Canadian Styles By ILGWU To Be Shown In Montreal

MONTREAL - The Spring and Summer edition of the National Collection, Canada's only comprehensive preview of ready-to-wear fashions, will take place in Montreal Jan. 21.

The presentation will feature Canadian-made styles produced by some 500 Union Label houses across the nation. The National Collection is sponsored bi-annually by the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, whose 23,000 members produce most clothes worn by Canadian women.

ILGWU Vice President Bernard Shane said that the forthcoming preview is being co-ordinated again by Canadian fashion authority Jennifer Lindsay.

In keeping with the tradition established 18 months ago, fashion writers from across Canada attending the show will be asked to vote on outstanding styles seen in the National Collection. Winners will receive Union Label Fashion Awards for styling and craftsmanship.

More than 100 manufacturers from Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Vancouver will actually have styles in the show. Entries are being chosen by Mrs. Lindsay during a cross-country tour.

The ILGWU stages the National Collection as part of its consumer program to familiarize Canadian women with fashions bearing the Union Label which is sewn into Canadian-made garments by ILGWU workers as a symbol of quality, clean manufacturing and decent labor standards.

Twin Seafood Supreme Pairs Tuna, Shrimp

By themselves, shrimp and tuna are tasty staples. Paired in a velvety smooth sauce, they make a flavour-combination so good we call it "Twin Seafood Supreme."

The basis of the sauce is a undiluted evaporated whole milk (unsweetened). It is homogenized, Vitamin D-increased, sterilized, and is available in a new type easy-open can. The cost of a 16-oz. can is about 15 cents. It is a budget-buys.

Sheila McLellan, Halifax, has returned after spending a holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Al McLellan, Grand River.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beato and family, accompanied by Mrs. Beato's mother, Mrs. Thompson, returned to Kensington recently after spending the holiday season with relatives in Boston, Mass.

Stamps were also sent away, and needy local families were looked after.

A social hour followed and refreshments were served.

ELLEN'S DIARY

The Children Were Caught In Sleep's Restful Arms

"Would you read so that I too can hear it?" Alex queried, when we tucked him up in his blankets tonight, before we went on with Peter to the next bedroom, in the spell of child-sitting left to us in the house across the lane.

Prayers had been offered before this, heart to heart expressions, kneeling, young heads a row against a bed. To be present when children are at their devotions is, to our mind, similar to sharing in some solemn service of the Church where one is deeply aware that she breathes as holy air. We fancied then, that guardian angels came down to attend these small ones, as yet innocent and good. No word of the "Now-I-Lay-me" was omitted, though we did think that perhaps Peter had hurried his somewhat in the light of a pleasing interest to follow.

"Now I'll get the book for you" he said, before settling down on his pillow. "And how many chapters will you read?" "That will depend" we replied. "This had been an active day. He had helped his mother at her outdoor chores; had been with the farmers at the stables. He had also accompanied his father on that trip which leaves the stable cleanings now at a heap in a far field, where today an interesting incident appeared. "We baited a trap for that fox we see around" he reported later. And if Reynard should have a chance to be caught, there were two ways of looking at it: "I don't like to think of him in the trap," he concluded. "At the same time, I wouldn't want him to eat up an abby-lamb when they come!"

So to an appreciative audience we read the book set apart for a night when the two are left in our care: "Alice in Wonderland", a volume, which like the other immortals of the young years, never loses its charm, no matter how many times it is read... How quiet it was there in that house across the lane! No sound disturbed the night, other than Scampie's bark at the odd passing machine, or the beat of a plane over the valley. And the responding chuckles found along the lines. "Don't stop - read more!" Peter begged when we reached the end of a chapter. "Won't she, Alex?" he called. "There was no reply. We lost him too, presently. Eyeballs drooped, raised inquiringly, fell again, to remain closed. Like Alex, he was caught up in sleep's restful arms. We turned on the night-light, "for company", and came away down the stair.

The light from the house James kept, beamed across the night. We looked at the clock. It would be a while yet before Mack and his parents would return from the meeting in connection with the bee-keeping they and other Island farm-folks are pleased to attend. We added a stick to the fire, filled the kettle, and set it to heat for the cups that would-sooner or later round out the day. And come then to an easy chair, we picked up a book. Now the time of waiting would soon wing away!

