MPs In Britain Are Poorly Paid

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP) — More than 1,700 candidates in the British general election are chasing 630 jobs — about the worst - paying jobs of their kind.

Compared with elected representatives in North America and most European countries, the British MP gets poor earnings.

Differences in living costs and systems of payment make exact comparisons impossible, but there is little doubt most British MP's make a financial sacrifice for the honor of sitting as a member of the Mother of Parliaments.

He gets £1,750 ($5,250) a year, £750 of which can be deducted from taxable income as expenses. This compares, for instance, with Canadian MPs who get $18,000—a sessional allowance of $12,000 and tax-free expenses of $6,000.

Although British MPs come low on the scale, the prime minister and cabinet ministers do better.

The prime minister gets only £780 expenses as an MP but has a salary of £10,000 ($30,000) and is provided rent-free with two residences, 10 Downing Street in London and Chequers, a country home.

Thus he rates below only the president of the United States at $100,000 a year plus $50,000 expenses, and the Canadian prime minister at $45,000, including his sessional allowance as an MP, a salary of $25,000 and a car allowance of $2,000.

France, Italy, Sweden, Australia, Belgium and Germany—in that order—all pay their legislators more than Britain does.

Aside from the pay, members constantly complain of lack of facilities. The chamber itself has a seating capacity far below that of the membership. On rare occasions, when most members turn up, 200 or more have to stand or sit in the aisles.

Statements From Council Believed Easing Some Fears

By BERNARD DALY

VATICAN CITY (CP) — Vatican council statements on religious liberty should help ease the fears held by some non-Catholics, says Roman Catholic Archbishop Philip F. Pocock of Toronto.

The archbishop was interviewed between sessions of the council where almost the entire body of 224 American bishops initiated an appeal for the church to come out in favor of religious freedom for all.

He recalled fears expressed by some in Canada, especially in the United Church, when immigration began to result in rapid increases in the Catholic population.

These fears, he said, arose from doubts about what would be the views of Catholics on religious and personal freedom in the event they became a majority.

The question has particular importance in Toronto where the Catholic population increased to 600,000 from 300,000 between 1951 and 1961 and is expected to double again by 1975, Archbishop Pocock said.

Metropolitan Toronto's total population now is about 1,900,000.

"This council statement is going to reassure non-Catholics that Catholic population ascendancy is not going to interfere with religious rights."

Archbishop Pocock spoke also of the council's efforts to reach agreement on a statement on the church's attitude toward Jews.

He said he favored a statement that would declare unequivocally present-day Jews should not be blamed for the crucifixion of Christ, a view shared by many Canadian and American bishops.

Such a statement would have wide-ranging effects on Catholic teaching and preaching.

It would be important in Canada, he said, because there is still a great deal of discrimination against Jews even though many try to deny it.

Archbishop Pocock has said the New Testament passages in which Christ, St. Stephen and St. Paul use "hard words of accusation and condemnation" against certain Jews of their time cannot be taken as literal descriptions of the whole Jewish race.

"These accusations against the Jews were uttered by men who were themselves Jews. The harsh words were exhortations spoken by prophets in order to convert the people to whom they belonged, whom they loved, and with whom they identified themselves."

ARDA Agrees To Aid Que. Ski Project

OTTAWA (CP)—The Agriculture Rehabilitation and Development Agency has agreed to contribute $219,000 to a $1,000,000 project to convert Beaupre Mountain, 22 miles northeast of Quebec City, into a modern ski resort.

Antoine Belanger, mayor of Beaupre and Creditiste MP for Charlevoix, said in an interview here that work will start by Nov. 15 to clear ski trails down the 2,000 - foot slope.

The ARDA grant, half coming from the Federal government and half from the Quebec government, will be used to buy private pastures and pulp wood lots on the mountain.

3♣	3♥	4♦	4♥
5♣	Pass	Pass	Dble.

Opening lead—king of clubs.

There are all kinds of clues that a competent declarer uses to figure out the composition of the unseen hands. Once declarer knows the cards held by each opponent, it is usually mere child's play for him to obtain the best result possible in that hand.

Here is a sample of good card reading by a declarer. South arrives at five hearts doubled on the bidding shown and West leads the king of clubs followed by the ace.

Declarer ruffs in dummy, plays the ten of hearts, and takes a finesse, losing to the king. West returns a heart which South wins with the jack.

Declarer now plays the ace and another spade, finessing the ten! When the finesse succeeds, South discards all his diamonds on the spades and thus makes five hearts doubled. Without the unusual spade finesse he would go down one.

Now how is it that South is smart enough to finesse the ten of spades? Is it a lucky shot, or is there a sound basis for the finesse?

The answer is that South knows the finesse will succeed. He has a sound basis for reaching this conclusion, judging from the bidding and play by the opponents. He can deduce that West started with four spades, which in turn indicates that he should finesse.

Let's see what South knows about West's hand at the point when he decides to finesse. The only positive knowledge he has of West's length in any suit is that West started with two hearts.

However, it is certainly reasonable to assume that West would have returned a diamond instead of a heart, if he had one, and the failure to do this clearly indicates that he is void of diamonds.

Since East raised clubs at one point in the bidding, showing at least three-card support, it follows that West's eleven cards, excluding hearts, must consist of precisely seven clubs and four spades. No other distribution is possible.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
