HELP WIN SECOND STRAIGHT

Twins Bounce Sandy Koufax

By JIM CULLEN

Minnesota Twins bounced Sandy Koufax, Dodger's ace hurler, out of the second game of the World Series yesterday afternoon at Bloomington and went on to defeat the Los Angeles club 5-1. The scene now shifts to the west coast and the host team will be behind the eight ball trailing 2-0 in the best-of-seven championship series.

The Twins scored two runs in the sixth inning of the second game, but the Dodgers rallied in the seventh to score a run and pull within one run of the Twins.

The Minnesota club delivered the crushing blow in the seventh with Zollo Versalles belting a triple with two men out and nobody on base. Versalles then forced Ron Perranoski to make a wild throw and he scored to give the Twins a 3-1 stranglehold.

Koufax was lifted in the seventh inning when the Dodgers needed a pinch-hitter to attempt to bring the tying run across the plate. Don Drysdale was selected for the assignment and Kaat took only three pitches to dispose of Drysdale and retire the side.

We heard one fan say following yesterday's game that he could imagine what was running through Drysdale's head as he went to the dugout following his feeble pinch-hitting attempt at the plate. "Well I couldn't pitch yesterday and today I couldn't hit, things are really bad."

The Dodgers played sloppy ball yesterday and were charged with three errors as well as Perranoski being charged with a balk. (In World Series play!) The battling Twins played flawless ball. Errors can make or break a team and the Twins forced the NL champs to commit three costly ones.

The Twins accomplished quite a feat in itself when they forced the great Sandy Koufax to be lifted from the game and there is no doubt that they are in the driver's seat as they head for Los Angeles.

Things will be pretty sad for Johnny 'Snag' Squarebriggs today as he had the Twins washed right down the river in his pre-series forecast. Ken MacDonald was all riled up over Johnny's disregard for the Twins, but like numerous other fans he wasn't sure enough of the Twins to take Mr. Squarebriggs on with a little side-bet.

Kenny is leaving for Toronto today or otherwise we imagine 'Snag' would have to invest in a set of ear-plugs as Mr. MacDonald is a very enthusiastic American League supporter.

Tid Bits From Here And There

Some people have to learn the hard way. Gordon Whitlock, a friend of this columnist (he probably won't be after he reads today's column) stated last night: "the Dodgers are going to win the next four games straight in the World Series." Gordie follows major league baseball relatively close and should have some sound ideas on the subject, but we are afraid he is allowing his emotions to take over and rule his alleged thinking apparatus, in this instance.

The Rustico golf club has two tournaments planned for the long weekend which gets underway this Friday. The first Island Interscholastic tournament will be held Saturday with competitions for boys and girls of all ages attending Island schools. Monday will be the first open tournament at the Rustico club. Both these tournaments will be 18-hole affairs scheduled to get underway at 9:00 a.m.

We would like to take this opportunity to wish Howard Murchison a speedy recovery. Howard performed with the BIS Shamrocks in the City softball league this summer and suffered a leg injury in a playoff tilt with the National Park All-Stars. We understand that Murchison's leg is in a cast and that he will not be fit to work (he is a carpenter) for approximately three months. These are the type of incidents that are tough when a person is playing a game for the love of the sport.

Singalong, a trotter formerly owned by Charles Smith, Kinkora has been sold to Horace Willis, Kingston and George Henderson, Montreal for a reportedly high price. The new owners plan to race the trotter out of Blue Bonnets in Montreal.

8-3, the Cuban right-hander who missed seven weeks of the season because of a back operation.

Asked about Allison's catch, Mele said, "it had a great deal to do with our winning. It was a key play. I didn't think he had a chance to get it."

Walter Alston said Koufax was not losing his stuff and he would not have taken him out for a pinch hitter in the seventh if Roseboro had not come through with a single. With a chance to tie or go ahead on a base hit, Alston sent up Drysdale to bat for Sandy.

Asked what he considered the turning point of the game, Alston smiled and said:

"When it stopped raining."

