A Note to Quit Meant That the Typewriter Was to Go.

She was a dainty little thing, and the old gentleman appeared to be prepossessed in her favor right from the start, but there was evidently something that made him pause.

"Look here," he said in his blunt fashion. "I like you and your references are all right. You run the typewriter as if you knew all there is to know about it, and you don't look like a girl who would be sick every third day and want to get away an hour or two early all the rest of the time, but before I engage you I want to have a clear understanding with you on one subject."

"Yes, sir," she replied, looking at him inquiringly.

"Of course," he explained, "I expect you will be perfectly satisfactory, but if you are not there must be no doubt about my right to discharge you."

"Certainly not."

"If I want you to go, I'll just have one of the clerks put a note on your desk or leave it with the cashier for you, and you're to take that as final."

"Naturally," she said, looking at him in some surprise.

"You're not to enter any protest or file any objections," he persisted, "and most of all you're not to weep."

"Why, I suppose I can ask you why?"

"You can't ask me a thing," he broke in. "If you get a note asking you to quit, you're just to put on your things and walk out without a whimper or question of any kind. Is that understood?"

"It is," she replied.

"Have I your promise to live up to that agreement?"

"You have. But it is such an extraordinary request that I—"

"Young woman," said the old gentleman impressively, "I've been in business here for 50 years, and up to the time woman got a good foothold in the business world I was in the habit of engaging and discharging clerks as seemed to me best from the standpoint of my business. In an unguarded moment, however, I was induced to hire a young woman to run a typewriter for me, and after I found that she wasn't satisfactory to me it took me over eight weeks to discharge her. I left a note on her desk and she promptly came in and wept on mine. I turned the job over to various subordinates, but each time she came into my private office to do her weeping, and inside of a week she had the whole force wrought up to a point where business was being neglected, and she was still drawing salary just the same. Woman in business may be all right, but when it comes to getting her out of business somebody else can have the job. However, if you'll make a solemn promise to go without a single weep if you don't suit I'll try you."—Chicago Post.

NO HAWAII FOR HIM.

One's Political Future There Seemed Almost Too Uncertain.

He is a man of forebodings. He has the quality of cautiousness in that exaggerated degree which prevents men from showing their abilities in achievement because they fear to attempt.

"I had about made up my mind to go to Hawaii," he was saying to an acquaintance. "I had a first rate opportunity to locate there, but I studied the matter up and—"

"You don't mean to say that you're not going?"

"Yes. There are too many uncertainties about it. The possibilities for embarrassing complications are too numerous."

"But there's no telling what you may do in that field. Perhaps you may be elected to congress from there."

"That's what the friend who offered to establish me in business said. But you see those islands are volcanic in their nature."

"Well, that's nothing against them. There's no greater object of interest in nature than a volcano. I always did think that this country ought to have a few more."

"Still, I don't like the idea of getting into politics where things are so very uncertain."

"You're not worried about the kind of people they may send along to help you represent that part of the country, are you? You'll find just as brainy men there as you ever met, you may take my word for it. And suppose they should send somebody who isn't exactly up to date. It wouldn't be the first time there has been gas blown out in Washington."

"I was not thinking of anything of that kind. Supposing I should be elected to congress from Hawaii. You know there is nothing more uncertain than a volcano. It would be entirely possible that while I am here some of those volcanoes would be seized with an inspiration to become active, and as an incident to its operations blow my district all over the Pacific ocean. And then how would I look getting out in the middle of the floor and trying to catch the speaker's eye and hollering for the rights of my constituents? No, sir. I can bear obscurity, but I can't stand the idea of being ridiculous."—Washington Star.

Tom and Jerry.

"My husband," said Mrs. Innocent to her neighbor, "is going to shave himself after this."

"Is that so?" said the neighbor.

"Yes; he hasn't told me so yet, but I found a shaving mug in his coat pocket this morning. He brought it home last night, and his friends Tom and Jerry gave it to him, for their names are on it in gold letters."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Borrowed.

"I thought your name was Elizabeth Brown merely."

"It is."

"But the programme gives it as Elizabeth Willoughby Brown."

"I know. I borrowed the middle name for the occasion only. How would a single Christian name look on a commencement programme?"—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

If we told you that your baby was starving, that it actually didn't get enough to eat, you might resent it. And yet there are thousands of babies who never get the fat they should in their food or who are not able to digest the fat that they do get. Fat is a necessity to your baby. It is baby life and baby beauty. A few drops of Scott's Emulsion for all little ones one, two and three years of age is better than cream for them. They thrive and grow on it.
