

MR. AND MRS. A. R. BARRETT

Autumn Time Chosen For This Very Pretty Wedding

A quiet but pretty wedding was held this autumn amid baskets of gladioli at the Mulberry Lodge Summerside, when Doris Elaine Ramsay and Arnold Simpson Barrett were united in marriage. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor W. Ramsay, Southwest, Lot 16. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Major W. Barrett, Belmont, Lot 16.

The minister, the Rev. K. R. Hobson, performed the double ring ceremony. The organist was Mrs. Eric Sheen. The soloist, Miss Astrid Miller sang "Because" before the ceremony and "I'll Walk Beside You" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was all bridal loveliness, in her white portrait, ankle-length, silk organza gown over taffeta and net. The neckline was oval shape with lace trim. The short sleeves of the dress were complemented with long silk organza mitts. The full swirling skirt was made up Princess lines with lace applique on hip waist line. Her only ornaments were pearl necklace and earrings, gifts of the groom.

A fingertip veil of nylon net with lace trim fell from a tiara of sequins and pearls. The bride's bouquet was a cascade of white feathered carnations with ivy.

The maid of honor, Miss Joan Ramsay, cousin of the bride was lovely in lime green chiffon over taffeta. The dress was made on Princess lines, ballerina length, with matching picture hat and mitts. She carried a nosegay of yellow mums and white carnations.

The bridesmaid, Miss Geraldine Driscoll, also looked very attractive in her gown of flamingo made identical to that of the maid of honor. She wore a matching picture hat and mitts and her flowers were white carnations.

The flower girl Miss Mary Ellen Ramsay, young sister of the bride, wore yellow nylon chiffon over taffeta, gathered skirt, small shawl collar and tiny bow at side. She carried a basket of bronze and yellow mums and white carnations. She wore a yellow bow in her hair with tiny white carnations.

The best man was Mr. Keith Barrett, cousin of the groom.

The ushers were Mr. Ivan Ramsay, brother of the bride, and Mr. Edward Clark.

The bride's mother wore a brown sheath dress with matching bolero and gold and brown accessories. Her corsage was of white roses. The groom's mother wore a champagne color dress with button trim and beige accessories. Her corsage was yellow roses.

A reception for approximately sixty-five guests was held at the Mulberry Lodge where the bride's table was centered with a three tier wedding cake topped with a wedding bell decoration. The tables had vases of sweet peas.

The toast to the bride was proposed by the Rev. K. R. Hobson and responded to by the groom.

Miss Christine Ramsay, sister of the bride was in charge of the guest book. Following the wedding the happy young couple left on a honeymoon trip to Eastern States and Southern Ontario. The bride travelled in a nice green brocade satin sheath dress with matching cummerbund, and a silk green wool top coat. Her accessories were black and white. Her corsage was Orange Delight roses.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Barrett will reside in Belmont, where the groom is engaged in farming. The bride is employed as a stenographer with the department of National Defence, RCAF Station, Summerside.

THE FIRST SNOW FALL

The first snow fall came down last night, and clothed the Earth in garments white. The fragile flakes trapped by the breeze, are weaving patterns through the trees.

We see outside our windows bright, A maze of beauty and delight. The sodden Earth so brown of face, Has disappeared, and in its place

Are sparkling snowdrops, clear and white And all the Earth's stepped in light. We lift our eyes toward the sky, Where silvery clouds are drifting by, An enchanted land so wonder thrilled.

Like dreams come true or hopes fulfilled. Such moments seem to lift the veil, And we may glimpse beyond the pale, Where heaven seems near, and angles stand.

With gifts of love on every hand, As we behold with hearts aglow, Gods miracle of falling snow.

"children have so much—Comfort, warmth, light..."

"But" we smiled, "no quiet!" Today we picked up a paper to read a moment while we awaited James' return from his field-work to dinner, to find a hearty approval of that mother's views. Though it was of high-school pupils this principal wrote, it could well apply to any and every student no matter the age.

"Mother M. Gerard, principal of a high school in Windsor, Ontario, says that a quiet atmosphere is essential for students to do homework efficiently. TV and radio have no place in it."

"The high school schedule is so heavy" she told a meeting of her school's parents' club "that a student must cover every phase of study at the proper time, if he doesn't want to be left behind."

"Proper lighting and a quiet atmosphere are necessary for efficient study, and a pupil cannot be expected to give his all to a subject with the radio or TV blaring at his side."

"Learning in a high school is not child's play and cannot be accomplished when the student is bothered by distractions."

And what about Dad's news-time, and Mother's favorite program? It is, after all, only "a wee bit sacrifice" for parents to make in the interest of the student, whose schooldays will all too soon have passed away.

Smith and five grandchildren. Major and Mrs. Smith have moved into their new home on Bridgewater Street.

Mr. and Mrs. H.L. Smith had a very pleasant weekend in Halifax with their daughter, Mrs. Dewar MacNeill, Mr. MacNeill and family.

The marriage of the former Miss Joan Vall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Vall of Charlottetown, to Edwin Hammill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Redverse Hammill of Freeport, took place at St. Dunstan's Basilica November 23rd.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Preston Hammill, brother of the groom.

Miss Noreen MacCarthy, R.N., left Wednesday morning for Providence, Rhode Island to take a post graduate course. Noreen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Justin MacCarthy, Morell and a graduate of the Charlottetown School of Nursing. She was accompanied as far as Boston by Mrs. Joseph MacMillan, Charlottetown, who will spend a week there.

Mother M. Gerard Gives Views On Study Habits

"And what are you busy doing yourself at?" we asked a "tiss" in her early teens, mostly by way of conversation, when we chanced to come by her home one evening of the present term of school. She was the sole occupant of the living-room at the time. Seated in a comfortable easy chair, she was apparently dividing her attention between the open book in her lap and the TC, then into some lively and quite absorbing young play.

"Oh," she smiled, "I'm briefing myself on tomorrow's history test!"

And how she ever manages to study and watch TV at the same time is beyond me" her mother remarked, coming in then from the kitchen to join us. "But she has graded each year and with surprisingly good marks."

"However," she continued "I still don't approve of her or any other child having any other distraction during their periods of study. They can't—even the most brilliant of them, serve two masters. They may do better than you. But how much better they could do, if they would concentrate."

"She's a lucky girl to have a pleasant room like this for her studying," we offered. "There was a time—and not so long ago either when the student was hard-put to find a quiet comfortable spot in which to do her homework. In winter, the rooms of the farm-houses were mostly unheated, except on Sundays or special occasions. And the studying had to be done at the kitchen or dining-room tables in company with others of the family. And that didn't make for deep concentration."

"And wasn't it good," the mother smiled, "when the parlor-fire happened to be burning! To come there to a spell of study was, I always thought, to enjoy a foretaste of Heaven. To study cozily there in the light of the hanging-lamp, that was a rare privilege."

"Or" we chuckled "to have access to a bedroom, mellowed by the heat off the stovepipe from room or kitchen below!"

"Indeed I remember Mother telling me," the mother commented "that she often learned her lessons on a bench by the light of the open fireplace, or by candle-light. Now," she said,
