Town Will Provide Site If New School Is Built

GEORGETOWN — Meeting on Monday night in a sitting of the Georgetown Town Council, adjourned from the regular monthly meeting, the council unanimously adopted a motion to write Dr. L.G. Dewar, minister of education, asking that a proposed eastern provincial composite high school be built in Georgetown and explaining that Georgetown would be willing to provide the site.

Mayor Howard S. MacLean presided over the meeting, which was attended by a full slate of councillors. The matter of the establishing of such a school was brought to the attention of the former council when two members of the Montague Regional High School Board asked consideration of supporting a brief being forwarded to the minister of education proposing that such a school be built in Montague. As this matter came late in the year for the former council nothing was done on the matter.

The school would provide an opportunity for teaching in the various skills and trades, as well as certain academic studies that are a part of the vocational high school program. The council felt that as Montague and Souris and Morell now have regional high schools, Georgetown is an ideal site for the project. The present and future industrial expansion being a big argument in favor of the proposal.

TOWN PLANNING
The council will meet Monday, Feb. 22 with Claude Smith of the department of municipalities to discuss various phases of town planning and it is hoped that J.P. Nicholson, the town's solicitor, will also be able to attend.

Mayor MacLean reported he had had an interview with Supl. A.S. McNeil of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, relative to the possibility of obtaining a contract to have RCMP police Georgetown. In this regard the council will seek an early appointment to meet the attorney general to discuss law enforcement here. It was approved that member of the clergy be asked to sit in on any meeting that may be arranged between the attorney general and the council.

It was reported that Arthur J. Garrett, chartered accountant is auditing the town's books and is setting up a system of bookkeeping and accounting in conformity with recent requirements of the provincial department of municipal affairs.

The matter of the appointment of assessors was discussed and further action taken at an early meeting. It was revealed that up to now no workmen's compensation coverage had been carried by any town employees and it was decided to provide immediately to the compensation board, with a view providing the necessary coverage under the act.

NO INSURANCE
It was also discovered that no insurance had been placed on the town's fire hall or fire equipment and that the tank truck and hose truck were not covered with public liability insurance or fire and theft. The council was unanimous in its opinion that such coverage was essential and steps should be instituted at once to provide this protection. It is planned to place $8000 worth of insurance on the fire hall and a like amount on the equipment and also to immediately look into the matter of insuring the two fire fighting vehicles.

INVESTIGATION
The question of the collection of arrears in taxes was discussed at length and it was decided that on the completion of the audit that action would be instituted along this line. The council felt that a policy for the collection of tax arrears will have to be adopted and strictly adhered to. RECALLED TO DORION
Raymond Denis, former executive assistant to Mr. Tremblay, has been ordered recalled to the Dorion inquiry to tell what he knows about alleged attempts to prevent Mr. Stonehill's extradition.

THE DORION INQUIRY
The Dorion inquiry was set up after Mr. Denis was accused in the Commons by Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon) of offering a $20,000 bribe to win bail for Lucien Rivard.

MR. DIFENBAKER
Mr. Diefenbaker said Canadians need an assurance public morality will be upheld and that the prime minister will act with dispatch to remove any suggestion of wrong-doing.

NOTING THAT 1964
was a record year for fish landings and value, Mr. Fitzgerald said it was also a year of achievement in the enforcement of conservation measures.

"MORE PRESSURE

"This stiffening attitude on the part of many magistrates in imposing heavier penalties is, to me, evidence that the public is at last awakening to the fact that protection of our fisheries resources now—both sport and commercial—is our only assurance that we will have these resources in the future."

CONSTANT PATROLS

this special force worked in co-operation with special forces set up by district officers within their own districts," Mr. Fitzgerald told the conference.

Mr. Dupuis said the "false scandal stories" about him all originated with a statement signed by a person he did not identify, stating that the author had seen Mr. Dupuis receiving $10,000 in 1961 from Roch Deslauriers, a St. Luc chiropractor who headed a group of local promoters seeking a racetrack franchise.

Mr. Dupuis said this statement was false and the author subsequently had signed a second statement saying he had been forced to state falsehoods in the first.

Mr. Dupuis said "a highly placed politician" in his personal capacity whom he did not identify was behind this "fabrication, which was meant to destroy his reputation and political career."

Newspaper stories published since his resignation Jan. 22 had come close to convincing the public that he was guilty of an offence but his political career was not finished.

The statements by the prime minister and Mr. Dupuis took up about 30 minutes after the Commons met for the first time since the session adjourned Dec. 18.

Mr. Pearson informed the Commons of the resignation of Works Minister Deschatelets last week and of the ensuing cabinet shuffle.

Dupuis Hears Arrest Report

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal MP Yvon Dupuis told reporters Tuesday he has been warned the Quebec Provincial Police is about to arrest him, but he did not fear prosecution because he was innocent of any wrongdoing.

