TO JIM BYRNE.

My DEAR FRIEND, JAMES BYRNE, ESQ.

When first I met you, short and stout,
You wore a velvet roundabout,
Yellow and red, and filled it out,
Jim Byrne.

You wore, likewise, a blissful smile:
The heart beneath it knew no guile:
You hav'nt yet forgot the style,
Jim Byrne.

One day to test our schoolboy grit
They set us fighting, and we fit.
And when 'twas over, I was "It"
Jim Byrne!

I loved you then; I love you now,
Though forty years have tried to plow
In vain, some furrows on your brow
Jim Byrne.

But now you're getting old, J. B.
The leaves are turning on the tree;
May Autumn treat you tenderly,
Jim Byrne:

And when your latest day is done,
And all your deeds weighed one by one,
I'm sure the sentence will not run
"Jim, Burn!"

AN ISLAND LADY PRAISED.

Kind Words For Miss Barr, Formerly of Charlottetown.

The Carlisle, Pa., Gazette, of Oct. 7th says:

"The sphere of woman is everywhere" was said not long since by Mrs. Annabel Morris Holvey, of Pittston, the brilliant and accomplished press superintendent of the Pennsylvania State W. C. T. U. Mrs. Holvey, who, by the way, is one of the brightest and most lovable of women, is deeply interested in the welfare of her sex and knows whereof she speaks. Had she been present at the contest between Dickinson and the Indian school, last Saturday when the usefulness of woman was so modestly, yet judiciously proven, Mrs. Holvey would have nodded her golden crowned head and said: "I told you so."

"It was during the last half of the game when the muscular Indians, who had beaten back their adversaries time and again, felt the first shock of resistance and determined opposition. Four of Dickinson's players had gone down on the turf with Sioux, Arroopahoe, Cheyenne, Kiowas, Brule, Ute and Apache Indian piled in a great red heap upon them. Bruised limbs, sore necks and decorated eyes told the tale of collision. But Dickinson picked up heart and went at them with all their strength and determination. There was a crash, a shock and silence followed. The big fellows untangled themselves and out of the middle of the mass was dragged the young Indian giant Artie Miller. His ankle was injured, one of the ligaments being torn from its fastening. The pain was intense. The player was carried to the goal line where the school's physician took him in charge. Pushing her way to where the sufferer lay on the grass, came Miss Barr, the skilled nurse belonging to the Indian school hospital. She knew her duty and in less than no time, the shoe and stockings were removed and bandages applied. Miss Barr held the foot and assisted the doctor in his work. Placing the Indian in the ambulance, the tender-hearted nurse took seat beside him and accompanied him back to the school. Miss Barr is a womanly woman, of fine physique, noble face and queenly ways, her presence commanding the greatest obedience. It was a sight worth seeing to witness the profound respect shown this ministering angel by the Indian pupils, small and large. They could not have done otherwise. In her those Indian boys have a loyal friend and they know it. Miss Barr's sphere is one which any woman might envy."

The Miss Barr referred to in the foregoing extract is a former resident of Charlottetown, and a sister of Mrs. John Coombs. She is evidently as popular abroad as she was at home.

FOR SALE.

RARE CHANCE

The property occupied by J. J. Gay and son situate in the village of Rowan, 7 miles from Charlottetown, is offered for sale. The proprietors have carried on a large market garden nursery, and seed business for thirty years, and the purchaser will no doubt retain a large share of the local trade. The premises comprise a large dwelling house, store, warehouse, barn, shed, orchard, and about 15 acres of the most fertile land on the I-land. This land has been manured year after year, for so long that as an old man said the other day: "it is all a bed of manure and could be hauled for top-dressing." This would be an ideal spot for a country merchant, or it would be admirable for a summer resort. The situation is one of the most beautiful on the island. Good bathing, fishing, boating, shooting and within easy distance; churches, post office school telephone and shops all at the door.

SCANLAN'S BODY FOUND.

Parts of the Face Were Decomposed

Identified by Papers—Died From Exposure and Fatigue.

(Special by Telephone from the Examiner's own Correspondent.)

