THE COURAGE OF MOTHER LOVE

When danger threatens those held dear, For self a mother knows no fear.

to be seen by those hated two-legged folk whom she feared as much as she hated.

At the edge of the Green Forest stood Mother Bear looking out at the home of those whom she had learned to fear, and so to hate.

Mother Bear was trying to make up her mind what to do. She had hunted all through the Green Forest for her lost Cubs, two little black imps who had disappeared and so had become lost.

She hurried to the shed and found the door.

was going straight toward a farmyard. She walked through a garden. She climbed the fence into another garden, and crossed it. So she reached a farmyard in which were several buildings, among them an old shed. It was from that shed that the bawling of those little Bears was coming.

She hurried to the shed and found the door. It was closed and there was no way for her to open it. She called to the imps inside. Their bawling stopped and was replaced by little cries of pleasure.

PAINT A ROOM WITH KEM-TONE FOR THE PRICE OF TWO PAIRS OF NYLONS

Contract Bridge By Josephine Clubertson WHY GUESS? South could have insured his slam in the following hand by running a very slight risk. Instead, he relied on a sheer guess - and went wrong.

The bidding: South West North East 1 NT Pass 3 Pass 4 NT Pass 5 Pass 6 NT Pass 7 Pass

West selected his natural opening lead, the king of spades. South won, drew three rounds of trumps, and then, hearing in mind West's spade overall, decided to "place" the key-card diamond queen with West. So he cashed the diamond ace, then finessed the jack. East, who had been feeling pretty low about the whole thing, lost no time in producing the diamond queen, and his spade return settled the matter for down one.

South was rather indiscreet when he relied on such slender evidence as West's spade overall to place the queen of diamonds. Moreover, South didn't have to do any guessing about the diamond situation - he could have used the following plan with virtually no risk.

When West failed to the second trump lead, South should not draw the third round - there a crying need for dummy's third trump. The logical move was to cash the king and ace of clubs, and then, hearing in mind West's spade overall, to place the queen of diamonds. (Only if West had started with six clubs would this maneuver go wrong, by incurring a ruff on East's part.) Then, it would be safe to ruff away one of dummy's low clubs and to lead a diamond to the king in order to ruff dummy's last club (in case West had held four clubs).

Now, with the stage properly set, South should simply exit with the spade jack. West, in with the queen, would have a sorry choice of returns. If he led another spade, South would discard the diamond ten while ruffing on the board; if West elected to get out with a diamond, the lead would come up to South's A-10 for an automatic finesse.
