To Re-enact Her Part In Circus Tragedy To Mabel Stark In 1928

By ELMER S. INGALLS NEWS Staff Writer

AUGUSTA, Maine, April 9.—A near tragedy which sent shivers down the collective spines of thousands of Bangor circus-goers one afternoon in 1928 had an unusual and pleasant aftermath in Hollywood, California, last week.

The near tragedy occurred when a ferocious tiger tired of going through its paces for Miss Mabel Stark, billed as the world's most famous woman animal trainer, turned on its erstwhile benefactor and lacerated her brutally before circus attendants could enter the cage and rescue her.

Rushed to Hospital

Even as women screamed and strong men clutched their chairs for support, Miss Stark was rushed to a Bangor hospital. She had suffered a broken leg and over 20 separate wounds which required stitches and newspapers, reporting the event were something less than optimistic.

In going to a Bangor hospital, however, she set the stage for last week's aftermath — the appearance in Hollywood of the Bangor nurse who was with Miss Stark constantly through the six weeks during which she battled for her very life.

The physician assigned to Miss Stark's case when she entered the hospital was Dr. Harrison L. Robinson. To him went the delicate task not only of restoring the doughty animal trainer to health but of seeing to it that she was not hopelessly disgraced by the fact that she had not only survived her ordeal but was discharged in six weeks apparently none the worse for her experience, was a tribute to his professional ability.

The community was saddened Easter Sunday when it became known Alan James McCormac had passed to his eternal reward. Born in Little Pond, Mr. McCormac was a lifelong resident and although in failing health for some time death came unexpectedly. During his illness he was visited by Rev. B. J. MacDonald, pastor of St. George's Church, also by his own pastor, Rev. L. J. Ayers, who administered the last rites of the Catholic Church of which he was a devoted member. Left to cherish the memory of a kind and loving brother are Patrick and Mary on the old homestead, Mrs. Michael Shelly and Mrs. E. Barrett. Relatives and friends who will long remember his genial good humor and ready wit at all times. His funeral took place to St. Francis de Sales Church, Little Pond, Tuesday morning and despite bad roads was largely attended. The pall-bearers were Neil McCormac, Charles MacDonald, Stillman MacDonald, Joseph R. MacKenzie, John N. Jenkins and Vincent McDonald, all lifelong friends and neighbors of deceased. Hearse driver Joseph R. MacDonald. Funeral mass was sung by Rev. L. J. Ayers after which he was tendered a link to be proud of. BACK FROM HOLLYWOOD—Miss Mary W. Reynolds, former Bangor nurse, who nursed Mabel Stark, world famous animal trainer back to health when the latter suffered serious wounds from a vicious tiger in Bangor, returned to Maine yesterday from Hollywood. Miss Reynolds was flown to Hollywood to take part in a drama depicting the life of Miss Stark, in which the Bangor incident is prominently mentioned. Shown in the picture, left to right, are Miss Reynolds and Miss Stark. Miss Reynolds feels no affinity for the graceful feline being trained by Miss Stark.

the Eastern Maine General. The Hollywood trip pleased Miss Reynolds no end; it disturbed her pulse not one whit. Offered a chance either to see Miss Stark work or movie stars perform, she chose the former; after all, movie business was carefully rehearsed stuff but tigers don't always perform according to the script. She does not become bewildered by unusual circumstances. — Bangor Daily News.

work on the evening of Wednesday, April 26. She was back in Augusta today and ready to assume her duties at the Veterans' Hospital in Togus. Meanwhile, she had received and accepted an invitation from Miss Stark to watch the noted trainer at work, training tigers, as usual, at Thousand Oaks farms. She posed, although gingerly, with Miss Stark and a tiger, remembering, probably how Miss Stark looked when she entered
