Remedy for the Horn Fly.

O B WADMAN, of Crapaud, writes: "After trying many experiments this summer on my own cow, I have at last discovered a cheap and substantial remedy. Cod oil, petroleum, coal oil, etc, should not be used, as they are injurious to the cattle, and I am persuaded that farmers who have used those remedies will, after examination, find a great many sores." He will supply the remedy for 40 cts per gallon, which will be sufficient quantity for twenty cows. One application will last for ten or twelve days. Will mail receipt free by enclosing three-cent stamp for reply.

A Broken Heart.

A little china figure
On a little bracket sat,
His little feet were always crossed,
He wore a little hat;
And every morning, fair or foul,
In shine or shadow dim,
A pretty little housemaid came
And softly dusted him.

She took him up so gently,
With such a charming air,
His china soul was melted quite,
He loved her to despair.
All day he sat and thought of her,
Until the twilight came,
And in his china dreams at night,
He breathed her little name.

One day while being dusted,
In his joy he trembled so,
To feel her little fingers, that,
Alas! she let him go.
In vain she tried to grab him back,
Fate willed it they should part;
He fell against the fender edge
And broke his little heart.

She gathered up his fragments,
And she told a little lie,
Expounding to her mistress how
The cat had made him die.
And on the following morning, when
The shutters back she thrust,
She spoke his little epitaph:
"There's one thing less to dust."
—Pall Mall Magazine.

THE CAPTAIN'S WIFE.

Strum had never ceased to regret that he had been compelled to leave the army. Just why he left was not known, but there was a general agreement that it was on account of a duel. It was known that he had killed a civilian named Letherton, the son of a prominent judge. Strum was a captain. Once he distinguished himself by leading a desperate charge against the Sioux Indians, and the road to promotion was easy, but then came trouble, and he left the army. He was rather gruff, a typical cavalryman, but he could be entertaining. Women called him a charming oddity; men were inclined to let him have his own way. And he had his own way at Louisville, when he married Agnes Logan. But society wondered as to the devices he must have employed to win her. She was beautiful, and was at least fifteen years younger than himself. She had been exceedingly, though innocently gay, and it seemed that he had suddenly sobered her.

Strum would not consent to live in a city. A semi-solitude, he said, was man's only fit abode. "I am simply existing in the hope that a war may come, and man can wait with more patience in the country than in town," he declared.

"But how about your wife?" some one good humoredly asked. "Is she, too, waiting for a war?"

"She has placed her life in my hands," the captain answered, "and it is her duty to go with me, to make my home agreeable."

So he took his wife to the Indian Territory and settled upon a picturesque strip of land lying along the Arkansas line. Here he built a house among the graceful trees, and here at evening he sat with his wife on the verandah, looking out over the red man's romantic country.

One evening he said: "Agnes, I met a man to-day whom I knew a good while ago. He served as newspaper correspondent during one of the Indian wars and I became much attached to him."

"I didn't know that you formed attachments," she replied.

"Oh, I don't, but once in a great while they form themselves, and when they do they are strong. I never reason with a friendship. It must be prompted by instinct or I'll have nothing to do with it. I am really fond of Huley."

A TYPICAL CAVALRYMAN.

"What is his name?"

"George Huley. I'll bring him over some time. I think you'll like him."

"Oh, I suppose it will be my duty to like him."

"I don't know as to that. But at least you must treat him with respect."

"I can do that and not half try," she laughed. "When will he be out?"

"Don't know. I asked him, but he didn't appear to be much concerned. I told him about you, too."

"And still he was unconcerned? Well, that is surely a compliment to me."

"But he meant no disrespect, I'm sure. The truth is, I don't think he cares much for women."

"Perhaps women don't care much for him."

"I don't know. But he's a devilish handsome fellow, and I know he's game."

"And that means a great deal to you."

"What! Being game? Surely. It's a man's noblest quality! It has made the world, lifted woman; has done everything. Why, if the ghost of my grandfather should appear and tell me that the old man was a horse thief I would say, 'Sorry to hear it, Mr. Ghost, but perhaps it couldn't be helped, and therefore I am ready to forgive;' but if he should tell me that the old man was not game I would hurl a chunk through his contemptible shade."

"Captain, you ought to be ashamed of yourself," she cried.

"No, my dear, a man ought never be ashamed to tell the truth."

"Yes, but there are times when silence is nobler than the truth. Silence is the companion of suffering, and there is true religion in suffering, for the Saviour sadly smiled upon it."

He turned about in his chair, and looked steadily at her. The sun was gone, it was almost dusk, but he could see that her face was deeply sad.

"Why, Agnes, what is the matter?"

"Nothing."

"Yes, something. What is it? Have I said anything to wound you?"

"No, nothing has been said."

"Then I must say that I'll be hanged if I understand you. Just now you were as lively as a cricket; now you are in the dumps Agnes; that's no way to make a home cheerful."

"Perhaps not."

"Perhaps not," he repeated. "I indulge in no perhapses. I know it isn't. But come we'll have some music."

A few evenings later George Huley came home with the captain. He was dignified and thoughtful, and during the evening he addressed but few remarks to the mistress of the house. Once when the captain playfully said that women were truer than men, Huley turned to Mrs. Strum and asked:

"Do you think so?"

