Satellite Group Is Preparing To Begin Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — With appropriate pomp and circumstance, the Communications Satellite Corporation (Comsat) is preparing to inaugurate its transatlantic commercial service today. Top government officials of the United States, Canada and Europe are to take part.

Telephone calls, news stories and photographs will be sped back and forth from Washington to London, Bonn and other cities via the Early Bird satellite, now hovering 22,300 miles above the Atlantic between Brazil and Africa.

British Prime Minister Wilson, Canadian Prime Minister Pearson, both in London, and West German Chancelloe Erhard in Bonn are scheduled to take part. The American representative has not been announced.

SET UP EQUIPMENT

Headquarters are being set up at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington and the Fleet building in London. Telephones and news and photo transmitters will be set up in both.

Joseph Charyk, head of Comsat, will introduce the American representative for the first call and government officials in each country will reply with greetings of about three minutes each.

During the ceremony, press representatives will talk with overseas associates, and news stories and pictures of the event will be transmitted.

Early Bird was launched from Cape Kennedy, Fla., April 6. Experimental use has been in progress for some weeks. The U.S. federal communications commission last Wednesday approved the start of commercial operations.
