From the Pavement to the Prison.

There is a class of persons in Charlottetown who cause much more trouble than the corner pests. They are known to the police as habitual offenders—men whose craving for drink cannot be satisfied, and whose life is made up of bouts of drinking, debauchery, rioting and general disorderly ness. Sometimes they are driven to steal in order to raise funds to satisfy the cravings of the demon within them. As a rule, however, the habitual offender is not a professional thief, for the chief reason that larceny is punishable by cumulative sentences, and the offender very soon graduates for penal servitude. He is then out of the way for a lengthened period.

We have, at the present time, a large number of "wrecks." Charlottetown, for the last twelve months, has been rather notorious for its habitual offenders. Time and again have newspaper readers been addicted by perusing paragraphs about the frequent appearances in the police court of certain notorious drinkers. We have still an army of drunkards who seem to have lost all hope.

We are all familiar with such a spectacle as XXX drunk again. He has worked hard for a day or two, and having become possessed of a dollar or two, has resolved on having a holiday. While sober he is an inoffensive person; but when tipsy he is a perfect nuisance. He commences early in the forenoon, and, as he is a "solo-drinker," he goes about from one rum shop to another, getting more and more "top heavy" as he wanders along.
He is a "hop beer" drinker, but his stomach has, like that of most other human beings, a limited capacity for liquids. He begins to feel that the last glass has made him "full," and to qualify the beer he sends down a dose of whiskey. The whiskey has the desired effect. The stomach contracts, and the waist-coat is no more a "tight fit." The ardent spirits which he poured down his throat make him frisky, and to keep it company he sends down another ten cents worth out of the same cask.

He then begins to think that he has given enough custom to one "shop," and makes for the next. But the journey proves tedious and very long, as the pedestrian unknowingly follows an imaginary serpentine walk. He becomes weary, and leans against an electric lamp post. It is "grateful and comforting," and he falls asleep. In that position he is found by the police, who kindly take him where he has often been before.

This shows how humanely a "sot" is conveyed from the pavement to the prison.
XXX is a sot of the most profound type.
He is never outrageous except when he is interfered with at that stage known as "half over." Then he is "in form," and knocks down all who come in his way—his wife and children included. Let alone, however, he fills himself "up to the neck," and then lies down to sleep "perchance to dream." For the moment he is at all events in dreamland, and nothing short of pitcher of cold water down his coat sleeve can restore him to consciousness. The police know this and a conveyance is obtained. XXX is laid quietly into it, and is conveyed to the police office, where his coming to consciousness, hours after, is made known by a husky voice demanding a "big drink" of water. He is then brought before the court and is sentenced. This is drinking made easy with a vengeance.

All this may seem a burlesque to those who have little or no knowledge of a policeman's duties. But, alas! it is a real picture I have been drawing. The question is:
Are we, as citizens, doing anything to abate the nuisance. The Scott Act is the besttotalled (as well as some who are not) method of treating the subject, while those who are not total abstainers hold the opposite view. My own opinion is that there ought to be a movement made in the direction of heavier sentences on drunkards, and not only heavier, but cumulative penalties in the case of habitual offenders.
I am also of opinion that habitual drunkards should be sentenced to long terms of incarceration and made to work for their maintenance.

I would also have a section of our prison set apart for habitual offenders, where the discipline, though, perhaps, not quite so strict as in the case of ordinary criminals, would yet be so exacting as to make the drunkard feel that he was not only being punished for his misdeeds, but also that an effort was being made to reclaim him.

The question is certainly a very large one, but it must be dealt with in a very short time. There is no more demoralizing sight on the street than a drunken man, and if he could be kept out of the way for some lengthened period the gain to the community would be great.

DEBORAH.

Is She An Islander?

The Halifax Herald says:—A girl named Jane Beazley arrived in this city Wednesday afternoon from Lunenburg in a schooer. It appears that a short time ago a man named Zwicker, belonging to Lunenburg, while in Halifax became acquainted with the young girl and promised to marry her. He persuaded her to go to Lunenburg, assuring her that on their arrival they would be married. After their arrival there he betrayed the girl and in an endeavor to cover his crime he gave her a bottle of medicine. The girl thinking there was something wrong went to a druggist, and asked him to examine the fluid contained in the bottle. The druggist informed her that it was poison, and would certainly kill her if she swallowed any.
She then went to the man who had wronged her, but he disclaimed all knowledge of the affair, and said to the parties who were present at the time that he never saw the girl before. This was proved to be false, as he had been seen with the girl. After the girl found out the kind of character Zwicker was she commenced to sob bitterly, and at times wished that she could kill herself. She at once made up her mind to return to Halifax, and on the way up she tried several times to jump overboard, but was prevented doing so by the hands on board the vessel. The unfortunate girl arrived here some time ago from P. E.

