

9,235 Scientists Ask For End To Nuclear Bomb Tests

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP) Nobel Prize winner Linus Pauling submitted to the United Nations Monday a petition signed by 9,235 scientists calling for an international agreement to stop nuclear bomb tests now.

The scientists of 44 countries include 36 Nobel Prize winners, 101 members of the U.S. National Academy of Sciences, 35 fellows of the Royal Society of London, and 216 members of the Soviet Academy of Sciences.

The 1954 Nobel Prize winner in chemistry told reporters that in his opinion the list of signers "represents the opinion of majority of the scientists of the world." Dr. Pauling is head of the division of chemistry and chemical engineering at the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena.

He turned the petition over to Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld. The UN takes no action on such documents but makes them available to member governments on request.

DAMAGE TO HEALTH
The petition declares:

"Each nuclear bomb test spreads an added burden of radioactive elements over every part of the world. Each added amount of radiation causes damage to the health of human beings all over the world and causes damage to the pool of human germ plasma such as to lead to an increase in the number of seriously defective children that will be born in future generations."

Referring to the U.S. declaration it is trying to develop a clean hydrogen bomb, Pauling said "it will never be done."

Among the signers of the petition are British mathematician and philosopher Bertrand Russell, winner of a Nobel Prize in literature, and two winners of Nobel Peace Prizes, Lord Boyd-Orr of Britain and Dr. Albert Schweitzer of France.

The United States has announced it will agree to a ban on nuclear weapons tests if there is prior agreement, with controls, to stop production of fissionable material for military purposes.

Williamson's Sterling Estate Is Not Likely To Be Frozen

LONDON (CP) — Canadian individuals or institutions who may ultimately share in the multi-million-dollar estate of the late Dr. John Williamson of Montreal have little reason to fear sterling area exchange restrictions.

This is the opinion of Tanganyika government representatives in London and officials of the United Kingdom treasury office.

One beneficiary may be Montreal's McGill University. The wealthy Montreal geologist, who died in Tanganyika last week, is known to have retained a high regard for McGill, where he had a brilliant record as a student before going to Africa where he founded his diamond empire.

It is not known in London when information concerning disposal of Williamson's estate will be made public. Some British newspapers estimate his personal fortune at more than £15,000,000 ($42,000,000).

Although Tanganyika is a colony rather than a self-governing dominion, foreign exchange controls are administered by the colony's executive administration rather than United Kingdom authorities.

Since Dr. Williamson was a resident of Tanganyika, decisions regarding bequests made to dollar areas will be purely a matter for the local administration.

Said a Tanganyika representative: "This is a somewhat exceptional case. But, generally speaking, most controls are favorably disposed towards bequests."

A treasury spokesman said it is unlikely that Tanganyika exchange regulations concerning bequests differ materially from those in the U.K., "and they cause little let or hindrance."

Under U.K. regulations, cash remittances from an estate are limited to £500 to each beneficiary outside the country. But sterling securities may be bequeathed in unlimited amounts and may be converted into cash without difficulty in the free market for blocked sterling. In addition, there is no restriction on the income accruing from such securities.