"They are nearly always as true as they are permitted to be," she answered. Circumstances would make a saint a liar."

He made no reply. He silently smoked his cigar; it was evident that the hostess and the visitor were not pleased with each other.

During the three months that followed Huley was several times a guest at the captain's house, but never did

I'LL BE HANGED IF I UNDERSTAND YOU

he loosen the reserve that had at first tightened about him. One evening the captain was to drive into Fort Smith to take him out home. He did drive in, but not to bring Huley out. Mrs. Strum was ill.

"Old fellow, I'm devilish sorry," the captain said.

"Oh, it can't be helped. Some other time will do as well."

Two weeks passed. The captain's wife was worse. One evening the captain drove rapidly to town.

"Old man," said he, huskily, addressing his friend, "my wife is dying. She has sent me for you—must see you. Get in."

Without saying a word Huley got into the buggy. And not a word was spoken during the drive.

When Huley entered the room the woman was nearly gone. She motioned him to the bedside, motioned him to kneel; and he knelt by the bedside. She put her arm about his neck, whispered in his ear and the captain, standing near, drew back with a gasp.

It was all over. A neighbor stood in the door, hat in hand. His wife was offering her services.

"Both of you step out a moment," the captain said, and turning to Huley, who stood leaning against the mantelpiece, he sternly added, "You stay here."

Huley bowed. The man and his wife withdrew. The captain closed the door, walked across the room, opened a drawer, took out two pistols, placed them on a table, and looking hard at Huley, remarked:

"Here or at the grave?"

"As you say."

"She will be buried Wednesday. At the grave—Wednesday night—ten o'clock. Good night."

* * * * * *

As the captain approached the grave he saw Huley seated on a bench under the trees. The moon was full. He walked up and, without speaking, sat down upon the bench. He saw clay clinging to Huley's knees. The captain took out two pistols and placed them upon the grass. They caught a gleam from the moon. For a time there was silence. The captain spoke:

"And your indifference was put on?"

"Yes."

"You met her alone—you deceived me?"

"No."

"Will you defend yourself?"

"No."

"You will simply let me shoot you?"

"Yes."

"When did you meet her?"

"Before you did."

"Huh! What did she say to you when—when she put her arm about your neck?"

"She told me why our engagement had been broken. It was all a mistake—a cruel persecution, but she did not learn the truth until after she was married, and then she was too noble to speak of it."

"Huh! Did she tell you that she loved you?"

"Yes."

The captain reached over and took up one of the pistols. "There you are," he said, pointing to the other one. Huley got up and kicked the pistol. It fell on the grave. He sat down. The captain spoke. "You loved her?"

"Yes."

"And you will not defend yourself?"

"I will not."

"I see. You want to be with her—you want me to kill you. I will see you damned first. Good night."

Success at Last.

Tackleton—I came near being struck with a bad quarter yesterday.

Von Bumer—Couldn't ou pass it?

Tackleton—Not for a long time. The first man I tried it on was an elevated ticket agent, and he refused it with scorn.

Von Blumer—Why didn't you try it on a druggist? Their profits are so great they're likely to be careless in money matters.

Tackleton—I did, but it wasn't any use. Then I tried to buy a newspaper with it, but the boy wouldn't have it. I went in to buy a drink, but that wouldn't do. I was almost discouraged, old man:

Von Blumer—I should say you might have been. But you finall passed it, didn't you?

Tackleton (proudly)—Oh, yes!

Von Blumer—On whom?

Tackleton—On a friend of mine.

The Schr. Homans, of Gloucester, with 125 barrels of mackerel, caught by hook and line was also there at same time. The Captain of this schooner, Eliphalet Wharff, had to go home on account of ill health. The first officer is now in charge. At Hawkesbury, the Homans on her way down, landed a sick seaman who was sent back in the steamer, but died before reaching home. Mackerel are reported scarce all along the coast, though some of the shore fishermen on the southern side of the Magdalene Islands have done exceedingly well, having caught more mackerel this season than for some years back.

HAMILTON, Sept. 9.—A very large increase has lately taken place in the sale of the specific remedy for complaints of the liver, and Dodd's Kidney Pills are in great demand. There are no complaints either from druggists or the public. The druggists being so near Toronto, the headquarters for distributing, are never in any danger of running out of the medicine for long, no matter how large the demand may be, and the public has long been thoroughly satisfied as to the valuable qualities of the pills, and the manner in which they invariably effect a cure.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ar

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Priestley's

BLACK DRESS FABRICS

"Are they not exquisite in their soft richness?" is the constant remark of ladies touching Priestley's famous black dress goods. And that is the truth, but it is not the whole description, for they have a character for refinement, for wearing and draping quality, which no other dress goods can lay claim to. The Priestley's appear to have gathered up all their excellences, and concentrated them in "Eudora," the latest black dress fabric they have given to the world. In every respect equal to the famous Henriettas, it surpasses them in extra width, and weight, and in dust-repelling quality. It is wrapped on "The Varnished Board" and Priestley's name is stamped on every five yards.
