LOVE FINDS A WAY.
 BY JEANNETTE H. WALWORTH.
 Copyright, 1899, by Jeannette H. Walworth.

He was a struggling young lawyer then, waiting for his first client. She was the handsomest girl in the country and the richest. Before she had been home a half year they were engaged to be married. Before she had been home a whole year she was dead of pleurisy, contracted by going to a come out party at Butterworth's, ten miles from Broxton, wearing her ball dress and slippers in the carriage.

As Miss Malvina had not come to woman's estate without achieving perfect familiarity with the melancholy fate of beautiful Lucetta Broxton, she did not intermit the motion of her needle to exclaim or bemoan over the threadbare story.

"Horace Matthews was married in less than two years after to a girl who had expectations that were never realized, and Rufus was married a month later. Both of them lost their wives about six years later within a month of each other. Queer, wasn't it?"

Miss Malvina yawned and said "Very." The house hummed in the honeysuckle vines, the croquet acedie wove its rapid way in and out of the gay web and the old woman crooned.

"I won't deny you that Matthews is the sharper of the two, but Rufus Broxton has got more soul in his little finger than Horace Matthews has in his whole body. Rufus was as brave as a lion, but sweet tempered as a girl, trusting as a baby, always, honorable? I should say he was. I don't suppose he ever played crooked for the finest white alley that was ever made. I doubt if Horace Matthews could claim as much for himself."

"And Tom's going to grow up to be just such another," said Miss Malvina, with conviction.

she retraced her steps to the dear woman.

"Daniel's ridden back, mother, and Mr. Matthews was with him."

"Trust him," said the old woman sourly. "He'll make a good thing of it. Rufus so trusting and Tom so young and him already feeling like he'd been cheated by Lucetta Broxton's taking off."

"Aren't you a trifle hard on Lawyer Matthews, mother? He stands well in the community. Everybody has a good word for him, except you. He is the best father to that pretty Ollie I ever saw."

"Oh, he'll look out for his own. Olivia is bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh. I hope she ain't spirit of his spirit."

The old woman was inexorable. Presently Miss Malvina sent a still more solemn announcement through the trumpet.

"And, mother, Jim Hobson's just driven by with both horses to the back and Parson Drayton on the back seat."

"Now they are neck and neck."

been a helpful friend and good adviser to the young and sometimes frivolous wife he had brought home to stately old Broxton Hall.

And now in the hour of his extremity Miss Malvina could not bear to think of the colonel having an unfulfilled wish. Jessy had told her that all his cry was: "Why doesn't the boy come? The boy will be too late. Keep me here, doctor, until Tom gets home."

And Jessy knew, because she was housemaid at the Hall and heard everything. If only the boy had been sent for sooner! Mr. Matthews must have known how things were going to end.

And at thought of the lawyer she fell to wondering over her mother's harsh judgment of the man who for sterling merit stood next to Parson Drayton in the town and county. There were those in Mandeville who thought the sun rose and set in him. Her mother must be getting unreasonable in her old age, and so, dismissing the lawyer from her mind as a minor matter at such a solemn juncture, she stood there breathing futile wishes that she might do something, ever so little a something, for the colonel or for Tom.

The road in front of the cottage was deserted. At its best travel toward Mandeville was light and uncertain. There was none at all tonight.

The scent of honeysuckles and sweet williams weighted the air. A single star came out in the blue black sky, another, a dozen, a host. A solemn hush enwrapped the universe. If only some break would come in the dreadful stillness! It came.

The patter of hurrying feet in the dusty road—a small, dark figure was speeding toward her out of the gloom. It came abreast of her. Miss Malvina could hear the quick panting breath of the runner. Next the gleam of a white face, bare of hat, shone under the stars.

"Who is that? Who are you? Tom—Tom Broxton?"

"Happy Thought."

IN ALL THE WORLD no cause of worry so constant, so insistent, so widespread as inferior cooking apparatus.

WHAT WOMAN can help worrying the result of whose skill and care is damaged or destroyed by an inferior Range.

DEAL FAIRLY by your household and yourself—install Buck's "Happy Thought" Range in your kitchen and if you can't quit worrying entirely your wife will. The worry find a way supreme in every kitchen. He is a blood relation of the dyspepsia of like ilk. Banish them, buy a "Happy Thought."

The manufacturers of the "Happy Thought" are doing your culinary worrying for you for all time—take advantage of it.

They have worried over and have perfected every detail of Range construction, which though not always apparent on the surface, is most important in results.

Planned like an engine, fitted like a watch, as durable as the hills, the "Happy Thought" is ever in the lead, and there it will remain until perfection meets its match.

Blood Disorders

are simply kidney disorders. The kidneys filter the blood of all that shouldn't be there. The blood passes through the kidneys every three minutes. If the kidneys do their work no impurity or cause of disorder can remain in the circulation longer than that time. Therefore if your blood is out of order your kidneys have failed in their work. They are in need of stimulation, strengthening or doctoring. One medicine will do all three, the finest and most imitated blood medicine there is.
