CHAPTER VII.

Allice was in bed, lying on her face, moaning piteously. I approached the bed very quietly and touched her, calling her softly by name. But she was completely wrenched by a strain upon her nerves and the gleam of recollection that flashed across her eyes gave me no welcome, expressive of any other than the most intense grief. I did not know how to proceed, to be able to say she knew me was a great step. She made no opposition when I insisted on passing the remainder of the night by her side, and in the morning I slipped back to my room while she was still asleep.

I made up my mind that I would keep up my vigil a little longer as the person or persons who had designs against Allice would use extra caution if they knew she had a friend about her.

Mrs. Ellis had been invited to Miss Clarke's room. This fact getting abroad, was, of course, looked upon as an attempt to "curry favor," and when I asked some questions of the lady's maid, she answered with coldness.

Miss Clarke's cries and moans had gone on for months, she said. Whichever room Miss Clarke occupied, in the uncertainty of flappings and screechings went on just the same. This was all I could learn from Anna.

I now thought of my friend, the cookery, Higgins, and I felt there was nothing for it but to use such means as came to my hand. I therefore strolled about the garden and river path in front that evening in the hope of meeting Mr. Higgins, but he did not appear, neither did I see anything of Allice that day or night until she had gone to her room; then I knocked and suggested to her that we should change rooms.

"Oh, would you dare?" she whispered, clutching my arm. "It would be of no use," she said, "dramatically," "it is only to me; it is because I am getting mad—mad, mad!"

She raised her hands to her head with a shudder. She was doleful, poor creature, when she approached her bed, and in a few minutes I had seen her go into my room, and had got into her bed in fear and trembling, for oh! I was frightened, here, in my room, and I waited for a trick which has been played for weeks upon an inoffensive woman, filled me with a sense of wickedness. I never felt that there was a horrible ingenuity about it, too, which seemed to me not far short of fiendish. Hours seemed to pass while I lay waiting. Now and then a board creaked or a mouse scampered across the ceiling, and I began to fear that Allice's unseen persecutor had discovered the fraud we had practised. Suddenly, with a hiss and a splutter, the light went out, and I felt a few drops of cold water on my face. All my fortitude proved of no avail. I screamed and sprang into a sitting posture. Something struck against my face with a screech, the air was alive as it had been the night before. Overcome by childish terror I buried my head in the bedclothes and wept. The disturbance continued for some minutes, then, as suddenly as it began it ceased, and there was a sound like the shutting down of a box. I tried to relight my night light but the wick was too wet. Then I leaped out of bed, and with the aid of a few matches I examined every cupboard and corner, as I had done before going to bed. All that I found was a couple of small feathers, one on the washstand and one on the floor. The fireplace board had not been moved, the door was locked as I had left it. Of course, I never closed my eyes all morning, and next day looked so sallow and haggard that I am sure Mrs. Ellis expected me to leave without warning. Allice came into the room that afternoon to thank me for what I had done.

"I slept, Winnie," I did really sleep, and I saw nothing, heard nothing. And did you hear nothing?"

"I heard something which convinces me that some one has been playing cruel tricks upon you," I answered, stoutly. "Why have you stayed quietly here without complaining?"

"I did tell my guardian that I had fancies; and I told Egbert, but they all laughed, nobody believed me. And Egbert was angry. He said if I left this house and I lost my fortune, he could not marry me, as he was too poor."

I was doing my best to console Allice, when Mrs. Ellis' footsteps were heard approaching, and Allice sprang up and left the room.

I was bursting with impatience to get on the floor, to interrogate Higgins the watchman, who could, I felt sure, let some light upon the mystery.

My opportunity came as I was strolling upon the lawn after dinner.

"Egbert, 'tis she!" was the welcome exclamation that told me my admirer was at hand. I was so delighted, in truth, to see him, that even he, great as was his confidence in his own charms, was surprised.

