ish, 40 Turkish, five Belgian and 75 others "of unknown nationality." The remainder of the victims were slain by North Koreans before or after the Chinese entered the war. There was no specific mention of Canadians. (A Canadian army spokesman in Ottawa said no communication has been received regarding Communist atrocities and he doubted if any Canadians were involved. Only two Canadian soldiers are listed as missing, he pointed out adding that does not necessarily mean that they had been taken prisoner.) He estimated the Chinese had killed at least 2,790 non-Korean prisoners and the North Koreans about 3,000.

The Worst Massacre

The worst massacre of U. S. prisoners was blamed on the North Koreans. Hanley charged 1,250 Americans were led out of a prison camp and shot near the Yalu River boundary of Manchuria in North Korea between Sept. 16 and 18, 1950. "The figures compiled by the United Nations command are far from complete," Hanley added, "but show a record of killings and barbarism unique even in the Communist world." Hanley said 2,500 Korean political prisoners were killed by North Koreans near Kaesong in September, 1950. Another 700 were bound, gagged and pushed down a vertical mine shaft about the same time, and an additional 500 were killed the same way in October of 1950.

The officer said the Eighth Army had no idea as to how many Allied prisoners still are held by the Reds. The Chinese Communists have refused to let International Red Cross representatives visit the prison camps of North Korea. By contrast, Hanley said, Chinese and North Korean Communist prisoners "have been very well taken care of in complete accordance with the Geneva agreement."

Let's Talk It Over

A Prince County Viewpoint by "d"

Summerside people who went to Charlottetown to see the Royal Couple are still talking about how much more satisfactory from the standpoint of the man in the street this visit was compared with the visit of the King and Queen twelve years ago. On that occasion a very fleeting glimpse was all that many people got of their beloved sovereigns. This time it was very different. "That's the fifth time I've seen them today," one onlooker boasted as the Royal car went by. "This is my tenth time," a young lady in front of him observed taking the wind completely out of his sails. Certainly most visitors to the Capital City went home completely satisfied that what they saw of the prince and princess was well worth the trouble and expense of making the trip.

During the past week the Canadian Legion has been very busy in the public eye, because of the Remembrance Day services, and the banquets they have held to commemorate the Armistice which put an end to the First World War, and to remember their comrades who, fighting for freedom as they had done, were chosen to make a greater sacrifice than those who returned.

Much has been said and written about the work of the Canadian Legion during the last week. Their achievements in the past, and their efforts on behalf of their less fortunate comrades in the present are now fresh in our thoughts. But for how long? It is so very easy to forget. It is so easy to pursue the even tenor of our way, to accept the privileges that go with freedom and to forget the men who made this continued freedom possible.

If someone dives into the water and saves us from drowning, if someone takes us from a burning building after we had given up all hope of escape, we are eternally grateful to the one who has snatched us from death. These men of the Canadian Legion risked life and limb to save us from slavery, a fate worse than death. But because they did in a foreign land, far from our peaceful and happy homes, we sometimes do not fully appreciate what they have done.

The Canadian Legion is not asking for expressions of undying gratitude from any of us. They are engaged in helping crippled comrades, and in urging our government, and all of us, to take steps to protect ourselves, should the horrors of a third world conflict descend upon us. Our very heartfelt co-operation is the least we can give.

Mount Allison Artists Give Concert in Bedeque

The Central Bedeque United Baptist Church was filled to capacity on Sunday evening, November 11th. The occasion was the presentation of a sacred concert put on by Mount Allison artists.

These included the Mount Allison Male Quartette, composed of: First tenor, Henry Hargreaves, Bronx, New York; second tenor, Robert Mills, Moncton, N.B.; first bass, Harry Currie, Moncton, N.B.; second bass, Ian MacMillan, Montreal, and soloist, Miss Karen Kierstead, senior student at Mt. Allison. The organist was Mr. Gabriel Chlason, Bachelor of Music, Mt. A.

The meeting was opened with the Doxology and prayer by the Church pastor, Rev. C. A. Britton. All the selections were most feelingly rendered and made a deep impression on the large audience. Much credit is due Mr. Alden Leard of the Mt. Allison Academy staff, through whose efforts this splendid musical treat was made possible. At the close of the concert, Mr. Britton, on behalf of himself and the congregation, thanked Mr. Leard and those who ing with his parents and brother Calvin in Charlottetown.