Island and worked a short time as a domestic with a family named Redmond on Brunswick street. While there she became acquainted with Zwicker who led her astray. On her arrival here word was sent to her people in P. E. Island, who were very respectable. The girl was well liked by all who knew her and was always considered a very respectable girl. Parties here are awaiting a reply from the girl's parents and in case they do not want her home, provision will be made to have her properly cared for.

A Full and Free Enquiry

INTO THE "TIMES" CHARGES PROVIDED FOR BY SPECIAL ACT.

Following is the text of the Government bill for the appointment of a special commission to enquire into the Times' charges against Irish members of Parliament:— Whereas, Charges and allegations have been made against certain members of the House of Commons and others, by the defendants in the action of O'Donnell against Walter and another, it is expedient that a special commission be appointed to enquire into the truth of the charges and allegations, and that it should have such powers as may be necessary for the effectual conducting of the enquiry: Be it therefore enacted, first, that the three persons hereinafter mentioned (names not given) are hereby appointed commissioners for the purpose of this act. The commissioners shall enquire into and report upon the charges and allegations against certain members of the House of Commons and others in the action of O'Donnell against Walter and another.

Secondly, That the commission shall, for the purposes of the enquiry, have all such powers, rights and privileges as are vested in Her Majesty's High Court of Justice or any judge thereof on the occasion of any action including all the powers and rights and privileges in respect of the attendance of witnesses, examining them under oath, affirmation or otherwise, compelling the production of documents, punishing persons guilty of contempt, the issue of a commission or request to examine witnesses abroad, and sum-mones signed by one or more of the commissioners may be substituted for and be equivalent to any formal process capable of being issued in any action for enforcing the attendance of witnesses or compelling the production of documents. A warrant of commission issued for the purpose of enforcing the powers conferred by this section shall be signed by one or more of the commissioners, and shall specify the person to whom the offender shall be committed.

Thirdly, That the persons implicated in said charges and allegations, the parties to said suit, and any persons authorized by the commissioners may appear at the enquiry, and any persons so appearing may be represented by counsel or solicitor.

Fourthly, That every person who, on examination on oath or affirmation, wilfully gives false evidence shall be liable to the penalties for perjury.

Fifthly, That any witness may be cross-examined on behalf of any other person appearing before the commissioners. A witness shall not be excused from answering any question put to him on the ground of any privileges or ground that the answer may criminate or tend to criminate himself. Evidence taken under this act shall be admissible against any person in any civil or commercial proceedings, except in one case the witness shall be accused of having given false evidence in the enquiry under this act.

Sixthly, That every person examined as a witness, who, in the opinion of the commissioners, shall make full and true disclosure touching all matters in respect whereof he is examined shall be entitled to receive a certificate signed by the commissioners stating that he has made a full and true disclosure, and if any civil or criminal proceedings shall at any time thereafter be instituted against such witness in respect to any matter whereon he shall be examined, the court having cognizance of the case shall on proof of the certificate stay proceedings, and may in its discretion award the witness such costs as he may be put to by reason of the proceedings.

What the Girls Say.

A Halifax dispatch of the 19th, says:— The two girls who accompanied Miller to St. John returned last evening. They are both prepossessing in appearance. Aggie and Lizzie McKenzie, the names which they registered at St. John are their correct cognomens. One is sixteen years of age and the other twenty-one. They are sisters and belong to St. Peter's, C. B.
The youngest one has been employed as a servant to Lieut.-General Ross, and the other at Mr. Morrows, Northwest arm.
They state that on Sunday they were walking along Spring Garden road when Miller driving along in a buggy halted them as if he had been previously acquainted, and asked them to take a drive. They accepted and he took them to the three mile house. During the drive he proposed to marriage to the elder sister who accepted. He told her that he owned a yacht and that she was coming here with a number of strangers and that she was also going to Charlottetown where he had to make arrangements, and there the marriage would take place. The next day the girls obtained leave of absence by stating that their brother was going away in the train and they wanted to see him off.
They deny that there was any improper conduct while they were in Miller's company. Both girls were dismissed from their employment.