"How do you do?" I cried, enthusiastically. "I am very glad to see you."

"Thanks, thank you, my gal. You do me proud, blow me if you don't. Glad you hev the sense to know a good thing when you see it. Higgins is a werry good thing; take his word for it, and no error. And what might yer be pleased to want of me, my dear?"

"I was just to make me over the works," I said, boldly.

"And not so much to ask, either," said he, promptly. "Just you go up to the first floor, and wait at the end of the passage; 'til he be up on the other side in a jiffy."

CHAPTER VIII.

"It's too late to mind to-night," said Higgins, when he joined me at the end of the top landing. "There's nothing much to be seen tonight. The grinding and mashing is the best part of the brewery, but that's done with this particular machinery."

He led me into a narrow gallery along the wall of a great bar building. Many feet below us a huge tun, across one-half of which was fixed two long bars with double wheels at each end, so arranged that no grain could escape as the mill churning in hot water, was whirled round the tun. I drew back suddenly. "Supposing someone were to fall over this rail—it isn't very high—while the machinery was in motion!" suggested I.

"Someone 'ud be smashed up very small, that's all," said Higgins. "They'd be mince meat afore you could say 'Jack Robinson.'"

Higgins wished me to proceed with the first floor landing. To interrogate Higgins the watchman, who could, I felt sure, let some light upon the mystery.

"I was just to make me over the works," I said, boldly.

"And not so much to ask, either," said he, promptly. "Just you go up to the first floor, and wait at the end of the passage; 'til he be up on the other side in a jiffy."

RISKY HOARDING.

Old-Fashioned Methods of Hiding Valuables in the House.

The stocking bank of our grandmothers is not yet obsolete in the country districts, and the daily papers give frequent accounts of its insecurity. Safes are not burglar proof, either, and the occasional bank robberies and the failures, too, keep alive the fondness of women for searching for queer hiding places for their savings. Some of the old-time "banks" showed considerable ingenuity in their construction or covering.

An old lady living in a New Hampshire town had a set of large stationary drawers topped by cupboard doors into one of her huge closets. The lower drawer, instead of resting directly on the floor, ran on grooves perhaps two inches above it. She would pull out this lower drawer, place her jewel cases in the space left below, and then push in the drawer, which she kept filled with linen.

Equally showed was an Ohio woman, who, whenever she went out, put her money and jewelry in the coal scuttle, covering them up carefully with several layers of coal. This might have proved a rather risky experiment in the winter months when the fire had to be fed, but her owner felt that no burglar would ever think of looking for coal.

A favorite hiding place for money, especially for bills of large denominations, has always been the big family "bale" in a room. This is a method that is still common in rural places. So is the practice of sticking money snugly under a corner of a carpet, particularly under some large piece of furniture. This is a method that has much to commend it.

Tea caddies and sugar bowls make excellent temporary safes. Another hiding place is the old-fashioned Queen's crown, which is almost historic as a spot for tucking away little bundles of valuables.

It is safe to say that the number of women who put away jewelry in pocket-books under a mattress for safe keeping, afterward carefully smoothing the bed down, can be numbered by the thousands.

The pocket of an old dress that hangs in an unopened way in a closet is regarded by many women as one of the safest places imaginable for saving rings, brooches and trinkets, and even for a pocket-book. Old shoes standing in their proper place beside new ones, are likewise much esteemed, for a great deal can be hidden in them without giving the slightest evidence of the value therein.

Equally safe is a tin of ointment, which is a rich gold discovery is reported to have been made near Grahamstown, Cape Colony.

Mr. C. Donnelly, wholesale liquor dealer, Alliston, Ont., was troubled for years with itching pits. He was persuaded by James McGarvey, Alliston, a livery man, to use Chase's Ointment, which he did, and he has no return to his itching pits. Chase's Ointment is a sovereign cure for piles.

A Rome despatch says that the pope has granted an audience to Mr. Chidori on electoral and educational questions in Canada.

