

MR. AND MRS. ANTONIO FACINI

Couple Exchange Vows At Two Ring Ceremony

Summer flowers decorated the altar of St. Dunstan's Basilica, Charlottetown, and guests were marked with white ribbons fastened with satin bows, on Aug. 21st when Mary Imelda, daughter of Mrs. Arthur Feehan, Charlottetown, became the bride of Antonio Olivo Facini, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ambrogio Facini, Udine, Italy.

Reverend Gerard Tigney performed the double-ring ceremony during the nuptial mass.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother Danny, entered the church in the strains of the Wedding March. She was in a floor-length gown of white organza over taffeta, with a bateau neckline and long lily pointed sleeves with buttoned cuffs. Her headpiece was a clustered leaf circlet which held a bouffant illusion veil. Her only jewellery was a single strand of pearls a gift of the groom. She carried a cascade of red roses.

Donna Feehan, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, wore a street length dress of blue taffeta over nylon. Her headpiece was a pill-box hat of matching color and she carried a cascade of blue and white carnations.

The groom was attended by Mario Sartor, of Fredericton, N.B., and ushers were Altilio Mollica and Stephen MacDonnell.

Mrs. Feehan chose for her daughter's wedding a blue crepe dress with white accessories and she wore a corsage of pink and white carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception for 60 guests was held at the Confederation Centre. The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake, topped with a bride and groom.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Mario Sartor, to which the groom fittingly responded. Telegrams received were read by Stephen MacDonnell. After the reception the bridal party visited the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Katherine Kelley, at the Sacred Heart Home, and friends and relatives of the bride and groom gathered at the Community Centre in the evening, where a buffet supper was served and dancing and singing was enjoyed.

For a honeymoon which included a trip to Halifax and Fredericton, the bride chose a dress of pink taffeta over nylon with white accessories and a corsage of pink and white carnations.

Out of the province guests included Mr. and Mrs. Leo DeValentin, Ermio Harbic, Tony Foggiato, Fred Commuzi, Ettore Del Frate, Mr. and Mrs. Romeo Florean, Jino Diminuto, Domenico Camillo, Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Fabro, Sergio Commuzi, Vally Piesello, Nina DeGiacinto, all of Fredericton, N.B., and Marie Taurina and Victoria Angelo from Halifax. (Photo by Myers Studio)

Women

6 The Guardian, Charlottetown, Wed. Sept. 22, 1965.

IODE Provincial Executive Finalizes Plans For Show

A report from Mrs. W. R. Brennan on the plans for the 1965 "Red Glove Revue" highlighted the first IODE provincial executive meeting of the season held Thursday evening at the Dominion Building in Charlottetown.

The meeting was chaired by the provincial president, Wandia Wyatt.

In her report Mrs. Brennan told members that the show was being held at the Confederation Center in Charlottetown on October 19 and 20 and at Civic Auditorium in Summerside on the 21st.

She reported that the efforts of the advance committee was well underway and that much of the work that remained was centered around the show itself. The director of the show will be Ted Hook of Los Angeles, who will be arriving October 1 to start rehearsals.

Mrs. C. D. Ives, who is chairing the Summerside section of the show, also reported that advance committee work was going along well.

Miss Wyatt, Mrs. Stewart MacKay and Mrs. Arthur Love reported that the two junior chapter members, Lynn Loftis and Gail Carver, who attended the Junior Chapter Seminar in Ontario earlier this summer had returned to the province with many new ideas for improving the work of the IODE's junior chapter in this province. Highlight of the girls' trip, which was a joint project of the National Centennial Committee and the Ontario IODE, was a reception given for them by Governor General, the Rt. Hon. Georges Vanier and Madam Vanier.

Mrs. J. R. Roper was appointed secretary at home and abroad secretary, replacing Mrs. Ronald Clark. Assisting Mrs. Roper will be Mrs. L. A. MacDougall and Mrs. R. Pope. Mrs. Roper reminded members that the IODE's fall shipment would be going in (the) November and asked chapters to start preparing articles for the show. She said that the spring shipment included four cases, over 500 articles, of new and used clothing and was sent to the British Save the Children's Fund for distribution to refugees in Europe, Africa and Asia.

Barbara Worth was appointed assistant secretary to Mrs. J. T. Davies.

A decision was made to leave the selection of a painting that the provincial chapter is giving to the art gallery at the Fathers of Confederation Memorial Center up to the regional art committee.

Members were told that the annual IODE church parade would be held at Park Royal United Church on Sunday, September 26 and that the semi-annual meeting of the provincial chapter would be held in Summerside on Saturday, October 30.

Reports were given by the provincial treasurer, Mrs. E. C. MacKay and by the education secretary Mrs. A. W. Gaudet, who announced that a bursary has been awarded to Karen Anne LeClair of Charlottetown.

