

British Labor Gov't Ends Year Confident

By GEOFFREY WHITEHEAD
LONDON (Reuters) — Britain's Labor government is ending its first full year in office in a mood of confidence despite a lengthy economic crisis, internal party unrest and the stress of a waver-thin hold on power.

Backed by favorable opinion polls, Prime Minister Wilson is optimistic that his government can carry on until chances are good of winning a new mandate.

All the pointers are that he will seek to build up his administration's record until next spring or fall and then call for elections in an attempt to increase his parliamentary majority.

With the five-vote overall majority which Labor took office last Oct. 16 already whittled down to three and in danger of being cut still further at by-elections, the sheer fact of survival can be claimed a success by Wilson.

HAPPY WITH WILSON
The national opinion poll published in the Daily Mail Thursday gave Labor 49.7 per cent of national support and Conservatives 37.7 per cent while 66 per cent declared themselves satisfied with Wilson as prime minister.

The record of the last 12 months has proved that the smallness of the administration's majority has been a source of strength in averting threatened revolts by Labor party left-wingers over economic, foreign and immigration policies.

No left-wing rebel — or right-wing critic of steel nationalization plans — has been willing to take responsibility for endangering the government's life.

Because of this the government has been able to modify or abandon what a year ago were considered fundamental plank of party policy.

Left-wingers have had to accept retention of Britain's su-

Band Formed In Kensington

KENSINGTON — Last week marked the completion of another Lion's Club project when 23 boys and girls from the age of 10 became members of the Kensington Lion's Club B. band.

Members of the A Band made their instruments available to the youngsters, and their bandmaster, W.E.R. Lock of Sumner-side gave them plenty of opportunity to make plenty of noise. At one time the sounds clear weapons underlined by a recent indication from Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart that the government is living second thoughts on some implications of its Atlantic nuclear force plan.

REBUFF OBJECTIONS
Objections to British backing for United States policies in Viet Nam have been rebuffed and plans to nationalize the steel industry are widely believed to have been shelved indefinitely.

At home, the government claims it has achieved a major breakthrough in getting labor union agreement to a tighter control of pay claims.

When this comes into effect later this year the government believes it will be able to halt the threat of inflation and help make the nation's exports more competitive.

Against this background, senior ministers believe they will be able to reap the benefits of a better economic climate next year — without having to enter into any formal alliance with the minority Liberal party in order to stay in power.

The government is reported to have trimmed its legislative program for the new session of Parliament opening Nov. 9 so that the 10-man Liberal team in the House of Commons will not be forced into opposing major measures.

The bidding:
West North East South
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Dbie
2 ♣ 3 ♣ Pass 3 ♣

Opening lead — king of clubs. What does not happen in a hand is sometimes more interesting than what does happen. This deal from the Italy-United States match of 1961 illustrates the point.

When Hodge and Gerber held the North-South cards for the American team, the bidding went as shown. D'Alelio led the king of clubs on which Chainadia played the four, commencing a high-low signal to show a doubleton.

Had D'Alelio continued with the ace and another club, and later pursued this line of deense, declarer would surely have gone down one.

South would have had to ruff the third club in dummy with the ten, East discarding a low diamond. Declarer could then do no better than lead a spade to the king, which West would win with the ace.

A club lead now by West would then permit East to ruff with the nine and thus promote the setting trick for the defense.

But alas, the defense did not follow this course. Instead West shifted to a heart at trick two. This play gave declarer a chance to make the contract, but South promptly chucked it right back by leading the ten of spades at trick three instead of a low one.

West took the king with the ace, and — the fate of the hand having been kicked back a nd forth long enough — D'Alelio now proceeded to defeat the contract.

He cashed the ace of clubs and continued with the ten, East ruffing with the nine as dummy discarded a diamond.

This brought the defense to four tricks and should have spelled finis to a series of bad plays, but East added still one more blunder when he returned a diamond instead of a heart.

So South wound up going down one, which was par for the course, but the par was achieved in a most peculiar way.

everberating from the High School Auditorium left much to be desired, but it brought back memories of Kensington's first band which was formed in August of 1963.

The new band has a complete complement of drums, two saxophones, three trumpets, three clarinets one flute, two alto horns two baritone, two mellophones.

These bandmen started learning last week and it will be interesting to hear them six months from now.

The A Band which now has been in operation for some three years will give its first concert of the season at the High School auditorium on Monday, Nov. 1, at 8 p.m. The A Band is now a 33-piece, well balanced band, and it is felt that people will be greatly surprised at the proficiency of this group of young musicians.

All proceeds from the concert will be used to finance the concert tour of the band in 1966.
