

had become exceedingly unpopular will excite neither surprise nor regret in the present day. Very well, very well, indeed, Mr. Monitor, the picture is certainly drawn with great fidelity and felicity of touch; but to render it more effective we will add to it a sort of supplementary sketch and comparison of our own.

The power which the fallen dynasty exercised in this Island is precisely the same which the Tories seek now to re-establish in their own persons, and to perpetuate in their families; and should it again acquire the ascendancy, soon would it throw its folds around whatever popular institutions have been established and popular privileges obtained, and crush them as the fabled serpents from the ocean crushed the sons of Laocoon.

In sober truth, all irony apart, we cannot for the life of us conceive how they can possibly form to themselves expectations so extravagant, so absurd, unless they really look upon the great bulk of the people of this Colony as so stupidly dull, tame and slavish, that they would be quite satisfied even were they to be treated no better than beasts of burden, unless they really believe them to be so stupid as to regard despotism as a positive blessing, and hereditary bondage as the greatest good they can bequeath to their posterity.—Com.
