MR. AND MRS. EVERETT LLOYD MacEACHERN

Lot 14 United Church Scene Of Double Ring Ceremony

A pretty fall wedding was solemnized at Lot 14 United Church recently when Margaret Helen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maynard MacArthur of Arlington became the bride of Everett Lloyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawson MacEachern of Cherry Valley P.E.I. A double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. M.K. Charman.

Baskets of gladiolies and dahlias decorated the church while guest pews were marked with miniature corsages made of sweet peas. Mrs. E.S. Burleigh greatuncle of the bride accompanied the choir as they sang "The Lord's My Shepherd" before the ceremony. The Soloist Mrs. Edgar Noye sang "The Lords Prayer" as the bride and groom knelt and "The Wedding Prayer" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in a floor length gown of white mist featuring a wide portrait collar with an inset of sequined imperial rose chantilly lace and long sleeves ending in a deep vee over the hands. Enriched with cut-out sequined embroidered appliques, the voluminous skirt was gathered over bouquet taffeta and hoop. Her elbow-length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a headdress of nylon and pearl trim. Her only jewelry was a string of pearls and matching earrings, a gift of the groom. She carried a cascade of yellow sweetheart roses entwined with ivy.

Attending the bride was her only sister, Miss Catherine MacArthur as matron-of-honour. She wore a street-length gown of yellow embroidered nylon organza over taffeta with matching headdress and white accessories. She carried a bouquet of green and white mums. Little Miss Janice MacLean, cousin of the bride, was a very winsome flower girl in a gown of green embroidered nylon organza over taffeta as she dropped rose petals in the pathway of the bride.

Ronald England, friend of the groom was best man.

David Smith, cousin of the groom, and Warren MacArthur, brother of the bride, ushered the guests in the pews.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. MacArthur chose a two-piece green brocaded dress with a banana maraboo hat with white and black accessories and a corsage of bronze roses. The groom's mother was attired in a navy linen dress with navy and white accessories and a corsage of red sweetheart roses.

Attending the ceremony were the grooms two grandmothers each wore a corsage of white carnations. The grooms two great grandmothers and the brides grandmother were unable to attend the ceremony.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at King George Hall, Port Hill, where the Lot 14 United Church Women served a delicious turkey supper to 87 guests. The bridal table was centered with a three-tier wedding cake made by Mrs. Gleaford Miller and topped with a miniature bride and groom.

Mrs. Roger MacArthur, sister-in-law of the bride attended the guest book while Miss Marilyn Smith, cousin of the groom and Miss Carolyn Maynard, cousin of the bride seated the guests. Mr. Henry Maynard, uncle of the bride, proposed the toast to the bride to which the groom fittingly responded.

Following the reception, the bride and groom left on a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls. For travelling the bride chose a crystal coral wool crepe dress with black and white accessories. She carried a bouquet of aqua and white mums. As bridesmaid Miss Mary Williams friend of the bride, wore a street-length gown of aqua identical to the matron of honour but carried a bouquet of yellow and white mums. Miss Donna MacEachern, sister of the groom, as junior bridesmaid wore a gown of yellow nylon organza over taffeta with matching headdress and white accessories. She carried a bouquet of green and white mums. Little Miss Janice MacLean, cousin of the bride, was a very winsome flower girl in a gown of green embroidered nylon organza over taffeta as she dropped rose petals in the pathway of the bride.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Where Now The November Days We Used To Know

"It's easy enough to tell if an animal is miserable-you can tell it at a glance" Mack comments, looking up from some article he has been reading in a farm paper. "Their ears and their eyes tell you. If they are sick, the ears droop-don't I remember when my 4H calf got a chill after I washed him! Just like a donkey's, his ears flopped then". he grins. "And when they're ailing their eyes are dull. But when they're feeling well" he nods "they shine like clear ice that has been polished and polished!"

Night is here, come after a damp showery day. Where now, we wonder, are those November days we used to know: the stilly lovely days overlaid with sunshine, and so pleasant we recall them wistfully still?

"How did you get to school this morning?" Granddaughter asks Mack. "By bicycle?"

"I started out on it, but we got picked up by a truck. I was grateful too for it was raining then."

"Not the most pleasant day, all through" she comments.

"I'm afraid my door of opportunity has opened and closed" Papa Sterling observed, with a doleful expression, when we came by his house between showers this morning. He turned up his coat-collar against the north wind. "You know" he nodded "there's a time and times."

"Be patient" we said. "There'll come a day yet to go."

"I hope so" he said, eyes uneasy.

"How's the Mama?"

"Oh, just, so so" he replied soberly." A pain here and ache there-it's this weather, of course. And besides she's had word from a friend who left earlier."

"And it's Wish you were here?" we chuckled.

"That's it: "Wish you were here" " he grinned wanly.

"No wash today, Ellen" James smiled, coming by.

"No wash" we agreed.

"Some days may as well go to town" he commented. "Take that sow in to market, so that we won't have to stop work some fine day to do that. Then this afternoon, we can clear sites and snug up that piggery. We're going to have another litter there shortly, I see." So there was a marketing. And a cleaning of sties, and a spreading of manure to the field. And new lights in a row brighten the piggery windows.