"What have I been doing?" James repeats our question. "I read the papers. And then I watched TV. It's a pity. Ellen he offers, "that the best programs - and the world news comes in so late."

"And the old clock sighs a little wearily, and warns that a January day is about spent.

Until tomorrow - Diary - Good-night....

WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS Hampton UCW Officers Elected At Annual Meet

Mrs. George Dunford was hostess recently to 11 members of Hampton UCW for the annual meeting. Following the minutes, annual reports were given by the different secretaries. The retiring president, Mrs. Bill Myers, spoke briefly of the year's work and expressed her appreciation for co-operation given her by the members.

The election of officers for 1966 was conducted by Mrs. Jones, with the following results: president, Mrs. Win Bell; vice-president, Mrs. Bill Myers; secretary, Mrs. Murchison MacEachern; treasurer, Mrs. Norman MacLeod; supply secretary, Mrs. Bryer Jones; correspondence, Mrs. Clayton Morrison; social functions, Mrs. John Rogerson and stewardship, Mrs. Albert Best.

Following the election of officers, a candle-lighting service was presented by Mrs. Bill Myers assisted by Mrs. C. Morrison, Mrs. B. Jones, Mrs. C. Dunford, Mrs. N. MacLeod and Mrs. M. MacEachern.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. Rogerson with Mrs. Bill Cameron as devotional leader, and Mrs. G. Dunford, Mrs. Bryer Jones and Mrs. M. MacEachern on the food committee. At this meeting each member is asked to bring a dish towel to be placed in the Youth Centre.

Mrs. Nelson Squires welcomed the members of the Greenwich WI to her home for their January meeting.

The president gave a well-worded New Year's greeting, comparing the New Year to a big book - each page white and clean, her hope was that we keep our book clean and never regret reading any of its pages later on.

Mrs. Shirley Sutherland deflated the month of January as being derived from the "Roman god Janus", and as the theme of the meeting was "Health and Safety", roll call was responded to by 10 members, with a health and safety hint.

Mrs. Lorne MacLaren gave a talk on "Prevention Is The Best Antidote" and Mrs. Hubert Sanderson conducted a quiz on

BROOKFIELD WI

Eight members answered roll call and exchanged gifts at the recent meeting of the Brookfield Women's Institute.

Visiting and school committees gave their reports and it was decided to treat the school and pre-school children at their closing. Money is also to be donated to the TB League.

Articles were turned in for a layette for the Unitarian Service Committee and sewing and knitting were passed out for Red Cross work.

Mrs. David Andrew invited the members for the next meeting when the program committee will be Mrs. Ian MacEwen and Mrs. Gordon MacLeod.

Refreshments were served by the hostess at the close of the meeting.

MARY HAWORTH Lonely Women's List Could Include TV Addict's Wife

Dear Mary Haworth: Now that the lonely old maids, divorcees and widows have had their innings about the "5 o'clock curtain" that separates them from "meaningful" social life, I would like to introduce another type of outcast, the TV widow, my category.

Before TV it was radio, so you can see how long-standing my bereavement is. There is also a radio in the car. And on the rare occasions when my husband walks as far as the garage, he carries a transistor set.

How he survives his working day I'll never know, as the place isn't wired for music.

We never have company any more, not even our own children and other relatives, because he always made it clear that nothing shall interfere with his enjoyment of his program.

Conversation at table is a mixture of silence and braying loudness than the tuned-on commercials.

Yet my husband tells me I am lucky, that at least I know he's not in a bar or out with another woman. I say that any "other" woman who would want him would be pretty desperate for a man.

I am fully braced for your answer: Get family counselling or see a psychiatrist. After 25 years of the above, I don't doubt that I need such help. But what about my husband? I don't need a psychiatrist to tell me that he has tuned-out the whole wide world as well as his wife. Sincerely, A.F.

Dear A.F.: The tone of your grievance strongly implies that you get an emotional bang out of feeling inconsolably injured and annoyed in respect to your husband's stupefied and stupefying addition to radio and TV programs.

As I get the picture, you've long since arrived at a richly ripe state of smouldering outrage that gives your emotions so much exercise, of a negative sort that you'd probably involuntarily put up a fight against accepting a fortunate solution of the impasse, if one were offered.

