

Committees Lining Up Support For PC Leadership Candidates

By KEN KELLY
OTTAWA (CP)—The activity on behalf of at least three men is going at such a pace that an observer might easily conclude that a leadership convention in the Progressive Conservative party is only months away.

Two national committees are hard at work lining up potential convention voters, raising leadership campaign funds and aiming at a maximum public exposure for David Fulton and George Hees.

The former Conservative cabinet minister—Mr. Fulton was justice and public works minister and Mr. Hees transport and trade and commerce minister—are officially undeclared candidates.

The unofficial nature of their candidacy is on a par with the unofficial nature of the leadership contest—John Diefenbaker is as determined as ever to lead his party into the next federal election.

The third man is Michael Starr. Mr. Diefenbaker's former labor minister who now is House leader of the official opposition. He also appears to be Mr. Diefenbaker's choice as eventual successor.

Mr. Starr enjoys two advantages over Mr. Fulton and Mr. Hees. He's a sitting member of the Commons, representing the constituency of Ontario, and he's made a formal declaration of his intention to seek the leadership when Mr. Diefenbaker is ready to step down.

Neither Mr. Hees, who resigned from the Diefenbaker cabinet in 1963 after policy differences with his chief, nor Mr. Fulton, who left the federal scene in 1962 to lead the British Columbia Conservatives, ran in the last federal election.

Mr. Fulton has announced his intention to return to the federal field by contesting a seat, his old riding of Kamloops. B.C. Mr. Hees hasn't declared himself yet in that respect.

And, of course, neither has publicly stated an intention to seek the party leadership. Generally they confine their comments to stating that there isn't a vacancy.

Despite this, national committees are at work on behalf of both men.

Funds have been raised for Mr. Fulton to enable him to tour various regions of the country several times in coming months. The first of these is scheduled for next week when Mr. Fulton moves into Quebec and Ontario for a week.

Initially Mr. Fulton will be devoting one week a month to such tours, probably stepping up his activities when it becomes clearer how soon there will be a leadership convention.

Mr. Hees, now president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges has already said publicly he wants to help rebuild Conservative fortunes in Quebec. As a former president of the PC Association, he's said to have considerable grass roots support despite his 1963 defeat.

ACTION A LIABILITY
But his action of two years ago also constitutes a liability in the eyes of some party members who aren't committed to Mr. Fulton's candidacy. There is a group at work dedicated to finding an alternative to either of the three certain candidates and to blocking Mr. Hees.

At the same time, Diefenbaker supporters are being urged to regard Mr. Starr as their rallying point, just in case the efforts of the Fulton or Hees committees might tempt them to make commitments for the day when Mr. Diefenbaker steps down. The leader reaches his 70th birthday next Sept. 18.

urgings that he seek the leadership. The Fulton committee is aiming at getting help from Premier Robin of Manitoba and Premier Stanfield of Nova Scotia.

MUST CALCULATE RISK
The overriding factor in the possibility of a provincial premier entering the race appears to be that the greater the risk of his defeat at a convention for the national leadership might have disastrous repercussions in his provincial bailiwick.

But all the figuring and maneuvering of the would-be leaders runs smack into the unshakable determination of Mr. Diefenbaker to stay on. Twice there have been reports to remove him—once at an annual meeting and earlier this year at a national executive meeting.

Faced with a constitutional requirement to hold a national meeting this year unless an election is called, the PC Association hasn't set a date yet, possibly because of the worry that another "Dump Die!" effort might be staged.

PARIS-WASHINGTON QUARREL Has Not Penetrated Deeply
By DAVID MASON
PARIS (AP)—Top-level relations between France and the United States seem to be on the rockiest ground since the Second World War. But so far, it is impossible to detect a penetration of ill feeling on the person-to-person level.

France's policy battle with Washington is being conducted almost exclusively from one bastion here—President de Gaulle's Elysee Palace. A salvo aimed at President Johnson echoes with regularity from behind its walls.

But the ordinary Frenchman has not taken to digging ideological trenches for a showdown with the Americans.

The French Communist Party tried three times to whip up trouble in front of the U.S. embassy because of Viet Nam. But the small groups of chanting youths who turned up didn't really have their hearts in it. The Communists—who pick up about one in every five votes in French elections—haven't even bothered to call their followers out on the streets over the Dominican crisis.

France's most eminent political commentator, Raymond Aron, picks holes in some of de Gaulle's attitudes. This week he said it was high time Washington and Paris buried the hatchet.

When Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko made an official visit to Paris last month, French officials kept their American colleagues informed on the talks.

When word of Johnson's "drink American" order got around in France, it brought smiles instead of grumbles. Americans in official position here kept right on drinking French wines. And a popular American soft drink still was selling well at sidewalk cafes.

Nobody argues that the policy differences between de Gaulle and Johnson are not real. But, at least for the present, they are being conducted in what seems to be the political stratosphere.

De Gaulle wants the Americans out of Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic and doesn't hesitate to say so—as he did Wednesday. De Gaulle wants less prestige for the U.S. dollar and more for gold and the franc.

De Gaulle fights the U.S. concept of a closely integrated North Atlantic Treaty Organization. He wants France to have as much say in world strategy as the United States. De Gaulle resists American economic "colonization" of France.

When both sides are active in the bidding, it is often difficult for the players to know exactly how far to go.
Here is an unusual example which shows how badly even expert players sometimes misjudge a situation. The hand occurred in the match between France and the United States in 1963.
When France had the North-South cards, the bidding went as shown. The notrump overall by North was simply fancy, but thereafter the bidding by the American East-West pair was natural, though somewhat misguided.

However, the unusually aggressive action by the American pair was eventually rewarded when North, acting under the misapprehension that a grand slam in clubs was about to be made against him, made a sacrifice bid of seven spades. This contract went down four—700 points.
Why South failed to double seven clubs, holding the ace of hearts, is a mystery still unsolved. Similarly, West's failure to recognize that his spade void facing East's ace was a duplication of values is likewise baffling.
When the American pair at the second table held the North-South cards, the bidding went as follows:
West North East South
1♠ Pass 1♥ 2♣
3♦ Pass 4NT Pass
5♣ 5♦ Dbl 5♣
North realized, of course, that his side could not make six spades when he bid it. He was making a sacrifice bid in advance of the expected six, club bid.
Whether six clubs would have been made will never be known. It would have taken a heart lead by North and a heart continuation to stop the slam.
South went down three—500 points—at six spades doubled, and the United States team gained 200 points on the deal.