Mack has gone home - out through the lighted veranda to attend to his homework of school, before going then to his bed.

"There, that's done!" Granddaughter exclaims putting by a scribbler and preparing to chat. "It's not worth it. Life's too short" James observes.

"Too short for what?" she smiles.

"Filling your head with all sorts of book-stuff. You'll never make use of it. All a girl needs to know is how to keep house: to bake and cook and. . ."

"And don't think that comes easily, either!" she laughs.

"It looks easier, at any rate" James grins. "Dear me" he offers with a start, glancing to the clock, "I'd better get to that piggery! I won't doubt but there are some there by this."

Damp on tonight's panes. Damp on the fields. And Monday is almost spent.

Until tomorrow ——Diary——
Good-night . . . . . .

Let The Oven Cook It For Easy Meal Preparation

"WHAT DO you consider the most timesaving way to cook dinner, Madame?" asked the Chef.

"In the oven, Chef," I replied. "It may seem to take more clock time, but actually it calls for little or no special stirring or other time-consuming attention, as cooking top-of - range does.

LEAVES YOU FREE

"Pre-heat the oven. Meantime, prepare the food, put it in the oven, set the timer and let the oven do it while you do whatever you please," I said.

"Is it your considered opinion, Madame, that most cooks take full advantage of the oven when in use?" queried the Chef.

"Many do not," I told him.

COOK ALL AT ONCE

"When the oven is to be used, as many of the foods to be served in the meal as possible should be cooked at the same time or foods to be served at a later meal, or next day, can be simultaneously over - cooked.

"For instance, baked apple sauce, prunes, baked pears, cooked cereal for tomorrow's breakfast, a meat or fish loaf or chopped beef patties to reheat for the next day can be cooked at one time.

"Any utensil that is not wooden - handled can be used. Heavy earthenware, ironware, flame- resistant glass casseroles and custard cups are invaluable— save dishwashing, too!

"Careful use of the oven develops fine food flavors, saves considerable fuel and is a real time and temp-saver."

MARY HAWORTH

Rebellious Daughter Has Heart Set On European Trip

Dear Mary Haworth: My spirited daughter, 18, has had a good life with few restrictions; but she could always discuss any difference, though we sometimes disagreed.

She was brought up in a religious home, attended parochial schools. She was engaged recently but broke it off when her fiance didn't echo her ambitions for him. He is 19 (too young, I think) and hasn't her drive.

Now she is set on going to Europe for a year. She intends to go with no contacts and find a job and living quarters when she gets there. She is rebellious and independent by nature and has no fear of dangers, such as a parent might foresee.

I am confused and concerned. I don't think she is ready or mature enough for this serious step; naturally she disagrees. If I were to resist her with fiery argument or hysteria, she would be all the more determined and defiant. And she would be furious if I were to consult our pastor or his staff.

She is unusually attractive; sure to encounter many overtures, some of the wrong sort. I pray constantly for her welfare and am utterly shaken by this latest purpose. She is willing to delay for a while but will go eventually, I know.

I have suggested she change jobs as she likes to take a difficult position and master it. She has lots of energy and ambition and doesn't know what to do with it. I would be so grateful for your advice.—F.F.

Dear F.F.: In general, a rebellious daughter is a target for trouble in the outside world, especially if she lacks the virtue of prudence in facing life.

It appears that your daughter is not so much a winged spirit, in terms of soaring ambition and energy, as she is simply a wilful, headstrong, spoiled adolescent, accustomed to leading dear ones by the nose.

Possibly she is an only child, which may explain why you've allowed her so much leeway for back-talk, when parental regulations failed to please her.

As of now, her sudden notion of going alone to Europe for a year, with no housing, no job, no contacts arranged in advance, is childish nonsense. It is about on a par with a 5-year old's leaving home in adventurous mood, to spend the night in a neighbor's orchard before turning back.

Possibly your daughter is feeling a supercharged sort of delayed reaction to being smothered by parents. Maybe she has a spontaneous compulsion urge to find herself grown up overnight, so as to learn who she is in her own right — distinctly apart from being your daughter.

Since one cannot, of course, get grown-up overnight, especially when hindered by exceptional immaturity for one's age, no doubt the next best thing, from the sophomoric view, is to get off to a new environment of sophisticated history, and there try to pass yourself off as being the person you hope to become.

Inasmuch as you consider your daughter's purpose flighty, unsuitable and potentially dangerous to her welfare—in which I concur— my advice is to take the gloves off and tell her so. No cozy have to be fiery or hysterical. Just be flatly plain spoken, not pulling your punches for fear of offending.

You owe it to yourself to go on record as thinking she's mistaken, if that's what you think. If she showed good sense— as in planning ahead, through international employment channels, to insure a right start for herself in Europe— I would say: let her go, with your blessing But as she has her feet in the clouds, it is your duty to reel her in, if you can.—M.H.
