

Prime Minister Wilson Is Facing Internal Turmoil

By HAROLD MORRISON
LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Wilson appears to have won a breathing spell in his struggle to avert devaluation of the pound sterling but now faces some internal turmoil and the threat of revolt against his wage freeze spreading slowly through union ranks.

Apparently taking their cues from Frank Cousins, leader of the 1,500,000-member Transport Workers, some other chief of draughtsmen, technicians and other groups have indicated they will press ahead with demands for higher wages despite Wilson's demand for a six-month freeze.

Meanwhile, the pound, saw-sawed on foreign exchange Thursday before finally closing higher at $2.29 1/16 (U.S.) after the Bank of England and the U.S. Federal Reserve Bank were reported to have moved in and bought sterling. The pound fell from 2.28 1/2 to 2.28 1/4.

COULD WRECK PROGRAM

If it should succeed without bringing government wrath on their heads, other unions also may push their demands, thereby wrecking part of the program to halt inflation and help Britain pay its way in the world markets.

"You can talk about balance of payments and loyalty to the Labour Party, but a good many workers don't join the unions for those purposes," the official said. "He joined to get more money in his pay packet."

The TUC's general council will meet next Wednesday to discuss the wage and price freeze and to announce some form of policy if dissenting among union leaders can be overcome.

Meanwhile, George Brown, who holds the dual posts of deputy prime minister and economic minister, got a big cheer as he returned to the Commons Thursday, ending his quarrel with Wilson over the huge devaluation dose which virtually wrecked Brown's five-year economic expansion program.

In a dramatic night of long daggery, Brown threatened to resign and later agreed to remain after a group of Labour party members appealed to him not to split with Wilson in this hour of crisis. Unity within the party has already been denied by the previous resignation of Cousins from the leadership position.

SEEK COMMONS CENSURE

Edward Heath's opposition Conservatives pressed on with plans to censure the Wilson government's handling of the economic crisis in a two-day Commons debate next week. Heath and his aides intend to go to the Commons next week to voice their "popular resistance against Wilson's leadership."

Women's Director Points To Reason

MONTREAL (CP)—Economic is still the basic reason women seek paid employment outside the home, says Mary Hilton, deputy director of the United States labor department.

"Women work for the same reason men do—to help support themselves and their families," she told women teachers from four provinces and 29 states. Some 100 teachers are attending a week-long seminar sponsored by Delta Kappa Gamma Educational Foundation.

Of the 27,000,000 women working in the United States, only 1,000,000 have husbands earning over $10,000 yearly, she said.

Women made up 45 per cent of the labor force in the U.S. Six million women workers were single and five million were widowed, divorced or separated.

Of the 16,000,000 married women, one-fifth had husbands earning less than $3,000, one-quarter had husbands earning between $3,000-$5,000 and only 1,000,000 were in the $10,000 class.

EARN LOW SALARIES

Ms. Hilton said women earn relatively low salaries. The median salary of fulltime women workers in 1964 was $3,900 a year, or 59 per cent of the median salary for men, she said.

"Of all the women who work in the U.S., only four per cent earned more than $7,000. One percent made over $10,000.

Women's lower salaries were in a reflection of unequal pay, but of the fact that women tend to concentrate in lower paid jobs.

When the mature woman comes back to work after 25 years, she takes whatever job is available."

President Addresses Mass Rally

CAIRO (Reuters)—President Gamal Abdel Nasser told a mass rally Friday night the United Arab Republic won't attend the next Arab summit conference in Algeria in September — and almost certainly doomed this controversial conference.

He said the time has come for Egypt to ask whether it is worth going to these limits. "Should we go and sit around drinking coffee and asking each other how are you?"

Nasser was speaking at a rally here to mark the 14th anniversary of the revolution that overthrew King Farouk and made Egypt a republic.

The Algiers summit, one of a series that Arab heads of state have held to discuss Arab problems and particularly the question of Israel, had become the centre of a sharp conflict among various Arab states.

The division appeared to observers particularly sharp between the monarchies and the republics.

Nasser's presence was considered crucial, and Algeria, which is anxious to stage this conference, is known to have tried to win his support.

ENDS SPECULATION

But Friday night, the Egyptian head of state put an end to speculation by saying he has been asked for an indefinite postponement.

If the other Arab countries decided to go along with the conference, they would have to do so, but the U.A.R. will not attend.

Nasser attacked the "Arab League" and Tunisia's President Habib Bourguiba, both of whom have been strong critics of him in the past.

He criticized Britain's link with France and Israel, and evaded Egypt's short-term Suez Canal was nationalized in 1956.

The U.A.R., he said, had become an American colony.
