HE HAD A CLOSE CALL.

Major General Miles' Thrilling Encounter
With Lane Deer.

Probably the closest call General Miles ever had in all his experience as an Indian fighter was that in his encounter with Lane Deer. It was in 1877, when he was then a lieutenant, during his campaign against the Sioux and other hostile tribes in the northwest. Lane Deer and his outlaws had been making trouble in Dakota, and Colonel Miles raided their village. He tells the rest of the story in his personal recollections thus: "In the surprise and excitement of the wild onset of the charge a group of warriors was forced away from the rest. Before making the attack I had ordered our Sioux and Cheyenne Indians to call out to the Lane Deer Indians that if they threw down their arms and surrendered we would spare their lives. As we galloped up to this group of warriors they apparently recognized the purpose of the demand and dropped their arms on the ground. In order to assure them of our good will I called out, 'How do you do, Lane Deer? I have not intended my hand to the chief, Lane Deer, which he grasped, and in a few seconds more I would have secured him and the others, as although he was wild and trembling with excitement, my adjutant, George W. Baird, was doing the same with the head warrior, Lane Deer. "Unfortunately just at that time one of our white scouts rode up and joined the group of officers and soldiers with me. He had more enthusiasm than discretion and, I presume, desired to insure my safety, as he drew up his rifle and covered the Indian with it. Lane Deer saw this and evidently thought the young scout was going to shoot him. I know of no other motive for his subsequent act than the belief that he was to be killed whether he surrendered or not. As quick as thought, with one desperate, powerful effort, he reached his hand from mine, although I tried to hold it, and grasped his rifle from the ground, ran backward a few steps, raised his rifle to his eye and fired. Seeing his determined face, his set jaw, wild eye and the open muzzle of his rifle, I realized my danger and instantly whirled my horse from him, and in this quick movement the horse slightly settled back upon his haunches. At that moment the rifle flashed within ten feet of me, the bullet whizzed past my breast, leaving me unharmed, but unfortunately killing a brave soldier near my side. Naturally the whole scattered band of Indians was instantly wiped out by a close and deadly fire from the soldiers. The incident is typical of the whole series of Indian campaigns in which General Miles figured in the last quarter of a century. His desire to treat the Redskins as fellow men, constantly thwarted by the natural suspicions of the savages themselves, is apparent all through the book.

ORIGIN OF "RESTAURANT."
An Interesting Philological Fact From France.
The French author, Maurice Cals, recently published in his Revue des Francaises an essay about the restaurant and eating houses of Paris, relating many interesting details. His story of how the term "restaurant" was first used is well worth repeating. For a long time inns and eating houses in France were only intended for the benefit of traveling people, for the people took their meals at home, and restaurants were unknown. The first enterprise of the kind was founded in Paris in 1765. A citizen by the name of Boulanger opened in the Rue des Poulies an eating house where soup, meat, food and eggs were served. A character relates that meals were served there on small, round, marble tables, and everything was scrupulously clean. Over the entry to this first eating house the proprietor had hung a sign, upon which were the Latin words tabula mense and quod stomacho laborantis et ego restaurabo vos. (Come unto me all ye whose stomachs need attention, and I will restore them.) This is a parody on the well known Biblical quotation, "Come unto me all ye who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," only in place of labor and heavy laden he said, "whose stomachs need attention." The word "restaurant," from the Latin "restaurans" (restore or refresh), was the main characteristic of the new establishment and gave it its name. Boulanger amassed a large fortune, for his enterprise proved eminently successful, but he was soon imitated, some of his imitators becoming more famous than he, like Borel, at whose place 120 years ago meals could be had for 150 francs ($30) per cover.

