Asiatic Cholera.

THE condition of Russian Jews who pass through Paris for America is extremely filthy, and fears are expressed that they will bring cholera to this continent. They have already carried it into England, where it has made some progress. Its presence in the crowded cities of the Motherland, is cause for the gravest apprehensions and the deepest regret. But if strict precautions are used it can hardly reach Canada this year. The disease develops in from twenty-four hours to three days. Persons infected in Europe can not, therefore, possibly reach America before the disease has shown itself. If the quarantine officers are sufficiently careful and honest and firm, they can prevent the landing of passengers from any infected ship. The season is now well advanced; the cool weather is here. Consequently there is no necessity to be scared about the matter—a "scare" is one of the most effective aids to the march of cholera.

The dread disease almost invariably originates in India. It was mentioned by Hippocrates (400 B.C.) and by other ancient physicians. It usually recurs every twelve years, as a result of the Hindoo festivals at the great temple. It is engendered in the filthy tents of the pilgrims who number millions. Every successive epidemic of cholera has been carried up the Persian Gulf from Bombay, Surat, Kurachee and ports on the West coast of India. In the Bombay Presidency there are ninety-four shrines, to which large pilgrimages are made and from which the disease is brought to the sea coast and spread throughout the civilized world.

The great point in the whole course of the disease is not to be too busied or agitated, or anxious to do too much and too quickly. Absolute rest and warmth, the careful use of food and weak stimulants, aided by small quantities of astringents and opiates will, it is stated, save a good proportion of cases.

Educational.

WITH the close of the holidays comes such a demand for school books that pater familias is apt to change the Scriptural quotation and say "Of the getting of books there is no end." Certainly our children will not suffer from want of a sufficient number and variety of subjects for study in the schools.

It is pleasing to note that the number of children in attendance is well maintained. At Upper Prince Street School there were yesterday 513; at Queen Square School, 245, and at West Kent Street School, 364. The excessive number at Upper Prince Street School is due to several causes, to wit: popularity of the teachers, excellence of situation, and most of all, perhaps, the fact that parents generally like to have their girls taught apart from the boys. We have two public schools for boys, only one for girls. Girls as well as boys are taught in West Kent Street School; but some of the boys are rough and rude, and the girls prefer to be taught apart. The consequence is that Prince Street School is overcrowded. Either the schoolrooms must be enlarged or the trustees must exert their authority and force some of the parents to send some of their girls to the other schools. Co-education is not successful, in practice, in Charlottetown.

We cannot forget, in this connection, that Roman Catholic girls do not, as in Halifax and St. John, obtain instruction in schools receiving the aid of the Government. There, if we mistake not, the nuns are permitted to pass the examination and receive salaries from the Provincial and Civic treasuries. Here, this has not, heretofore, been done. Our Roman Catholic boys have all along been taught in a separate public school,—and nothing has happened. The Roman Catholic girls of Halifax and St. John have been taught in separate public schools, with the convents for school rooms and the nuns for teachers,—and, we are assured, peace and harmony prevails. More than that, no one there feels—as we in Charlottetown must feel—that one portion of the community does not receive its fair share of the amount expended out of the public treasury for purposes of education. It, certainly, is hard and unfair that the plan which has been successfully adopted here in respect to the education of Roman Catholic boys cannot be adopted in respect to the education of Roman Catholic girls,—that Protestant girls have their separate school, supported by the public, while Roman Catholic parents—some of them the poorest of our citizens—are compelled to support the separate schools in which their daughters are educated. If this unfairness be due to a refusal on the part of the nuns to take licenses as public school teachers, no blame can attach to the public. But it is much to be desired—for the sake of fair play—that an arrangement be made similar to that which has been successfully carried out in St. John.

A neatly printed calendar of Prince of Wales College and Normal School for 1892-1893 has been published. The session begins on Tuesday next, the 6th September. A three years' course is provided. The curriculum of the third year is equal to that followed by freshmen at a university. That of the second year is adapted to students who desire to obtain a teacher's license of the first class. Graduating diplomas will in future be of three grades, 1st. An Honor Diploma will be given to those who have taken the full course of three years, or the second and third years, having by examination been admitted to the second year, and who have in the written examinations of the third year obtained at least 75 per cent. of the attainable number of marks in the above mentioned subjects. 2nd. A first-class ordinary diploma will be given to those who have taken the first and second years' course, and have made at least 75 per cent. of the number of marks attainable in the written examinations for the second year. 3rd. A second class ordinary diploma will be given to those who, under the same circumstances, have gained at least 60 per cent. in the examinations in the subjects mentioned.

St. Dunstan's College prospectus and course of studies is also at hand. We note that the Rev. Dr. Morrison has been advanced to the position of Rector, and that the Faculty includes ten professors. The curriculum includes a preparatory course intended to qualify students to enter either the commercial course or the classical course. Mathematics, physics, chemistry, natural history, philosophy, and religion are studied at St. Dunstan's.

An Acknowledgment.

SIR,—I beg permission through the columns of your paper to express my sincere thanks to the members of the Caledonian Club and the citizens of Charlottetown generally, for their extreme kindness to me while present at the Scottish Gathering held at Charlottetown on the 10th of August last

It being my first visit to this noble city, I imagined I would receive a stranger's reception. I found, however, the case different to my expectations. I must truly say that I received a reception there which would more than compare with anything given me among my own friends at home. The Caledonian Club is a club which every loyal Scotch heart in P. E. I. should be proud of. It is certainly one of the most Scottish like in the Dominion, and with such a splendid lot of officers in charge it is bound to prosper. I hope, if Providence will permit, to be present again, and take a part in the grand auld Scottish music.

These include a photograph of Mr. Stavert's house, which was so badly wrecked by the lightning, some zinc from the gutters, a piece of the bedstead in which Mr. Stavert was sleeping at the time of the disaster, a piece of the pillow upon which his head rested, and a splinter of wood from the house picked up about 150 feet away. All may be seen at Johnson's Drugstore.