HUNTER'S CORNER

Island Duck, Goose Season Only One Week Away

When this column appears in print the opening of the duck and goose season will be only one week away. A number of duck hunters refused to take my comments regarding the scarcity, bordering close to the non-existent border, of our local black ducks. Those who have been out looking their old hunting grounds over and selecting their 'blind' location for the opening morning have returned with disbelief written on their faces . . . they had to see it with their own eyes — the big Zero mark. Several parties never sighted a single black duck and about half as many teal as in former years. One hunter saw three in his territory and another group seven ... one of which could have been a Pintail. The only place where any black ducks worth the name with respect to numbers, was reported in the Cardigan Causeway ... an approximate 300.

This columnist was raised in the heart of the black duck territory and in line with the flight from Pownal Bay, Irving's Bar and the St. Peter's Island flats to the Old Home Lake, Wisner's Dam and Pisquid Pond. This season I never saw a single duck in flight on this Flyway. On the old Mount Albion Fur Company property there was a large beaver dam that always was a top dam for black ducks. Twelve years ago I rebuilt this dam and it now covers an approximate 50 acres of typical duck terrain. Heavy flag growth covers a large portion of this acreage and this in turn is host to two creeks that wend their tortuous way through it. In addition it has a number of small ponds, set like blue gems, amid the greenery. In 1962 we had a bumper crop of black ducks and this Dam — we call it Pat's Dam because the land on which it is built was formerly owned by Patrick — we called him Paddy — White.

1962 was the black duck year with respect to this dam. I have witnessed a ceiling of black ducks ... over one thousand at a conservative estimate with half as many teal in a lower strata. 1963 saw an approximate 60 per cent drop in numbers and last year, 1964 ... a mere skeleton flight. This year four blacks were the sum and total observed at this dam. I figured that there must be more lying dogo amid this natural duck heaven. Saturday week My partner and I took a boat and poled our way along the narrow creek channels and through the open waterways and ponds, set like blue gems amid the greenery. We never saw a duck or any 'roosting' sign. Not a feather or any other mark on the numerous green hummocks. Not even a single teal or teal feather. The black ducks are not to be seen this season in many sections.

A lot of duck hunters are asking questions on who recommended the duck season this year. . . October 15th to December 15th with a daily bag limit of six and possession limit of 12. No inland hunting of ducks should have been allowed and hunting them legal only on salt water. I wonder who is going to accept this responsibility. Reports are being received daily about the illegal hunting that is rampant in the province this season. I have been informed that in many areas it has been going on for three weeks at least. I asked three different duck hunters, who respect our game law regulations — migratory game birds included—why they did not inform on those observed in open violation of the Migratory Birds Convention Act. I received this enlightening information: "If the minimum fine was $50.00 and costs plus confiscation of the firearm involved 'Yes' ... for a ten dollar fine and administered with no specific warning regarding such actions in future the answer is 'No' ". The sixty-five question at the moment is: "Where do we go from here".

What's the use of advertising?

well, it makes Sally Campbell's life a lot easier

Advertising, it's been said, keeps trying to foist off on us a lot of things we don't need. Like refrigerators, freezers, electric floor polishers—and automatic washers.

It's true we don't absolutely have to have these things. In a sense, they're luxury items. But just try to tell Sally Campbell or any other housewife, that her automatic washer is a luxury.

Oh, we could probably get along without cars and vacuum cleaners and electric lights if we had to. Millions of people did for many thousands of years. But why should we? Is scientific progress something that should be kept secret?

Advertising, you see, is just a way of letting all of us know what's new and different and better in the world today. It's a way of telling us about the things that can help make our lives a little easier, a lot more fun.

And when you buy an automatic washer, a new refrigerator, or a car, you raise your standard of living a notch or two. You put money in circulation. And you help create jobs. So everybody's standard of living goes up.

It's something to think about next time you pick up your daily newspaper. The ads you see there are actually helping you maintain and improve your standard of living. And they're making all of our lives a lot easier. Just ask Sally Campbell.
