

AVC Update

by Jill Hendsbee

As I endeavor to enlighten everyone as to the goings ons at the AVC, I realize this was not the best time to begin. We are in the midst of killer midterm week and therefore, there isn't much other than some serious studying going on. However, all the stress that is building has to be relieved somehow and there are some events up and coming.

For those of you who don't know, AVC has a lot of clubs! There's one for just about every species imaginable. Most of them are quite active, so here's an update for their immediate plans.

Our Pfizer rep., Angie Runnalls, is putting together a lecture in conjunction with the Bovine Club for November 3rd. will speak on Cow/Calf management that evening. If the topic interests you and you want to attend, drop Angie or myself a line.

The Small Ruminant Club is hoping to hold a lecture on camelid medicine and surgery on the 17th of November. I'll let you know when that is confirmed. In case you're wondering, camelids are things like llamas, alpacas and well, camels.

The Critical Care Club is arranging their annual "Blocked Cat Lab". It's usually a popular lab and generally only members get to attend, so if you haven't paid your dues yet you better get them in. This lab is tentatively being scheduled for November 10th.

I'm tempted to include details about siging up for Tango lessons with Wayne in radiology, but I think he's been punished enough already.

So with that said, I leave you all updated and befuddled.
