a field of broccoli or cauliflower if they get into it for an hour or two. And most of you have probably seen how livestock eat all the leaves of strawberry plants. While we are on the subject of strawberry plants, right now is the time to order your plants for the spring. The "disease-free" plants will be in short supply, and its first come first served, so if you are planning to get some order them now. By ordering them early you can usually pick them up or have them sent to you when you need them—not several days after you would like to start planting, so WHY WAIT FOR SPRING—DO IT NOW.

CROP CONTRACTS
October and November is also the time to start thinking about signing new contracts with the processing companies. All three freezing plants require peas, cauliflower, broccoli, brussel sprouts, and potatoes in large amounts. Some of them also need beans and strawberries, and they like to get their contracts settled in the fall. So, if you are planning to grow any of these crops for the plants, or if you would like to know more about this, now is the time to contact the freezing plant in your area. WHY WAIT FOR SPRING—DO IT NOW.

Now that we have had a little rain, it should be fairly safe in some areas anyway, to start burning over your blueberry patches. Burning blueberries not only rejuvenated them and helps them to spread, it also controls some insects and weeds. Since straw is so plentiful right now, it shouldn't be too difficult or expensive to get enough straw to burn with, if you do not have or cannot use a burning machine.

COVERING STRAWBERRIES
Speaking of straw reminds me that you should get a supply in to cover your strawberries for the winter. Strawberries are sometimes injured by extreme cold in winter and by heaving in the early spring, due to alternate freezing and thawing; also crown injury may result from severe freezing in early winter, especially following a mild, moist fall, particularly if there is no snow cover when freezing weather occurs. It is therefore very important to protect the plants by covering them with straw. This should be applied after a week or more of near freezing weather, or before the temperature falls to 20 degrees F. It should be spread about 2" deep and this will require 3-4 tons per acre. So to avoid winter-killing in strawberries, we should be thinking about getting the straw to cover them. WHY WAIT FOR SPRING—DO IT NOW.

These are just a few of the little chores which can and should be done in the fall, before the spring rush begins. If some of them are not done now, they may never be done, so avoid losses and poor crops by acting now!
