Easy Bookkeeping.

A Chicago woman, according to The Post of that city, had served acceptably as treasurer of the club for a little over a year, and that was an exceptional record.

"Don't you have difficulty in balancing your books?" they asked.
"Oh, dear, no," she replied. "Why, it's the easiest thing in the world. I just add up what I have received and subtract from that what I have paid out, to show what is due the club, and then I make my husband give me a check for the amount. There's really nothing hard about keeping books when you know how."

WORKERS OF ANTIQUITY.

The Use of the Inclined Plane in the Building of the Pyramids.

At a meeting of the Philosophical society of Washington J. E. Watkins presented a paper on "The Transportation and Lifting of Heavy Bodies by the Ancient Engineers." The purpose of the paper was to show how many of the structures regarded as remarkable by expert engineers of the present day, and which some archaeologists declare must have required in their erection the use of immense machines, could have been constructed by primitive tools and simple methods.

By means of diagrams the speaker explained how inclined planes of earth could be used in placing in position stone blocks or slabs of enormous weight, levels and pry bars being employed in setting them up. He then demonstrated how easily, comparatively speaking, the pyramids could have been constructed by these simple methods, and when completed the earth around them which had been used for the inclined planes filled into the pits from which it was taken, leaving the ground as level as before.

As an illustration the pyramid of Gizeh was cited, some of the stones of which were transported a distance of 500 miles. In this case the highest embankment necessary when the workmen reached the top course, assuming that a 20 per cent grade was adopted, would have been 750 yards long, containing, as it did, some 7,500,000 cubic yards, provided the sides of the embankment would stand at an angle of 30 degrees, which is not at all improbable. A force of 10,000 men could have built such an embankment in a single twelvemonth, a very small part of the total labor, which it is stated called for the services of 100,000 men for 20 years.

In the solution of the problem of putting in place huge monoliths it was suggested that the modern engineer should well consider the utilization of inclined planes before adopting a more complex method.—Science.

KEATS ON MARRIAGE.

A Barrier Against Matrimony Which the Poet Could Not Overcome.

Notwithstanding your Happiness and your recommendation, I hope I shall never marry. Though the most beautiful Creature were waiting for me at the end of a Journey or a Walk, though the Carpet were of Silk, the Curtains of the morning clouds, the chairs and sofa stuffed with Cygnets' down, the food Manna, the Wine beyond Claret, the Window opening on Winander mere, I should not feel, or rather my Happiness would not be so fine, as my Solitude is sublime. Then, instead of what I have described, there is a sublimity to welcome me home. The roaring of the wind is my wife and the Stars through the window pane are my Children. The mighty abstract Idea I have of Beauty in all things stills the more divided and minute domestic happiness—an amiable wife and sweet Children I contemplate as a part of that Beauty, but I must have a thousand of those beautiful particles to fill up my heart.

I feel more and more every day as my imagination strengthens that I do not live in this world alone, but in a thousand worlds. No sooner am I alone than shapes of epic greatness are stationed around me and serve my Spirit the office which is equivalent to a King's bodyguard—then "Tragedy with sceptered pall comes sweeping by." According to my state of mind I am with Achilles shouting in the Trenches, or with Theocritus in the Vales of Sicily. Or I throw my whole being into Troilus, and repeating those lines, "I wander like a lost Soul upon the Stygian Banks staying for waffage." I melt into the air with a voluptuousness so delicate that I am content to be alone. These things, combined with the opinion I have of the generality of women, who appear to me as children to whom I would rather give a sugar Plum than my time, form a barrier against Matrimony which I rejoice in.—"Poems of John Keats," by Walter Raleigh.

Arab Weapons.

Here in Muscat I saw the pure bred Arabman, sinewy, but not tall, a domineering, swaggering nobleness in his glance and a brace of daggers in his waist. When I recognized a beautiful haft or noticed a slender inlaid native gun or singular shield, I offered to buy. But nothing would induce them to sell. "Sahib," said one man, "I killed my deadliest foe with this blade, right through his black heart. You see this dint in my shield? Ah, that dint was caused by a spear! The shield saved my life. Shall I, then, sell it for money? My gun? No, sahib. I am an Arab, and my gun is my other self. How could I be an Arab if I had no gun? This sword—it belonged to my grandfather. It has killed 40 men. By Mohammed, it is true! These marks, sahib, you see these marks? Only one of these marks is put there when a man is killed." I offered three times the value. The answer always was: "No, sahib, I will not. I cannot."

Everybody, from the frolicsome boy of 8 to the tottering imbecile of 80, carried a weapon. The old men had rusty swords that reminded me of the unwieldy double bladed monsters that Richard Cœur de Lion and his knights swung in the face of the Saracens. These Muscat swords are 4 feet 6 inches long, the blades 3 inches wide, and the handles provide room for both fists to grasp. Law is an unknown quantity in eastern Arabia.—Chambers' Journal.

"Dat's what."
"En he let 'em ketch him?"
"Yes."
"Well, let him go 'long ter de chain gang. A man what ain't got education enough to kiver up his tracks no better dan dat is better out de way dan in it!"—Atlanta Constitution.

KIND NEIGHBOUR RECOMMENDS PAINE'S CELERY Compound AND THE MATCHLESS PAIN KILLING MEDICINE

It Was Commanded With a Degree of Faith.

Now There is Joy, Thankfulness and Gratitude for a Marvellous Cure.

WELLS & RICHARDSON CO.,

SIRS:—I suffered intensely with neuralgia in my head and face, and was in such a condition that I could not rest day or night for two and a half years. I was treated by different doctors and used their medicine and sometimes got a little relief, but the pain would come back as bad as ever. I walked the floor night after night and thought I would go crazy. A neighbor knowing my condition of suffering, asked me if I tried Paine's Celery Compound. I said "No, I have no faith in anything now, as I have tried many medicines and they have not done me any good." How ever, I decided to try one bottle of Paine's Celery Compound, and it gave such good results I continued until I had used six bottles and was cured. I can never cease to express my gratitude for the great good I derived from Paine's Celery Compound.
Yours truly,
