

MR. AND MRS. DONALD MACLEOD

Heather MacPhee Becomes Bride Of Donald MacLeod

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the North River Baptist Parsonage on March 18, 1966 when Heather Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell MacPhee, New Dominion, was united in marriage to Donald Alexander, son of Mr. and Mrs. Colin MacLeod of Bonshaw. Rev. T. W. Howard was the officiating clergyman.

For her marriage, the bride chose a street length dress of beige linen with neckline, yoke and long sleeves of lace. A cluster of flowers held her short veil of illusion and her only jewelry was a strand of pearls, a gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of white and yellow carnations.

The bride was attended by her sister, Fernie MacPhee, who was in a street length linen dress in deep pink trimmed with white lace. She wore a matching pill box and carried a bouquet of white and pink carnations.

David MacLeod, brother of the groom was the best man. Following the ceremony, a reception for approximately 55 guests was held at the Motel Charlottetown, West Royalty. The toast to the bride proposed by Rev. Howard was responded to by the groom, and a congratulatory telegram received from Toronto was read by the best man. Shirley MacLeod, sister of the groom, was in charge of the guest book.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. MacPhee wore a three-piece suit of navy blue and white with matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother, Mrs. MacLeod, chose a two-piece suit in beige and brown with matching accessories and her corsage was of white carnations.

Taste Of Own Medicine Should Wake Him Up

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 18 and I have a big problem. It concerns a boy whom I met last December. He has only one fault: He is conceited and it shows like a traffic light.

correcting six to 10 globe-trotting spinsters to nightclubs along with his wife, when their cruise ship stops at foreign ports. As you say, it is more his mistake than the aggressors'

In mid-February I had a letter from him, asking for a date a few days later. I answered, accepting. On the day of the date I had my hair done and was really on Cloud 9, feeling great.

He had said in his letter that he would see me at 7 p. m., but at 5 o'clock he telephoned to say that he was taking out another girl! I couldn't talk to him very well so I asked him to call back in 30 minutes. I never thought he would, but he did.

Maybe he did feel badly, or maybe he didn't. Anyway, I shouldn't give him another thought, I know. But I seem unable to bring it off.

The immediate problem is that, over the phone, I invited him to a sports event this month. He accepted, but I don't know whether he will appear. After my first flop I'm not sure that I could bear another.

My parents don't have a very high opinion of him now. And I don't exactly like what he did, though I do like him. In fact I have this tremendous crush on him. What should I do? Is there a solution to the situation. Please answer immediately.

S. L. DEAR S. L.: Assuming you are endowed with the qualities of mind and will that would enable you to learn from living, in terms of translating first-round upsets into second-round recoveries, I suggest that the self-respecting thing to do about Mr. Undependable is as follows:

Line up another boy, any reliable friend of yours, to be your guest-companion at the upcoming sports occasion.

Then, in the chancy event that Mr. Undependable checks in, at the 11th hour, to squire you, it is your turn to explain to him nicely that you never expected to see him again, hence had made other arrangements for the evening, so sorry, etc.

Or you might add that he is welcome to join the party if he has nothing better to do, supposing your other escort doesn't object.

By such tactical advance planning you would have some insurance, at least, against an ignominious sense of total desolation, if he fails to show a second time.

And should he show, you would be prepared to administer a lesson in manners, the point of which he could neither mistake nor logically protest. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: May I add a postscript to your sensible answer to RV, the harassed husband who dislikes es-quit, if he lets himself be pushed around, to suit their purposes.

My husband and I were faithful unto death to ailing first spouses, he for 35 years, I for 30. When we married we looked forward to travel, having done our duty by our late partners, sent our children through college and survived the long grind of bill paying.

We feel we have earned our sunset pleasures and we are resolved to enjoy life our way. These cruise-going female predators aren't about to find husbands prowling in North African nightclubs, any more than they will back home in Buffalo.

I know we've offended a few pushers, who've tried to latch on to us. But we have gained the friendship of other nicer people the sort we might like to see again when the cruise is over.

Sincerely, F. M. Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Guardian.

SEX and The Teen-age Girl

Are girls' emotions more complex than boys? What kind of girls do young men prefer to marry? How can the teen-age girl understand and cope with 'advances' from young men? In April Reader's Digest a noted Ph.D. discusses teen-agers and their sex problems. The article "Sex and the Teen-Age Girl" comes close to being essential reading for teen-agers of both sexes and their parents as well. Reader's Digest—now on newsstands everywhere.

Yank Pull Called Threat

TORONTO (CP)—Alphonse Oulmet, president of the CBC, said here he is concerned that Canadians may allow their bicultural difficulties to distract them from the graver threat of being slowly sucked into the "great American melting pot."

"Economically, culturally an in too many other fields... we have already reached a degree of dependency on the United States which is to mind completely adverse to our long-term national interests," he said.

In an address to the Canadian Club here, Mr. Oulmet said he is concerned with English Canada's over-dependency on the U.S. in "so-called cultural matters, and with similar pressures slowly building up in French Canada."

The Quebec revolution, he said, is not against the rest of Canada but against the province's own past.

The time may have come for all Canada to have a "quiet revolution" of its own, he said.

Teest of his speech was issued to the press in advance of delivery.
