The Hackney-Horse.

"The hackney," answered Dr Hudekoper, "traces its origin back many centuries. The oldest surviving appellation for the active-riding horse in this country appears to be nag, derived from the Anglo-Saxon neagan, to 'neigh.' When the Normans became masters, they introduced their own familiar term of haqueue or haqueue, the French word derived from the Latin equus. This name had been fully adopted into the English tongue in the year 1303. Robert Mannyng, more commonly known as Robert de Brunne, from his being a monk at Bourne, in Lincolnshire, in that year used it in the 'Ikk on his haknee.' In 'The Vision of Piers Plowman,' written about the year 1350, the word is thus used: 'As hakneyes hadde thei name, bot hakneyes to hyre.' Chaucer, who it is believed lived for a time in Norfolk, spelled the word in two forms—hakeneie and hakneye. All these old writers use it to describe a riding-horse for general purposes, as distinct from the war-horse.

"But, doctor, you only tell whence the name was derived, and not the horse."

"That is easily explained. Up to a few years ago the hackney was an animal that was put only to plebeian uses,—generally let out for hire; a horse of comfortable gait, much action, and capable of making good time over a road. But, as the result of a race between the same blood as in the Irish horses from which the hackney had obtained his action at his principal qualities. From these various sources the hackney of to-day had its origin."

Alive With a Broken Neck. ANOTHER REMARKABLE CASE WHEREBY A LIFE WAS SAVED. A rare medical case and one that stands almost unparalleled in the history of medicine up to the present time has been successfully treated in the little village of Hayteville, Mass. It is the setting of a broken neck, and the patient, a young man of 22, after a confinement of three months, is now able to walk about the village streets about three months ago, Dr. Hubert H. Flagg, of Northampton, while returning from a visit to a country house, witnessed an accident by which two young men in a party of four were thrown from a wagon. One rolled into a ditch and pivoted himself up, but the other lay motionless in the road. His neck was broken. The universal maxim in cases of a broken neck is: "Make death as easy as possible," but Dr. Flagg, when a medical student at the University of Pennsylvania, had decided that if a doctor got at his patient in time it ought to be possible to set a broken neck as well as a dislocated shoulder or thigh.

He stopped back to the body, placed his knees against the patient's shoulders, and took the head gently but firmly between his hands, then turning the head from side to side delicately, he gave a strong, steady pull. There was a sharp snap and the head was again in its socket. Respiration had become imperceptible before the head was snapped back into its original position, but this done there was immediate relief and a slight respiration was noticeable. By exercise great care the young man was transferred a distance of three miles to his home, Dr. Flagg holding his head in position all the time. Inflammation of the spinal chord was reduced by constant application of hot cloths to the back of the neck night and day for more than three weeks, and future treatments soon put the patient on the high road to recovery.

Odds and Ends

Desirable bonds for exchange—vaguely bonds. Greatness doth not approach him who is forever looking down. Should a mustard-plaster be classed among drawing materials? If you would convince a man that he does wrong, see that you do right. Ironers are great peace-makers. They always try to smooth everything over.

It is faith in something and enthusiasm for something that makes a life worth looking at. The world has nothing but contempt for men who do not support their words by their works. An efficient and valuable man does what he can, whether the community pay him for it or not. Every man may find some kindred mine with which he can unite in confidence and friendship.

A wall in the southern portion of China is said to be made entirely of fish. It ought to be an easy one to scale.

No man has the desire and the ability to do higher work, but he has also the ability to build himself the staging.

When a man is anxious to confine a secret to you, you can rest assured that he has confided it to a dozen other people before.

Is pig-iron petrified pork or congealed bacon? A member of an eminent manufacturing firm says: "If we smelt it, we shall find out."

A camel will work seven or eight days without drinking. In this he differs from some men, who will drink seven or eight days without working.

Among the Romans the gift of a ring was a badge of liberation from slavery. Married people can best explain whether it is so among the moderns.

"You don't mean to send us across the river in that horrid old boat with that little boy?" "Is all right, mam. Sure an' the boy can swim loike a duck."

A Swedish scientist claims to have discovered a method of extracting alcohol from sea water. As Shakespeare says, he intends to call spirits from the vasty deep.

A barrister who had successfully defended a rustic client accused of poaching received, a week afterwards, a hamper of game: "With the sender's thanks." Who could have sent it?

When a man says, "Yes, with pleasure," that is a courteous answer. When a man says bluntly, "N!" that, too, is a courteous answer; and when a man calls another a puppy, that, also, is courteous.

In the gardens of a certain nobleman's country house there happened to be fixed up at different spots pointed boards with this request: "Please do not pick the flowers without leave." Some wag got a paint brush and added a s to the last word.

A young lady, entering a crowded church, was a little uncertain as to the exact locality of the pew in which friends had kindly offered her a sitting. Touching an elderly gentleman on the shoulder, she sweetly enquired: "Can you tell me who occupies this pew?"

"Gentlemen," said a psalder, "these razors were made in a cave, by the light of a diamond, in Andalusia, in Spain. They can cut as quick as thought, and are bright as the morning star. Lay them under your pillow at night and you will be clean shaved in the morning."

A minister had occasion to supply the pulpit of a neighboring brother, whose wife was distinguished for her extreme parsimony. On being asked next morning by the hospitable lady of the manse if he would eat an egg for breakfast, he replied: "Yes, ma'am, I always eat one when I cannot get two."

"Ah, dearest," sighed the young man, kneeling at the feet of his ownest own, "dost thou know what of all outward things is nearest my heart?" "Really, I can't say," she replied, "but if you have any regard for your health in this changeable weather, I should think it was a flannel shirt." She was too practical, and it broke the engagement.

A boy had a whole Dutch cheese set before him by a waggish friend, who, however, gave him no knife. "This is a funny cheese, Uncle Joe, but where shall I cut it?" "Oh," said the grinning friend, "cut it where you please." "Very well," said the boy, coolly putting it under his arm, "I'll cut it at home."

Druggist: "I don't know the man at all. He came into my shop asking hurriedly for a stimulant, and while I was getting it he died." Clothier (next door): "What did he die of?" Druggist: "He died in a fit." Clothier: "I should have to have a customer die in a fit in my shop." Druggist: "Don't fear, no one ever will."

Talmage on the Grip. "Don't be putting off the harness; when God wants it off he will take it off. Don't be frightened out of life by the grip, as many are. At the first sneeze of an influenza many give up all as lost. No new terror has come on the earth. The microbes are the cause of disease were described in the Talmud 1700 years ago as 'invisible legions of dangerous ones.' Don't be scared out of life by all this talk about heart failure. That is what all the people that ever passed out of this life have died of—heart failure. Adam had it and all of his descendants have had it or will have it. Do not be watching for symptoms, or you will have symptoms of everything. Symptoms are often only what we sometimes see in the country, a dead owl nailed on a barn door to scare living owls. Put your trust in God, go to bed at 10 o'clock, have the window open six inches to let in the fresh air, sleep on your right side and fear nothing. The old maxim was right, 'Get thy spindle and distaff ready, and God will send thee flax!'"
