The bidding:

2♥ Pass 3NT Pass
3♦ Pass 3NT Pass

Despite the difficulties associated with making what is called a blind lead, the problem should not be regarded as an insuperable one. Conclusions can often be reached which, though they cannot be accepted as gospel, can nevertheless be treated as reasonable.

The strongest indication of what to lead usually comes from information obtained during the bidding. The declarer and his partner, in the process of reaching their contract, cannot very well afford to be secretive about their respective holdings.

Thus, in the deal shown, South's bidding indicates a two-suit hand of sufficient strength to insist upon a game.

North's bidding is of a negative character and merely shows a preference for spades over hearts.

West, on lead, has great heart strength which may be neutralized if declarer is able to ruff heart losers in dummy.

To protect against this possibility West should open a trump. A good case can be made for opening the ace rather than a small trump, but the important point is that no other suit should be led.

Against either lead South cannot make the contract. A trump, continuation, as soon as West obtains the lead, settles declarer's hash. He must lose a spade and three hearts.

But if any other suit is opened, declarer is able to ruff a heart in dummy and make ten tricks.

Seems Younger Generation Needs A Doctor Of Its Own

By JOHN A. BARBOUR
NEW YORK (AP) Teen age, that generation with a mind of its own, apparently needs a doctor of its own.

One of the newest interests of American medicine is ephedrine, which is concerned with the adolescent — too old for temper tantrums and too young for stomach ulcers.

When you're only a child, you fall under the medical domain of the pediatrician.

But when you're a teen-ager, you may feel nobody cares. No one thinks your problems are very serious. No one offers special help.

NEED IS GREAT

Get the teen-ager, so deeply concerned with his growing, changing body, has a great need for help.

More pediatricians, internists and general practitioners are trying to provide for these special problems by setting aside one or two days a week for teens and their special problems.

Some teen-age medical clinics have been set up by hospitals. Harvard University is offering a post-graduate course for doctors in teen-age medicine—the ephedricians.

Physically, a teen-ager's problems are few. One doctor called adolescence the healthiest time of life.

EMOTIONAL TURMOIL

Teen-agers are going through a sort of emotional storm — desiring on the one hand to conform to their fellows, and on the other to win independence as young adults.

Much of a teen-ager's trouble may arise from his great and normal desire to be socially acceptable in the eyes of his contemporaries. Some of the normal problems of growth keep getting in the way.

The pimples of acne visit most teen-agers, more often boys than girls. Doctors feel that perhaps they relate to the stimulation of sex hormones in the maturing body.

Teen-agers have oilier complexions and this makes them more susceptible to blackheads, and other skin problems.

But one of the biggest problems doctors note with teen-agers is the one of growth itself. The most frequent question is: "Am I normal?"

Doctors can only answer that in adolescence, normal covers a very wide range.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
