Spacecraft Of Future May Grow Vegetables

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—The space craft of the future may have a vegetable garden. The U.S. Air Force at nearby Brooks Air Force Base is studying ways to grow plant life in space vehicles — maybe even cabbages, carrots and the like. The plants would have two purposes: To provide food and oxygen.

The mossy-like substance on some lakes may be the key. It might turn out to be the basis for life support for men on extended space journeys—say a year-long flight to Mars.

Known as algae, the moss-like substance has no roots. Each plant is a single cell. They clump and colonize together in one day, one plant can multiply into as many as 1,000 plants with twice that of beefsteak.

Equally desirable, scientists say, is duckweed, the smallest known flowering plant. Algae and duckweed need carbon dioxide, water and light to grow, points out Dr. Syrel Wilks, chief of the biological section of the school of aerospace medicine.

They throw off oxygen—man's most precious need—as waste. In turn, man throws off carbon dioxide as a waste in breathing. So you end up with one supporting the other.

SEEK BALANCE
Scientists hope to develop a completely balanced system—one where oxygen is produced and carbon dioxide is removed within a space capsule. The body wastes will provide the necessary nutrients for a crop to recycle itself over and over again.

A problem: A system that can handle enough carbon dioxide and produce enough oxygen to be useful.

What the scientists still do not know, however, is how plants will react in the weightless conditions in space.

Municipal Loan Legislation Will Expire Next March 31

OTTAWA (CP)—The Municipal Development and Loan Act under which some 1,000 municipalities across Canada have applied for local construction loans is to end when the act expires next March 31.

Finance Minister Gordon announced in the Commons Thursday that the economic situation since the time the program was introduced has improved markedly and the government sees no need for an extension.

The announcement drew a barrage of criticism from Opposition M.P.s. They suggested the program should at least be kept alive in areas of high unemployment or for those municipalities that wished to participate after the cut-off date.

The program provided a fund of $400,000,000 for municipalities to borrow from and included a 25-per-cent forgiveness factor for projects completed before the March 31, 1966, expiration date.

Mr. Gordon said "It seems probable that the major part of the $100,000,000 of potential forgiveness will be earned by the municipalities."

When declarer fails to make a contract which he could have made, there is always the question of whether he played the hand correctly and was unlucky to go down, or whether he played the hand incorrectly and simply paid the price for his ineptitude.

Take a hand like this one where South, not seeing the opponents' cards, has the choice, after winning the third round of hearts, of taking a finesse in either diamonds or clubs.

In the actual case, if he attempts either finesse, he goes employment is above average. Opposition Leader Diefenbaker suggested that some other action should be taken, particularly in the light of demands by such organizations as the Canadian Manufacturers Association that the 11-per-cent sales tax on production machinery be repealed.

Mr. Gordon retorted that next week he would introduce the government's budget resolution providing for a reduction in personal income taxes.