Mr. Dupuis made the statement outside the Commons after saying in the House the RCMP is investigating allegations that he received a $10,000 payoff in 1961 to help obtain a provincial franchise for a harness racetrack at St. Luc, Que.

Illegal Lobster Fishermen Found It Tough Last Year

HALIFAX (Special)—Canada's department of fisheries in the Maritime Provinces made things tough for illegal lobster fishermen last year. That was indicated in a report to the department's annual Maritimes meeting here by Ambrose P. Fitzgerald, area chief of the conservation and development service.

Noting that 1964 was a record year for fish landings and value, Mr. Fitzgerald said it was also a year of achievement in the enforcement of conservation measures.

"More pressure than ever before was applied against illegal lobster fishing in all problem areas," Mr. Fitzgerald said. He declared it was the aim of his branch to reduce illegal lobster fishing to the category of the now almost non-existent rum running.

The protection chief described as "most significant" the greater support given by the courts. "This stiffening attitude on the part of many magistrates in imposing heavier penalties is, to me, evidence that the public is at last awakening to the fact that protection of our fisheries resources now—both sport and commercial—is our only assurance that we will have these resources in the future."

Mr. Fitzgerald said much of the success of the anti-lobster poaching drive was achieved by a special force of protection officers who maintained constant patrols in the areas where the most serious problems existed.

"From April to December, this special force worked in co-operation with special forces set up by district officers within their own districts," Mr. Fitzgerald told the conference.

"Our around-the-clock surveillance of lobster canneries, our special patrols, and the greater use of patrol boats—radio-telephone equipment, radar and aircraft, have resulted in great discouragement to the small group of lobster fishermen and anglers who have defied regulations in the past," the fisheries official added.

He said that the success of the 1964 campaign had not only been reflected in a substantial reduction of illegal lobster traffic and in heavier penalties for offenders, but, most significant, it had met with the approval of the fishing industry and the public.

Trout fishermen, continued Mr. Fitzgerald, had a good year in the three provinces with marked increases in the catch of speckled trout. He attributed the improvement to cool water temperatures and to the good results from stocking of streams and lakes with fish raised in federally-operated hatcheries.

Mr. Fitzgerald had praise for the co-operation his branch had received from fish and game groups and other organized bodies concerned with the conservation of the inland fisheries. "Those people," he said, "have been very helpful to us. They are dedicated to protecting our inland fishing resources and are worthy of commendation not only by this department but by the public generally."

Confederation Centre Is TV Film Subject

A nine man crew from the CBC in Halifax were at the Confederation Centre last week shooting film for a half-hour television show on the centre. The film was shot for a national television network show called "Across Canada" that is not carried on the local television station. Bob MacLaughlin, producer-director, said the release date for the 30-minute film is not final, but the show will likely be seen during the second week in March.

The supervising producer for the show was Jack McAndrew, formerly of Charlottetown. Col. Frank Storey was interviewed on the general policy of the centre and its place as a national shrine. He also mentioned the programming at the centre and said it was much more active than even its most optimistic supporters had hoped.

Moncreiff Williamson, curator of the Art Gallery, talked on the popularity of the gallery, and on the 120 children who take daily art classes there.

Among the activities that the film crew shot was a sequence on the Friday morning rehearsal of the PWC variety show. During the time the crew was here they also shot a film on Premier Walter R. Shaw talking about his province. This film will be used for a show called "Maritime Gazette" which appears in the Montreal Toronto area of the CBC.

CNR Engine House Being Torn Down

GEORGETOWN — In December the CNR called for tenders on the purchase of their engine house in Georgetown, with the building to be moved or torn down by the party being awarded the tender.

It is understood that several tenders were received for this building including one from the Georgetown Lions Club, who intended moving the building to another location and renovating it to make a clubhouse.

However it was recently made known that the successful tender was placed by Raymond Gordon and Alex Arsenault. Workmen are presently engaged in tearing down the building which is located on the railway property near the corner of Grafton and Kent Streets.

Found Guilty Of Break, Theft City Youth Sentenced 2½ Years

Roger Paul Gallant, Charlottetown, was found guilty on a charge of break, entry and theft before Judge C. St. Clair Trainor in County Court yesterday morning and sentenced to two years and six months in Dorchester Penitentiary.

The charge was laid following a break into Buster's Irving Service Station on Grafton Street East on the night of Jan. 9, 1965. Judge Trainor stated that before the accused could be convicted of the charge it had to be proved that there was a break and theft and that the accused was connected with it.

The judge felt that there was no question about the break, entry and theft. However there was no direct evidence that the accused committed or aided anyone in committing the offence.

