Talented Island Woman Has Many Business Interests

By Phyllis Wilson
Citizen Staff Writer

Miss Helen C. Driscoll of 335 Metcalfe Street has a special interest in insurance and off her job.

An employee of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics for 20 years, Miss Driscoll has been working on claims and benefits statistics ever since unemployment insurance was introduced in 1942.

Off the job, she is a director of the Ottawa District Credit Union Chapter and chairman of its insurance information committee. In that capacity, Miss Driscoll attended the recent second annual conference of chapter area representatives in Hamilton.

The conference is part of the policyowners' representative program and of a two-way educational program designed to help credit unions and their members understand and benefit from services provided by the credit union owned and operated CUNA Mutual Insurance Society.

Supposing an individual had $500 on share with his credit union, subsequently borrowed $1,000 and was killed shortly afterwards. If his credit union was a CUNA policyowner, his $1,000 loan would be wiped out and his $500 on shares would be doubled so that $1,000 would go to his estate.

SPECIAL JOB

Miss Driscoll has no authority to sell CUNA policies or no responsibility to CUNA. Her special job is to point out the advantages of credit unions being policy owners by distributing literature, speaking at credit union meetings and arranging contacts with CUNA. In mid-April she will be speaking at a dinner meeting of representatives of all Ottawa district credit unions.

Miss Driscoll was one of the founders of St. Joseph's parish credit union some eight years ago and has served on its credit committee. This is her second year as insurance information chairman of the Ottawa Chapter and she is the only woman among the nine directors.

WIFE PRESERVERS

Best time to administer cod-liver oil and other medicines is when the toddler is in the tub, ready for his bath. That's when the spillage is easiest to clean up.

A plastic food container from your refrigerator makes an ideal snag-proof shaker for washing stockings. Put in suds and hose, then shake. Rinse by running water through the open container.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Grandchild Watches For The Snowdrops To Appear

Several chickadees, attractive little creatures of birds, flew in on a March breeze this morning to light on the rosebush by the kitchen window and fly down to glean pickings about the yard. And presently to disappear from the surroundings, as suddenly as they had come. With March here we commence to consider that "the roots of the bright red roses are kept alive by the snow... and make first plans for the gardening. We take down our nucleus of seeds. Not many—some nasturtiums, beloved of birds and bees, some marigolds and forlorn-like bachelor's buttons. No born gardeners are we. We do not even save in season. There will be other lovely Autumn days for that. So we sit idly on the old stone doorstep, watching the shimmering haze above the fields, or maybe sailing away on a beguiling white cloud. Yet Mother Nature is kind to us. She gives us many a blossom to love.

"Will the snowdrops bloom in March this year?" Granddaughter wondered of these shy first flowers this morning, noting that border covered with a blanket of snow.

I have a fancy for a dish of "kraut, Ellen," James offered, coming in when we were preparing the dessert for dinner. We tucked an extra egg into the milk of the rice pudding we were mixing, added some raisins by the rule of thumb, and a generous dusting of nutmeg, following the method used by James' mother when making one, and still favored by him. "When we—another chap and myself, lived in our shack, watching it there in the west while we proved our prairie half-section a friend of the family related back in the century when on a visit home" we took turns at the cooking. Not that I enjoyed it," he chuckled, "but in time we got to be quite handy with a mixing spoon. We could make real good bannocks, and flapjacks that would melt in your mouth," he grinned. "Good porridge too—as a matter of fact that was our stand-by! Yes, we learned our cooking the hard way.

I remember one day I had a hankering for rice... not a pudding but just boiled rice. I knew how it was done. All I needed was a little salt and some boiling water. So the next time I was in town (more like a village it was) I bought five pounds of the stuff, and the next day I went to work on it—for dinner. I wasn't up on the amount to use but I decided the half would be plenty. Well, before I had it cooked, I had more than one pan of rice," he laughed. "If I had used it all, we wouldn't have had enough dishes there to hold it!"

Sauerkraut we had for dinner—the sweet of the summer-grown cabbage, mingled with the tangy baked potatoes, a roast of pork, a relish of apples. And after the dessert, browned and tasty James many a scene from those years now long gone.

"A knock at the door... a visitor—a bit of a boy with the sheen of snowflakes in his hair. "My Mother is putting Alex to bed," he says taking off snow boots. "Would you mind giving me some help with these (school) lessons?"

Until tomorrow—Diary—Good-night.

high-rising lines define spring fashions at Eaton's...

Silhouettes emerge with a Lifted Look achieved by cut, by big collars effecting a new feeling of width and by high placed details... belts, buttons, bows, seaming, pockets and cropped jackets. Waistlines are evident... most important when rising anywhere from just above the natural waistline to just under the bosom. Skirts are short and gently shaped with folds and tucks, waistlines are often raised.

Spring Fabrics are airy woven. Wools have a lacy, spongy texture... tweeds are mixed with white. Crepes, cottons and silks have the same open-texture patterns.

Spring Colours have the clear, cool sparkle of crystal... blonde tones, sunlit yellows, corals, blues, orange, greens and amethyst dominate. White is a major colour, it even affects other hues!

Accessories change personality to complement Spring's silhouettes. Hats are tall, smaller, worn off the face... sailors, bretons and toques are the important silhouettes. Shoes are slender shafts perched on low, shapely heels. Multi-strand necklaces and huge flower pins have a bright, pretty look. Handbags are softer, rounder. Belts, crushed, wide and narrow, countered are high drama.