Grant and Hancock at a Night Alarm.
When Hancock's headquarters were reached, the party remained with him for some time, awaiting the arrival of the head of Warren's troops. Hancock's sound received at Gettysburg had not thoroughly healed, and he suffered such inconvenience from it when in the saddle that he had applied for permission to ride in a spring ambulance while on the march. He was, however, not in action. He was reclining upon one of the seats of the ambulance, conversing with General Grant, who had dismounted and was sitting on the ground with his back against a tree, whittling a stick, when the sound of firing broke forth directly in front. Hancock sprang up, seized his sword, which was lying near him, knuckled it around his waist and cried, "My horse, my horse!" The scene was intensely dramatic and recalled vividly to the bystanders the cry of Richard III on the field of Bosworth. Grant listened a moment without changing his position or ceasing his whittling and then remarked: "They are not fighting. The firing is all on one side. It takes two sides to start a fight." In a few minutes the firing died away, and it was found that the enemy was not advancing. The incident fairly illustrates the contrast in the temperaments of these two distinguished soldiers.—General Horace Porter in Century.

THE TATTLER.

Mrs. Russell Sage is a devout shrewd woman and one who carries her religion into the practical, everyday affairs of life. One of the most experienced librarians in the vicinity of New York is Miss Emma Tootenberg of the Brooklyn Historical society library.

Miss Ethel Belle Appel is one of the best known designers of book covers in New York. She says the greatest need in her profession is originality that is practical.

Mrs. May Sparring, the daughter of the late William Morris, is engaged in the manufacture of tapestry, which she carries on profitably and successfully near London.

Mrs. Theodore Sotto is an accomplished horsewoman. Some of her most satisfactory pictures—and she is a favorite of the photographer—have been taken in a riding habit.

The Hon. Mrs. Bertrand Russell, honorary secretary of the young women's branches of the British Women's Temperance association, is a graduate of Bryn Mawr college.

Miss Grace Fairweather is believed to be the champion lady billiard player of the world. She is a native of Newcastle, England, and is described as tall and ladylike and not yet 21 years of age.

Mrs. Leslie Carter, whose great beauty is her Italian beauty, wears her hair flowing when in the seclusion of her own apartments. She deems this a means of invigorating the golden strands.

Miss Sarah Farmer of Maine is a prominent W. C. T. U. woman and the possessor of unusual beauty and magnetism. She had much to do with organizing the congress of religions at the World's Fair. One peculiarity of hers is to dress in softest gray colors.

Brigadier Alice Lewis of the Salvation Army is a beautiful young woman, with a voice of unusual sweetness and power. She studied for the stage, intending to enter grand opera, but ten years ago she joined the Salvation Army and is one of its sweetest singers.

Miss Barney Barnato, wife of the fairy tale millionaire, South Africa, literally blazes with jewels. She has some of the most superb diamonds that ever dazzled the eyes of London, and with pathetic nouveau riche display she wears nearly every gem she possesses at one and the same time.

Miss Marie Thibout of the Louisville Courier-Journal is a bright and successful young newspaper woman. She is of a fine, old southern family and inherits nobility of mind and character from a long line of good ancestry. She has a clever pen and a talent for release in various phases of journalism.

Willie Wallis Astor may be right in saying America is no place for a gentleman to live, but what has that to do with him?—Detroit News.

Dr. Nansen has our permission to search for the south pole, which has been neglected so long that it undoubtedly needs attention.—St. Louis Republic.

It is announced from Rome that Dr. Guocorelli has discovered the germ of yellow fever. The good doctor kindly kept it there.—New York Advertiser.

"What the ulian needs," remarks a contemporary, "is a premonitory calling card that will leave nothing visible above his shirt collar."—Kansas City Journal.

The Duke of Vex, as is strangely shown during this Spanish issue, perhaps he has not yet entirely relinquished all hope of that consolation purse from the people of the United States.—Philadelphia Press.

AN OLD AND WELL TRIED REMEDY.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhoea. It is pleasant to the taste. Sold by Druggists in a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take only the one kind. 135 W

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Modjeska will begin her starring tour shortly. Fanny Davenport's new play is written upon a historical subject. Sadie Martinot may go to Australia next summer with "The Gay Parisian."

Herbert Keeler and Ethel Shannon are likely to head a company next season. James O'Neill's Hamlet is described as being "the most definite one in America."

Mr. DeWolf has been asked by a New York publisher to compile a book of stage stories. George Backus is compelled to smoke a box of cigars a week by the requirements of his role in "The March of John Bull."

Charles A. Bigelow has an ardent admirer in John L. Sullivan, who believes him to have the funniest face in America. "The Girl From Paris," at the Herald Square theater, New York, continues to be one of the most popular attractions on Broadway.