The fact is, tiresome idiosyncrasies practiced by close associates, the more obstinately if opposed, as, for example, your husband's behavior - this kind of thing can be handled if one really makes up his mind not to get involved in a head-on power struggle with the willfully tiresome person.

On the surface, you may have settled for a go-along attitude as regards your husband's tuned-out performance. But at heart you are tense, seething, almost apologetically resistant to the malicious-mule quality of his deportment, it seems.

Which, if true, means that a much of your problem inheres in you, not him. It is a case of keeping far too many eggs in one basket. Or to put it another way, in your habitual mental rehearsal of your side of the argument, you feature him as the supposedly insurmountable hindrance and reports from the treasurer and other committees were read.

The school committee reported visiting Eglington school and a letter on health and welfare by Mrs. Roy Drimmen was read by secretary, Mrs. Bruce Stead.

A vote was taken on "Should women act as jurors on trials" and the majority were in favor.

Mrs. Fred MacKenzie reported two more boxes of used clothing had been forwarded to the USC depot Charlottetown.

Roll call was answered by 19 members with a get well or sympathy card and giving a healthy rule. The remainder of Red Cross work was distributed among the members and two contests were conducted by Mrs. George Wood, who also distributed some pamphlets on Canada Food Rules, School lunches, etc.

Since the last meeting the Fire protection fees were collected and passed in to Mrs. Genevieve Roach, Souris Town clerk. Receipts for same were given to the school secretaries.

A Bring and Buy Sale will be held at the February meeting at the home of Mrs. Lorne Dingwell. Refreshment committee will be Mrs. Claude MacKenzie and Mrs. John J. MacD on a roll and roll call answer "A household chore I enjoy".

Program for the month is on "Home Economics" with convener Mrs. Russell Mills and Mrs. Lucette MacDonald.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and committee in charge and a social hour spent.

BRISTOL

Gerald Barry, has his ad in this paper for several days for 70 girls and women for the Morell packing plant for the spring season Mr. Barry who knows the help from many years of experience will do the hiring but will not be foreman in the plant as he has retired from that some years ago; however, he will attend to the business end of looking after the fishermen and buying. The season looks as bigger and better than ever.

Lenord Ryan, was in the city last week on farm business as was Mr. Lyman McEwen on business in his line. He is manager and operator of the Bristol Garage and service station started a number of years ago.

John P. O'Brien, that old veteran of the seaways, says he will be at the shore again this spring but not as a fisherman. He will be on the security staff and later look after the salting and curing of codfish. He is the last of the older class who knows the way of salting fish for curing. The younger class have never learned this business.

The smelt fishing season is on here but very few are following the game nowadays. A few years ago practically every fisherman was a smelt man in winter. We like to recall the king of the smelt fishermen here, and we guess any place, the late Ronald Drake, who landed 320 boxes of smelts in one day on the bay ice. A box is 30 odd pounds. Mr. Drake, using bag nets and following the incoming tides claimed he lost even a greater haul when he was unable to lift the loaded net. He hooked his team onto the net and it broke under the weight of the fish, estimated at several hundred boxes. Mr. Drake, a fearless man on the ice, reaped a harvest from the sea in winter time along with being a busy farmer as well. Two sons still reside near the old home and operate the farms when his wife who resides in retirement in Bristol, can tell you many stories of her late husband's close shaves with the sea and the thousands of boxes of smelts he landed while she looked after a string of milk cows and other farm animals along with a large family in days long forgotten now.

When we look back at those who have done more than their share of work in this vicinity in the last years, we have to lift our hat to the women auxiliary of the Canadian Legion's Morell post. They have catered to parties, banquets, weddings and scores of other things, parades, meetings etc. We often wonder where would we be if it were not for this group of women in all age brackets who work hard in hand year in and out.

Sister Mary Gerard O.S.B., of the Benedictine Sisters, writes us from Kansas where she is posted this winter that it's nice to be here. It's like home again after a number of years in the hot, deep south where winter never comes. She was Teresa O'Brien and attended the old school here for sometime before entering Notre Dame Academy.

The high winds over the weekend caused raging seas and very high tides at the shore where the sea ice has not formed yet. Some damage is expected to the buildings at the seaside.
