The rainbow has always been of good cheer to farmers because when there is a rainbow, there has been rain for the crops. Another good friend of farmers is H. & N.'s "BLACK TWIST" CHEWING because its stimulating, friendly flavor and lasting goodness help to smooth the furrows of care.

THE FIRE BIRD

(By RICHARD CAROL)

Parquet was satisfied that the death of Abdel es Sayed Zarab was due to misadventure—till the bim-bashi called on him a few weeks later.

"Sorry, to trouble you again about that affair, Mr. Michael," he apologized, "but there's another question or two I'd like to ask you."

John Michael's face set grim.

"By all means, Inspector," he replied quietly.

"Well, Mr. Michael, you remember you told us that Abdel Zarab was visiting your flat that night for the first time?"

John nodded. "That is so."

"And at two o'clock in the morning?" The Inspector raised his eyebrows. "Rather a strange time for a first visit, Mr. Michael?"

"The fact remains that it was so."

"Mr. Michael, how long had you known Abdel Zarab?"

"I met him that evening for the first time."

"Then what was the reason for the visit, Mr. Michael?"

John Michael shrugged his shoulders.

"We met, we chatted, had a drink or two at Mannerings. I suppose we got sort of confidential, and I suggested that he might come up to my place for a night-cap."

The Inspector seemed to consider a moment.

"Mr. Michael, I'll put my cards on the table. We've had our eye on that wealthy young man for some time. We were almost certain he was one of the heads of the dope smuggling ring but we could never get any definite proof. His death gave us the opportunity to go through his things."

The Inspector nodded with satisfaction.

"Yes, that's where all his money came from. I just wanted to satisfy myself that you weren't mixed up in any way."

"I understand, Mr. Michael." But he only thought he did. For John made no mention of how, as he stood behind Abdel Zarab, facing the gate through which they had entered, he had remarked quietly to him as they stopped at the sixth floor:

"Do you mind opening the gate. The latch is just on your right."

No, John Michael never touched him. Abdel just stepped out into the darkness of the well-and-death.

Sonia, the Fire Bird? She is happy again in Hungary with her husband. She never came to Cairo again, but she has written often to dear John, for ever thanking him, little knowing, for all he did to help her. John Michael asks nothing more.

Enclose Fox Pens with FROST CHAIN LINK FABRIC GALVANIZED AFTER WOVEN

Galvanizing after weaving gives Frost Chain Link Fabric far greater resistance to rust. Every part of every wire is covered by a heavy, smooth coat of tight-adhering zinc that positively prevents attack by rust-forming moisture.

That is why it makes truly economical enclosures for fox ranches. Frost Chain Link is stronger, too, than ordinary wire. The design and weave gives it greater flexibility. Made in widths from 18 in. to 12 ft. . . . several gauges. Write for free samples.

Birthday Greetings

(By The Canadian Press)
To Ken Doraty, the "little poison" of the International Hockey League. He played last season for Cleveland Palouca. Born in Shilleville, Ont., 30 years ago tomorrow, Doraty proved to be a regular and helped the Pats win the Canadian junior title in 1934. He turned pro in 1935 and crashed the headlines in 1933, scoring Toronto's deciding goal that eliminated Boston in the National Hockey League finals.

Canada was second in goals with 78,990, United States being first with 60,616. A year ago the disparity between the British imports of hams from Canada and the United States was much greater, 67,578 cwt. being received from the former and 119,100 from the latter.