HAPPENINGS

Audrey Jenkins, Women's Editor, Phone 4-5508

Mr. and Mrs. Melton J. MacLean have returned to their home in St. John's Nfld. after vacationing with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Prowse Gardiner, Freetown and Mr. and Mrs. Willard MacLean, Peter's Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Garnet MacIntyre, Sr., accompanied by their daughter Debbie left recently for Boston, Mass., where they will visit relatives and friends.

Sidney D. Stewart, Montreal, Que. has returned to that city, after spending a two week holiday with his brother, Bruce Stewart, High Bank.

Mr. and Mrs. Anders Endal and young daughter, Leiv, have returned to their home in Montague after spending a pleasant holiday visiting in Halifax and other points of interest in Nova Scotia.

Mr. and Mrs. John Beaton and family, Mabou, Cape Breton, were recent visitors in Montague, guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. Kerr.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon MacKnight, Montague, accompanied by Senator Elsie Inman, left recently for Cape Cod, Mass., where they will visit with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wightman of Montague, are leaving today on a holiday trip to the World's Fair, New York.

Mrs. Alvin Adams, Brooklyn, was hostess to a stork shower recently in honor of Mrs. Wendell Wallace. With the guest of honor seated in a decorated chair, gifts were presented in a basket which carried out the pink and blue color scheme. Mrs. Ralph Haywood read the accompanying wishes as the gifts were

Burton Girl Receives WI First Prize

The presentation of the Prince County North No. 1 Women's Institute convention area, Grade VIII prizes was recently held in St. Marks Lot 7 parish hall. This area comprises Ebbesfoot, Pineville, Duvar, Bloomfield Corner, and Burton. With Burton WI members as hostesses, the president, Mrs. Clifford Collicutt presided and presented the envelopes.

Louise Dalton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lance Dalton, Burton, was awarded first prize, with the highest mark of 672. Brenda Horne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Horne, Bloomfield Corner was awarded second prize, with a total of 608 and third prize winner was David Gallant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Gallant, Dewart, with a mark of 573. Congratulations were extended to those young people for their high standings, also to their parents and teachers who had been of assistance to them.

In reply, the students extended their gratitude to their teachers and parents who helped and encouraged them, also to the Women's Institute branches who are providing this scholarship. The pupils will enroll at O'Leary Regional High School for their high school courses.

Refreshments were served by the Burton WI members and a social hour was enjoyed.

At Alderlea, these days, let a barn-loft fill with bales of straw and straightway the escalator is moved to a new location, and that phase of the harvesting is continued. This afternoon bales were being admitted at a door high up in the gable of a building, which handily shelters various animals during the season of stabling. Now it may be several younglings of the 'e' o' kind, again it becomes a 'place of special care where cows with new-born calves are housed. And should we come to look in there in the springtime, we may see a winsome lambkins nursing or at play, or maybe cuddled close to their ewes.

The September sun wove its shadows today sunny and dark on the fields of the farmlands, and a grainland away against a hillside, spread uncreased and golden. Down the stream riverward the crows calls were sober, and of late there has been no sight of that hero on who flies into our summer days.

"We don't see many straw piles burning this harvest" we commented to James, who placed bales in turn on the escalator from the wagon beside us. No comfortable creak the wagons have nowadays, nor is there pleasant tap of horses' hoofs. Nor bound running on ahead down from the fields to ward the table to have the meal on the table!

"Those were the full harvests, Ellen" James remembered. "But that's the pity of it, isn't it? When we had those, we thought we'd never again see a scarcity. We humans are like that: in prosperous times, want, the sceptre seems to be miles and miles away!"

"But want can come quickly on farms. A dry summer, a wet one, a cold spring, and the result shows on the fields" we said.

"Oh well, this was a dry summer. But it could have been worse. The wonder of it is that the crops survived at all!"

A little truck came in happily, and in a practised move was drawn up by a granary. There was a sound of grain being augured, before the machine went out again smartly to the fields.

"There's certainly not the work of once to the harvest" James remarked, watching a bale ride up. "The combines changed that."

"And the coming of electricity to the farms, to power escalators and augurs" we said.

"I wish they'd invent something to pack away the bales in the loft" one of the younger fry grinned in passing.

School has again claimed Mack — the little school down the River Road.

"And how goes it?" we queried.

"Oh, so, so... not bad at all" he replied.

Naturally there are calls of the farm on his time. "When Mack comes, you might tell him to..." his father will say. "Now, if Mack were only here, we could..." his grandfather sighs.

"Dear me" James offers now, opening the door to let Tabby out into the moonlight. "I never saw a day go faster than this one. There was no last to it at all, now was there?"

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good night.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN McCARDLE

WED RECENTLY

Mr. and Mrs. John McCardle are seen following their August wedding at St. James Roman Catholic Church, Summerside. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Murphy, Summerside and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert McCardle, Middleton. Rev. John Cash officiated at the ceremony. (Photo by Heckbert Studio)

Marvin and Eugene Murphy of Charlottetown were visitors at the home of his brother, Peter Dalton, Burton, on Sunday.