MURRAY RIVER, Oct. 18.—AS OUR readers are aware a search party, mostly from Boston, has been engaged in endeavouring to find traces of M. J. Scanlan, of Boston, Mass., who suddenly disappeared in the vicinity of Murray River on the 3rd of the month. The search was successful yesterday (Sunday), when the party found the partially decomposed dead body of Mr. Scanlan in the woods on the farm of Mr. John Evans at Murray River. The discovery was made by a young man named Daniel J. Saunders. Parts of the deceased's face was much decomposed, but identification was rendered complete by papers found in the pockets of his clothes and other articles found on his body. There were $35 in cash, a watch and chain on his person and a ring on his finger. The Newfoundland dog which was brought from Boston to assist in the search was of no aid and gave no sign that he recognised the body of his dead master. The coroner, immediately after the body was found, empanelled a jury and, after hearing all the available evidence, rendered a verdict that the deceased came to his death through exposure and fatigue. There was no suspicion whatever of foul play. The body was after the inquest taken in charge by an undertaker and this morning was taken by deceased's friends and is now on its way to Boston via Charlottetown. It is thought that the deceased was laboring under some temporary mental derangement, and while in that condition got bewildered and lay down, as the place where his body was found is only some 300 yards or so from a dwelling house.

[The body of the deceased we learn will be received in Charlottetown on its arrival by the Ancient Order of Hibernians, of which Society he was a member in Boston. The father-in-law of deceased, with the friends who came from Boston, will be in charge of the body, and they as well as the relatives in Boston have much sympathy in their trouble.—ED. EXAMINER.]

DISCOLORING OF CANNED LOBSTERS

Bacteria May be Destroyed by the Application of Heat to the Filled Can.

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—Last year Dr. A. MacPhail, professor of pathology in Bishop's college, Montreal, was commissioned by the minister of marine and fisheries to investigate the cause of discoloration of canned lobsters. His report has just been issued. Dr. MacPhail found the discoloration to be due to bacteria, and after elaborate experiments proved that the bacteria could only be destroyed by the application of heat to the filled can, the use of germicidal fluids being out of the question. The process is simple enough, and when adopted will save hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly to Canadian canners. Following is an abstract of the method recommended for the canning of lobsters on the basis of Dr. MacPhail's inquiry: 1, boil the live lobsters twelve to fifteen minutes in sea water, which is renewed daily; 2, cool on lime washed labels and break off as soon as possible; 3, pull the tails, remove the meat from the arms and claws, place separately in pans which have been cleansed in boiling fresh water; 4, front split the tail and remove every trace of gut, wash off green gland in cold fresh water; 5, wash a second time in fresh water which has been boiled and cooled (if the fresh water is taken from a fresh spring or deep pure well, this boiling is unnecessary); 6, place in earthenware dishes and cover with clean cotton, which has just been boiled in fresh water, allow to dry; 7, wash the claws in the same way, removing all coagulated blood, and drain dry; 8, cleanse all cans, removing rosin with turpentine and alcohol stains with methylated spirit or other suitable fluid, wash in cold fresh water and wipe dry with clean cloth; do not touch inside of cans afterwards with fingers; 9, insert lining which must be kept free from dust in the original packages; 10, place the salt in the can, one or two tablespoonfuls to the pound, salt to be of the best quality; 11, place the lobsters in the cans by handling the meat as little as possible with absolutely clean hands; let the meat be quite dry; 12, cover, wipe and seal at once; 13, concave the cover as much as possible before the lid-hole is sealed by pressing down the middle; 14, bathe at once, the pound cans fifty minutes to one hour, the half pound cans forty five to fifty minutes, the water to be fresh, renewed daily, and must be boiling vigorously; 15, remove and cool; do not probe; keep cool; 16, after twelve to fifteen hours bathe again, the pound cans fifty minutes, the half pound forty minutes; 17, remove and keep cool; do not probe; keep cool; 18, after twelve to fifteen hours bathe again, the pound cans forty minutes, the half pound half an hour; 19, remove and keep cool; do not probe; 20, in very hot weather repeat 18 after another twelve hours; 21, do over and leak and treat as a fresh can; 22, before commencing, scald in fresh hot water all vessels, tables, knives, forks, cloths, etc., which are likely to come in contact with the meat; 23, let the shortest possible time elapse between breaking off and packing and between sealing and bathing; bathe in small lots rather than wait till the day's catch, if large is sealed; 24, allow no bodies, refuse or other offal to accumulate about the factory or to be thrown into the water around it; factories built in the water should have a free flow at every tide; those built on shore are to be kept clean, as above mentioned, within and without.