"The Sign of the Cross" will, after all, not be taken back to England, but a further effort to make it popular in this country will be made. Carroll and Kerker's new opera, "Kismet," has made a hit at Wallack's theater, New York, with Camille D'Arville and Dick Carroll in the principal parts.

Thomas W. Keene has played Richard III 2,300 times. This means that every night, including Sunday, for over six years Mr. Keene's life has been devoted to this role. R. A. Barnet has a young friend who has just written his first play. It is called "Strictly Confidential," and Mr. Barnet believes that it is sure of speedy production, for anything strictly confidential is bound to come out.

SEASONABLE ADVICE.
Never go to bed with cold or damp feet. Never lean the back upon anything that is cold. Never begin a journey until after a good breakfast has been eaten. Never take hot drinks and then go immediately out into the cold. Never fall to keep the back well covered, especially between the shoulder blades; also the chest well protected. Never breathe with the mouth open in sleeping in a cold room; but establish a habit of breathing through the nose. Never omit regular bathing, for unless the skin is in active condition the cold will close the pores and favor congestion and other diseases. Never ride in an open carriage or near the open windows of a car for a moment immediately after exercise of any kind. It is dangerous to health and even life. Never continue keeping the back exposed to the heat after it has become comfortably warm. It is debilitating to do otherwise than merely warm the back by the fire. Never get from a warm atmosphere into a cooler one without keeping the mouth closed, so that the air may be warmed in its passage through the nose before it reaches the lungs. Never strain the voice in the effort to speak while hoarse. Wait until the hoarseness is recovered from, or the voice may be permanently injured or difficulties of the throat produced. Never stand still in cold water for any length of time in the outdoor air, especially after having taken active exercise, and never stand long, outside, in snow or where the person is exposed to cold wind.

MOTHER GOOSE LEGENDS.
"Three Blind Mice" is in a music book of 1600. "A Froggie Would A-wooling Go" was written in 1650. "Little Jack Horner" is older than the seventeenth century. "Boys and Girls Come Out to Play" dates from Charles I. "Pussy Cat, Pussy Cat, Where Have You Been?" dates from the reign of Queen Elizabeth. "Old Mother Hubbard" "Goosey, Goosey Gander" and "Old Mother Goose" were first published in the sixteenth century. The author of "Cinderella," "Jack the Giant Killer," "Blue Beard" and "Tom Thumb" was Charles Perrault, a Frenchman, whose name was written in 1697. "Humpty Dumpty" was a bold, bad baron who lived in the days of King John and was tumbled from power. This history was put into a riddle, the answer to which is an egg. "The Babes in the Wood" was founded on an actual crime committed in the fifteenth century. An old house in Norfolk has several legends which were written in 1697, which the entire history is carved.—Philadelphia American.

TOWN TOPICS.
The present condition of the highways of Philadelphia would disgrace the responsible administration of a Hottentot kraal.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Monte Vernon people are trying to get a pickle factory located in their midst. It beats all what people want in their midst in these days.—Salem News.

What hurts Boston the most is having the street cars pulled a "strike" in 1905. It is nothing more or less than a tactical concussion.—Detroit Free Press.

Now New York has begun a war on the tall church bonnet. This looks very like a "Bible" against the feminine plot in its most popular form.—Boston Herald.

It has been found that the people of London drink 14 tons of mud along with their beer every day. How, it doesn't seem necessarily follow that the Londoners are all full of sand.—Cleveland Leader.

Perhaps Boston society will insist on fashionable people draping that portion of the earthly form divine located south of the chin and north of the ordinary ball dress.—Cedar Rapids (Ia.) Gazette.

HOWE'S FLINGS.
Nobody says "Yes." Everybody says "Yeh."

A preacher, like a musician, should play without notes. Several out of ten men who order raw oysters do not like them. It requires only the necessary circumstances to make any man a liar. Every one who works hard is constantly surprised at seeing how well worthless people get along. Every one is the object of somebody's suspicion and should regulate his conduct with that thought in mind. About the last thought that seems to occur to a man who can't pay his bills is to try doing without that which he cannot pay for.—Atchison Globe.