Olga Griffin of Toronto, Ont., is spending holidays at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Griffin, Burton.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis McKenna and family of Central Bedouque were recent visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Griffin, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Griffin, Burton.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

Mr. and Mrs. Louis McKenna and family of Central Bedouque were recent visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Griffin, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Griffin, Burton.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Gallant and family of St. Catharines,

MARY HAWORTH

Man Suggests Wives Be Told To Ignore Betrayals

Dear Mary Haworth: Last evening my husband and I, with two other couples, were dinner guests at the home of very good friends.

The first course had been served and the host was pouring the wine. Just as he got to me I absentmindedly began to cut with my fork at one of the vegetables on my plate. And he, perhaps playfully but very firmly, slapped my wrist. (The hostess hadn't yet lifted her fork.)

I am sure that at least one other person observed this little incident.

Of course I was exceedingly embarrassed by my lapse. Perhaps I should construe the host's gesture as the act of a very good friend, to be accepted gracefully, in good humor. But the fact is that I consider he was unnecessarily rude. What do you think? J.E.

Dear J. E.: People in glass houses shouldn't throw stones, a proverb says. And you were just on the verge of committing a fault, in terms of attacking your plate as if you'd come only to eat, when your host intervened to slow you down.

So, on the glass house theory, perhaps it's good judgment to put the most "giving" appraisal upon your host's wrist-slapping gesture.

The civilized primary aim of dining with friends is to enjoy a feast of mind, supposedly, and only secondarily to relish a shared "breaking of bread."

In my view, the incident is so wounding to you, doesn't warrant brooding about. It seems to me your host inflicted a minor embarrassment (if such it was) chiefly to spare the whole group a later one, namely, the blooperspectacle of your forking food into your mouth before he could return to his place from distributing wine and before his wife had signaled for eating to start.

My advice is, forget the humiliation. Or if you can't just yet, then turn the sting to good account by letting it remind you to keep your attention focused on people hereafter and your appetite consciously under control when dining out.

I might mention, finally, that your reflex impulse to hold your host to blame for your sizable discomfort, relating to your awkward moment at table, is a very human, non-analyzed childish way of reacting blindly to the pain of feeling ashamed of oneself, while also afraid to face up to a clear assessment of what one needs to learn, to be fully poised, impeccable and at ease.

When experience boomerangs and hurts your pride, it is better to take the slap in stride, saying to yourself "I'll learn from this," than to seek false consolation in alibi, which merely weakens your sense of responsibility for the person you are, or hope to become. M.H.

Dear Mary Haworth: My husband has been important since his return, three years ago, from a year's assignment overseas. We have been married 15 years.

I have adjusted to the situation, more or less. But he hasn't fared so well. Some months ago he asked for another year's assignment abroad. He is overseas now.

Apparently he can't bring himself to seek help, except to sneak once to our pastor, and then only when their paths were parting. I want to do something positive, at least to the extent of learning about the cause and cure of impotency. Can you tell me how to begin? K.F.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

Dear K.F.: Your husband's refusal to seek help, aside from one last-minute confidential conference with his departing pastor, suggests that considerations of - of - conscience on his part, may be at the root of the conjugal stalemate.

Guilt feelings about some entanglement overseas, or a compulsive emotional commitment to somebody overseas, may figure in his state-side impotency. His recent negotiation of a re-assignment overseas tends to strengthen this surmise.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

and Mrs. Hartley Jardine, Kingsboro.

Mrs. Michael Keus, Kingsboro, is a patient in the P.E.I. Hospital, Charlottetown.

Mrs. Katie Robertson, Kingsboro, was visited recently by her son, Watson Robertson, Boston.

Billy Mills, Toronto, spent the past two weeks with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Mills, Annapolis. Billy was again the winner in the plowing contest at Dundas recently.

Barbara Bruce and Elinor MacVane, Bothwell, have commenced their studies at Prince of Wales College, Charlottetown. Prior to their departure, the Young People and members of the East Point Baptist Church choir, of which they were both members presented them with gifts.

Mildred MacDonald, Greenvale, has again entered the Charlottetown Hospital for further treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Stewart, Kingsboro, had a weekend guests, Mr. and Mrs. George Woodford of Moncton.

Betty Cameron, Chatman, N.B., spent the weekend as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Stewart, Kingsboro.

Mrs. George Bruce, Kingsboro, spent a few days in Saint John.

Joseph MacDonald, of the American Army, now stationed in Germany, arrived home to attend the funeral of his mother, Mrs. John MacDonald, Priest Pond.

Alma MacLean left on return to Newton, Mass., having spent the summer months with her mother, Mrs. Wilfred MacLean, Kingsboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Dixon, East Baltic, and Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Morrow, Charlottetown, spent a weekend recently in Nova Scotia.

Mr. Roger Francis, Souris, left recently to take up employment in Hamilton, Ont. His wife and family will be leaving shortly to join him.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.

As for what you can do constructively: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help in relation to him. This is the best you personally can do towards restoring full health to the marriage. M.H.