

Senator Power Will Head Committee On Land Study

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator G.G. (Chubby) Power, 69-year-old lawyer and wartime air minister, was chosen Wednesday to head the 26-man Senate committee that will launch a wide investigation into land use in Canada.

Senator Power told the committee's organizational meeting following his selection that his "ignorance" of the subject of land use would be a "guarantee against prejudice."

A number of questions, such as the committee's objectives, the scope of its inquiry and whether it will travel were left to be worked out by a steering committee of eight members headed by the chairman.

Other members of the steering committee are Senators J. A. McDevlin (L—Nova Scotia), one-time agriculture minister in his province; Austin Taylor (L—New Brunswick), former agriculture minister in Ontario; and William Taylor (L—Quebec), an agronomist from St. Bruno, Que.; William Taylor (L—Ontario), a Brantford district farmer; William H. Golding (L—Ontario), a machinist; Thomas A. Crerar (L—Manitoba), one-time federal agriculture minister; and Ralph Horner (PC—Saskatchewan), a Blaine Lake, Sask., farmer.

FIRST WITNESS NAMED

The committee set its quorum at seven members, decided to meet at least once a week and designated as its first witness A. M. Shaw one-time dean of agriculture at the University of Saskatchewan and now chairman of the agricultural prices support board. Senator Power said he had a wide knowledge in the field of land use.

Senator J. Wesley Staunbrough (L—Alberta) suggested the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and provincial farm organization should be called.

Senator Crerar and Senator Charles Hawkins (L—Nova Scotia) both said that to do an effective job the committee would have to consider more than simply agricultural land use. Senator Power said under its wide terms of reference the committee could "go almost anywhere."

Senator Crerar suggested that since it might take as long as

Royal Canadian Navy Can Be "The Best Navy In The World"

VICTORIA (CP) — Canada is building a new navy—distinctly Canadian in character and outlook — a former Royal Canadian Navy officer writes from first-hand observation.

Stuart Keate, a veteran of the Second World War now publisher of the Victoria Daily Times, says the Canadian navy "is no longer a poor cousin of the Royal Navy, nor junior handmaiden to the United States Navy."

Mr. Keate sailed 10 days aboard the cruiser Ontario during a three-month training cruise in company with the Jonquiere and Stettler. "A ship like this can operate on the coast," Mr. Keate quoted one officer. The men idolize our captain. Ours is a young navy with few heroes, but he is one of them. The men serve him well because they admire him.

RELAX GROC RULE

The new navy has even relaxed its rules on the issue of the daily grog—two and a half ounces of Island Students Attend U. of W.

MADISON, Wisconsin — Three students from Prince Edward Island, are among 603 students from 70 lands outside of the United States who are enrolled this year as students in the University of Wisconsin. They are Dean B. Robinson, Charlotetown, Route 8; William L. Seaman, 99 King St., Charlotetown; and Allison B. Stevenson, Hunter River, R.R. 2.

These students are sharing the classrooms and laboratories of the University's main campus with nearly 15,500 fellow-students who come from Wisconsin and other parts of the United States.

One of the nation's 10 largest institutions of higher learning, the University of Wisconsin is internationally known as a center of deep scholarship and productive research. Its offerings in such fields as agriculture, engineering, economics, biochemistry and others have long attracted advanced students from every corner of the globe. In recent years, Wisconsin has ranked first among U.S. universities in the number of doctoral degrees granted annually.

Students of all nationalities at Wisconsin reap the benefits of a system of intellectual freedom which has been a tradition since the University's founding in 1848. This tradition was expressed in these words by the University's Board of Regents late in the last century: "Whatever may be the limitations which trammel inquiry elsewhere, we believe that the great state University of Wisconsin should ever encourage that continual and fearless sifting and winnowing by which alone the truth can be found."

Until this tradition, Wisconsin scholars and scientists have contributed to the nation and to the world significant findings ranging from new insights into history to chemical weapons in the war of disease.

A Former Charlottetown Chef Teaches The New Army Chefs

MONCTON, Feb. —Who's ever heard of "Lobster Newburg" being served in an Army chow-line? "Old swiss" of two world wars will discuss such a preposterous item, his recollections probably running mainly along the lines of beans, dehydrated potatoes, and unidentifiable meat dished out by cooks who were cooks by the force of circumstance only.

Many a former soldier would be dumfounded by the radically different scheme of things in the Canadian Army of today, but he could not find much to complain about. As proof that Army cooking has been raised to high levels, Canadian National Railways is co-operating with the military in a scheme whereby the men who prepare the food for the soldiers are studying their trade under one of Canada's top culinary experts, Chef Edward Gebistort of the big Nova Scotia Hotel in Halifax.

NO COOKS

As a matter of fact, the Army doesn't have cooks any more. These days, it has Chefs, and gone also are the kitchen fatigues and the weary spud-peeling details. The chef's job today is considered one of the finest Army careers, with warrant officer rank and good pay rates. Working in ultra-modern spotless kitchens, the chefs put the emphasis on careful preparation of tasty varied menus, and as far as ration scale, calorie count and variety are concerned, the Canadian Army is acknowledged throughout the world as the top-ranking service.

(Not that dishes like "Lobster Newburg" are found on the "city day" menus of the mess halls, however. But Army chefs are competent to prepare it and many other delicacies when occasions demand, when they have completed their C.N.R. course.)

WORKING WELL

The idea of bringing the fine points of large-scale hotel catering to armed forces messes was the brain child of Captain John F. Samson, catering officer of the Army's Eastern Command, and it is working out so well that Headquarters in Ottawa is planning to introduce the scheme at other posts across the country, with the co-operation of other hotels in the Canadian National Railways chain.

In the huge kitchen of the Nova Scotia, the soldiers participate in the operations of all departments. They study the workings of the meat cutting room, the pasty shop, the bake shop, cold meat room, roast, sauce and fry cook stations and the banquet serving pantries.

The men are hand-picked for the course by Captain Samson and his assistants. They are chefs with years of experience and a solid grounding in their work. Chef Gebistort's instruction gives them the final touches that make them polished masters of their trade. Special emphasis is placed on the economic aspects of catering — the cost factor in meal preparation.

Wants Longer School Week

WINNIPEG (CP) — Dr. W. C. Lorimer, Winnipeg school superintendent, says the day is approaching when educationists will seriously consider lengthening either the school day or the school week for homework purposes.

He told the Winnipeg school board during a recent discussion on the effects of television on education, that television has a tendency to hold the children's attention away from their homework.

"There are problems such as utilization of schools, length of the school year and a crowded curriculum," he said, "but the time will come when officials must consider lengthening the school day to include homework."

Another school board official, Dr. Andrew Moore, said that studies showed that a half an hour of supervised study was worth more than one hour of study at home with the distractions of television and other things.

"In some parts of Europe they're having school on Saturdays already," he said.

Wants Longer School Week

Last Thursday there was another Sport event, the Student-Faculty Volley ball team once more met an opposing team on the court. As the score wasn't announced deduction says they may not have fared very well.

Seeing intermural is prevalent amongst the male section of the college, in both basket ball and hockey, our "weaker sex" decided it was about time they organized a league in some sport so the birth of a new intermural league, the Girls Basketball, open to all female members of the Student body.

The time has come to leave once more, but before we go I can't keep the good news to myself. College Day is coming up again. A special meeting of the Student Council will be held in connection with this event shortly. Let's hope we can have half as good a time as we had last year.