25 cents cures Catarrh of the Head, "Incipient Catarrh," "Hay Fever," "Catarrh of the Throat," "Cold in the head in 10 min." Four breaths caused by each.

25 cents cures Chase's Catarrh Cure with perfect blotter enclosed in each box. Sold by all dealers.

A despatch from Tientsin, La., reports that three members of the Cotton family, living near that place, were murdered by a negro, and another member of the family was seriously injured.

AMATEUR CYCLIST.

Wants Bicycle Riders and the Public to Know that he was Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

TORONTO (Special), Oct. 5.—People generally, who take an interest in cycling, as well as amateurs and professional everywhere, will remember a name familiar in a recent issue of the "Examiner," Mr. Louis J. Bonnell, who resides at 373 King Street East, this city. Bicycle riding was especially pleased to learn that his reappearance this season in good form is due to his entire recovery from serious kidney trouble which had for a long time been interfering with his work. He desires all his friends as well as the public to know that his recovery is entirely due to using three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

The Rosebank Farm
 Containing 180 Acres of Land.

THE above Farm has 120 acres clear and in a good state of cultivation, the remainder covered with wood. unfortunate

Cod-liver oil suggests consumption, which is almost unfortunate.

Its best use is before you fear consumption; when you begin to get thin, weak, run down; then is the prudent time to begin to take care, and the best way to take care is to supply the system with needed fat and strength. Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil, with hypophosphites, will bring back plumpness to those who have lost it, and make strength where raw cod-liver oil would be a burden.

A substitute only imitates the original. Scott's Emulsion, Ontario. 50c. and $1.00

It Saved Our Child.

"My little daughter, three and a half year old, suffered three weeks with Eczema. Her little body was covered with the itching rash, and doctors did no good. Four boxes of Chase's Ointment entirely cured and saved our child. Her skin is clear and not a sign of rash is to be seen." Andrew Aiton, Hartland, N. B.

Mr. Aiton is one of thousands benefited by this unflattering cure for piles and skin diseases.

There could be no better illustration of the fatal facility for lying on the part of the Turkish Government than an order issued the latter part of August to all the railway companies in the Empire to substitute Ottoman subjects for all the foreigners in their employ, except those who had technical knowledge. As almost all the companies are foreign, it was natural for them to refuse; and they threatened, in case the order was persisted in, to stop all the trains.

Completely Locked Out.

"I was so much run down I had to give up work, and I felt as if life was not worth living," writes Wm. W. Thompson, Zephyr, Ont. "I took Chase's Sarsaparilla and am now feeling as if I did years ago." Scott's Sarsaparilla tones up the entire system, purifies the blood, and eradicates rheumatic and scrofulous poisons. Ask for Scott's and get it.

Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

One pill a dose. 25 a box. The cheapest medicine in the world.

HAD INDIGESTION!

For a Matter of Some Forty Years or More.

Joseph Gardner, stove dealer, of Bath, Ontario, is a great believer in Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for indigestion, constipation, dyspepsia, Bright's disease, rheumatism, and kidney, liver and stomach troubles generally.

"I was troubled for over forty years with indigestion and constipation," he writes. "At intervals I suffered from severe headache. I spent dollars and dollars without result until Mr. Ellis, our druggist, advised me to try Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I did so, and must say that they are the only remedy that gave me relief. I would not be without them for anything."

Many people suffer from rheumatism, had blood and diseased kidneys bring it on. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will remedy all this and cure rheumatism, sciatica and all kindred complaints. Here is a sample case:

"My boy was crippled up and suffered awfully with rheumatism," writes Mrs. H. Wills, of Chesley, Ont. "He also had a cough, and the doctors could do him no good, but Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills completely cured him."

Sold by all dealers and Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto. 25c.

When all other remedies fail Dr. Chase's Laxative and Purgative will cure the worst chronic cold. 25 cents.
