Comments On U. K. Canned Lobster Ban

The ban on canned lobsters to England will not affect the industry on Prince Edward Island as much as would be expected at first glance, it was learned from a lobster dealer here last night.

About 55 per cent of the present pack is exported annually to the United Kingdom but a large percentage of this is then re-exported to the other parts of Europe, particularly to the Scandinavian countries and Belgium.

The last named countries are remaining neutral in the present European conflict it is understood and it is likely a boom will result in those places causing a greater demand for lobsters and will be possible for island canners, by paying a slightly higher freight rate, to ship the goods directly to them.

Before the last war lobsters were selling at $25 a case, but dropped in price to $15.00. The present price on canned lobsters is approximately $18.00 a case and the drop is not expected to be nearly as much as before. Prince Edward Island one of Canada's largest exporters in this line ships at present about 35,000 cases yearly to the United Kingdom.

Over Rough Country

French motorized units of steel tanks and armored cars swept toward Saarbruecken over rough country on either side of the Gesele River after the whole area had been grenched by heavy French field batteries from the Warndt forest, no more than five miles away.

The French shells pounded at a two-mile front through the eastern suburbs of the city to the aviation field, which the Germans used as a military airport before the fighting began.

The village of St. Annual, midway between Saarbruecken and the airfield, was caught in the heaviest part of the bombardment.

From the main Siegfried line positions some seven miles behind Saarbruecken the German heavy forces artillery laid down a barrage to cut the advancing French troops.

On this sector of the front the Maginot line itself was unaffected by the battle as the French advance guard positions have been pushed 10 miles in front of the permanent fortifications from which the polts jumped off.

Armored units followed, rolling down on the German concrete pill-boxes and crashing through barbed wire entanglements.

Behind these came fighting engineers who "mopped up" German "suicide squads" which the tanks and squad cars had left behind.

He was born at Rustico on the 19th of August, 1878, the son of the late Christopher LePage and Millicent (Woolner) LePage. On his father's side he was of Huguenot descent, his great-grandfather having settled in the island of Guernsey. His maternal grandfather, Chester Woolner, was a native of Devonshire, England, and was the first of 21 came to Prince Edward Island about 160 years ago and located in North Rustico. When in the Old Country in 1917, Mr. LePage visited the ancestral Woolner home which is about as close to the sea as is North Rustico.

After attending public school in his district, Mr. LePage began business life at the age of 14 in his father's store at Rustico, and took over the business at the age of 17. From a small beginning the business, developed into one of the largest mercantile concerns on the Island, including lobster packing and also the buying and shipping of all agricultural and fishery products.

In 1908 Mr. LePage was instrumental in promoting the first fishermen's cooperative lobster packing association in North America and he also became its manager. This organization, still doing business and has been of great benefit to its members during the past 31 years.

After a successful business career at Rustico for 26 years, Mr. LePage sold out and removed to Charlottetown. Here for the past 20 years he has been associated with his son, W. Ronald LePage, in the shoe and shoe business under the name of LePage Shoe Company, which has developed to be one of the leading firms of the kind in the Maritimes.

Mr. LePage has always been liberal in politics. He was first elected to the Legislature to represent the Second District of Queens in the general election of 1910, and was re-elected in the general elections of 1927, 1931, 1935, and 1939.

He was a member of the Saunders, LePage and Campbell governments, holding the following responsible positions: President of the Executive Council, member of the Treasury Board, Chairman of the Fishermen's Loan Board, Chairman of the Relief Committee, member of the Board of Education, trustee of Fallowed School, and Government Director of the Prince Edward Island Travel Bureau.

He represented the government of Prince Edward Island in London, England, at the coronation of Their Majesties in 1937.

He is a member of Trinity United Church in Charlottetown and has taken an active part in church and temperance work.

Britain & France Prepare Push To Try Nazi Strength

Offensive Would Have Two-fold Purpose - War May Settle To Economic Battle.

(By J. F. Sanderson, Canadian Press Staff Writer) LONDON, Sept. 12 - (CP Cable) - The opinion was expressed freely here today that Great Britain and France were setting the stage for their first big offensive of the war. The British public was informed for the first time that its troops had landed in France but the Ministry of Information said they had not engaged the enemy.

No figures were given as to the strength of the expeditionary force nor its degree of mechanization.

The primary purpose of the offensive would be to test the strength of Germany's westwall, but its ultimate object would be to relieve pressure on Poland by forcing the German command to keep on transferring men, munitions and planes to strengthen their forces along the Franco-German frontier.

An official said the flight of Prime Minister Chamberlain to France for the first meeting of the allied supreme council was "very important" coming so soon after the beginning of the war. This fact alone, it was stated, indicated the immense progress that had been made by the allies.

In Deadly Earnest A Ministry of Information official described the meeting as "completely unanimous" and said it meant that Britain and France had "got down to brass tacks and made it clear to all the world that they were tackling the job in deadly earnest."

Operations on the western front so far have been confined to "mopping up" German positions in the Maginot Line and the westwall as a sort of preliminary or preparatory operation.

Germany's westwall is not so much a line of fortifications as a series of deep zonal defences running back as far as 15 miles back and up by strong forces of mobile reserves ready for instant counter-attack.

Gaulein learned the futility of these operations in the last war, operations which cost millions of lives at the Somme and in Flanders.

While a general offensive may be expected on the western front - possibly joint operations by British and French troops - this should not be interpreted as meaning an attempt to break through the westwall in one gigantic operation or even in a series of coordinated operations.

In the first place, the west front is only 200 miles long, one half as long as the west front in the last war. Secondly, military experts agree that mechanization and modern weapons are in favor of the defence and it takes a three to one advantage for the attack to gain even local successes.

Considering these factors, plus the fact that General Gamelin has been noted for his astuteness, rather than for blundering methods, it is considered almost incredible he would attempt a vast operation to break through Germany's strongly entrenched line.

If this forecast of what may happen on the west front proves accurate a long drawn out struggle should be expected. It may be the allied and German forces will be locked in a death grip for an indefinite period within a comparatively limited area and in that event the economic factor - which is definitely in favor of Britain and France - will be the decisive one.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

When steam rises from your saucepans during cooking cover the rack above the cooker with two brown sea towels. These will absorb the moisture and prevent your kitchen walls and ceiling from getting steamy. It is this constant steaming of walls that causes the damp to flake off so quickly, and by remembering this tip you will save yourself a bill for having the kitchen re-distempere.