He said the facts had to be considered each one related to the whole. In connection with the testimony of James Longphore about whom certain doubts had been expressed, the judge stated that he accepted the evidence as truthful.

The actions and speeches of the accused were taken into consideration. The judge felt, however, that Gallant should have had no cause to hide from the police if he knew nothing concerning the break. The conduct in this instance showed, he felt, that Gallant had a common fear with MacFarlane.

The fact that Gallant and William Earl MacFarlane were seen together earlier travelling towards the station was also convincing evidence. Judge Trainor stated that it all added up to the fact that Gallant was part of the break, entry and theft and found him guilty of that crime.

On presenting the record of the accused Alan Scates stated that he had been convicted on two similar offences in 1961 and 1963 for which he was given six months in Queens County Jail and two years in Dorchester Penitentiary respectively. He had also received a two year suspended sentence in 1960 for theft.

In addressing the court, Mr. Scates referred to the National Conference of Judges on sentencing. The objectives of sentencing were stated to be for the protection of the public and for the welfare of the offender. The principal factors therefore to be considered were: protection of society, deterrent to others and the rehabilitation of the offender.

There should also be a relationship between the type of offence and the punishment. ASKS FOUR YEARS
Mr. Scates went on to say that this was a serious crime and that "short sentences before the accused no good. He felt that the accused had had his chance and had not reformed and asked for a four year sentence in view of the circumstances.

Counsel for the accused, Charles R. McQuaid, in appealing for a lesser sentence stated that it has been well established that punishment is not a deterrent by way of example to other people. The protection of society is an important element in considering punishment, he said, but there are several ways society should be protected. He felt that to lock up a person and pretend he doesn't exist or to put a wall around him is not protecting society but rather removing him from society and solving no problems.

Mr. McQuaid also asked consideration for the fact that there was complete lack of violence and that the whole thing was a completely useless offence. He pointed out that there were items of much more value, such as tires, that the accused could have taken but didn't. He stated that the accused is only 30 years of age and that he was just 16 when he committed his first offence and that it has proven useless to lock young people away.

OFFICER NEEDED
He submitted that if Prince Edward Island had the service of a probation officer in the past many of the young men who keep reappearing in court rooms today would not be there. He felt that now that there is a trained officer society can be protected and the offenders rehabilitated.

He said, "In the past society has failed to provide the machinery for rehabilitation and the Roger Gallants have paid the price."

In regard to guidance and help offered him by society on his release from prison Gallant said, "The only guidance I ever got was a cop at my door every week wanting to take me to the office for questioning."

The judge said, "I agree that this province has needed a probation officer for a long time. We now have one but still his power will be limited as he can't deal with all who need him. It is too much for one man to do. However, society must be protected, man has a perfect and expect to find it in the same condition when he returns in the morning. Those who do not respect these rights must be punished."

CONSIDERS TIME

He said he would take into consideration the fact that there was almost a year and half between the accused's last offence and this one and that some signs of improvement were shown although they were not enough.

He stated that he did not know who the ring-leader in this crime had been but he did not feel that it would benefit the accused to go to Queens County Jail.

To the accused he said, "I sentence you to imprisonment in Dorchester for two years and six months and while you are there I hope you will take every advantage of training you can and be a more useful man when you return. It lies upon the individual to make this last short term will teach you the salutary lesson you require and society will be the richer for your acts in the future."

William Earl MacFarlane, also of Charlottetown and charged with a similar offence, pleaded not guilty to the charge and had his case adjourned to March 2.

commons rules, a Speaker's ruling may not be appealed. IN FIGHTING MOOD
In a fighting mood as Parliament re-opened for the current session following a two-month recess, Mr. Diefenbaker touched on many of the scandal allegations and recent troubles of federal ministers.

When some Liberals shouted at the opposition, leader, he pointed his finger and said: "These are the people that bought the furniture—they howl me down."

He was apparently referring to furniture purchases on credit from a now-bankrupt Montreal firm that were made by Secretary of State Lamontagne and the Immigration Minister Tremblay, now postmaster-general.

"Who paid the sales-tax?" he asked. Then he turned on Justice Minister Favreau who in a Quebec City speech last week delivered a strong attack on Mr. Diefenbaker.

He accused Mr. Favreau of making "cowardly attacks" outside the Commons, then added "But he isn't very much facing a person in the House of Commons."

Mr. Favreau had said last November nobody in his office was implicated in the Rivard affair, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

TERMED FALSE
"That statement was completely false and he knew it at the time."

Mr. Favreau rose at one point to say that it was "less cowardly" to make attacks outside the Commons "than relying on parliamentary immunity."

The matter of the appointment of assessors was discussed and further action taken at an early meeting. It was revealed that up to now no workmen's compensation coverage had been carried by any town employees and it was decided to provide immediately to the compensation board, with a view providing the necessary coverage under the act.
