LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Queen Square Contributions.

SIR,—I am pleased to see the creditable total of over seven hundred dollars for this object. The list of small contributions do great credit to many of our citizens who, like the widow with her mite, have given more than all the large ones. There are also some who were well able to give large amounts and many who have not yet given anything, in some cases, perhaps, because they have not been called on. I hope that these will yet come forward and add their share to this public benefit.

I notice that of the total of $700, nine gentlemen contributed $93 of this amount, viz.:

Hon. Judge Young.....	$ 15
Lieut. Governor Macdonald.....	10
Rev. S. Weston-Jones.....	10
Dr. McLeod.....	10
J. D. MacLeod & Co.....	10
Gen. Carter & Co.....	10
Hippolyte Lazard.....	10
E. H. Norton.....	8

The example of those gentlemen is well worthy of imitation. When it was feared that the garden would go down for want of funds there were some who made promises of doubling the amounts given last year and I now find that they have not kept up to these promises. This garden is now the greatest attraction of our city and must be a great source of enjoyment for the poorer classes who cannot afford horse hire or the other expenses of leaving the city in the hot season.

This list is very substantial evidence on the part of the citizens that they desire that the garden should be a permanent thing, and I now hope that the members of the City Council will act like men and vote an amount sufficient to maintain the work of the garden, and thus make the cost bear evenly on all. In this city, as in all others, we have too many who will always sneak out of the way when they are wanted to give ten cents to any public

IMPROVEMENT.

A Life on a String.

In Scotland men descended the perpendicular side of mountains suspended by a rope, for the purpose of robbing eagles of their young. A few years ago a young man named Melan descended the "lofty Ben Lomond," and was on the point of depriving a nest of its callow brood, when the two parent eagles attacked the intruder with such energy that he was compelled to draw his dagger in self-defence; but in making a blow at one of his assailants, he cut the rope that supported him nearly in two, leaving nothing but a single strand, scarce bigger round than a pipe-stem, between him and eternity. At the time he was about half-way down the precipice, which was, at that place, over six hundred feet high, so that his situation was as frightful as any that the mind can imagine; and to increase its horrors, the eagles continued their attack, on many occasions adding their weight to the rope, which now seemed scarcely adequate to support that of a child. Without the slightest hope of escaping a frightful death, Melan gave the signal to be drawn aloft, an operation which took half an hour, but which, nevertheless, was performed with safety, and the rescued man reached the top with a countenance wearing an expression of petrified terror, while his hair, which was sandy before his descent, had turned white as snow. Melan has never since ventured on a similar errand.

Sir Charles Tupper's Important Speech.

Sir Charles Tupper made an important speech respecting the Hudson Bay route, at a meeting called to hear a paper by Commodore Markham on the exploration of the Straits. He said, in view of the development of the Northwest, too much importance could not be attached to more direct means of exit for produce than via the Canadian Pacific. He said it was entirely erroneous to suppose the Canadian Pacific Company were hostile to the Hudson Bay railway enterprise. The company took the strongest possible interest in the concern, which is practicable, would bring the wheat areas of the Northwest still nearer the markets of the old world.

The Poll Mall Gazette gives the following from the examination papers in natural history of one of the English public schools:
"Describe a sparrow-hawk, an oak, a trout, and a hare, so that a person who had never seen them would recognize them." Answer.
"Sparrow-hawk is a bird with wings, legs, tail, etc.; beech eyes and feathers." An oak tree is a most peculiar tree; it has rugged bark and the top is round generally, it reminds you of a cabbage a little way off.
"A trout is a fish with a scratchy top." A young disciple of Izaak Walton, who probably wishes to pose as a first class fisherman, adds: "They are rather dark on the back but a light silvery colour underneath, they take a fly as well as anything."
"Hare is an animal hunted by dogs." The next boy clearly kept tame rabbits, and believed that every body else kept them.
Description became easy: "A hare is a rabbit only larger." To conclude with an example from another source, full of unwilling satire upon men's common attitude towards "proof" that does not suit their views. The question was: "What do you know of Charles Darwin?" Answer.— "Darwin proved that men are descended from monkeys (not generally believed)."

Archdeacon Farrar, the famous Church of England divine, urges the establishment of a new order of the clergymen by the English Church, to work specially among the poor and degraded, the members to join it for a definite period, say five years, to be bound during that time by vows of poverty, celibacy and obedience.

Let the Girls Step In.

There is a widespread want unappreciated for the luxuries of country life; the two most sought for and most difficult to obtain are the products of the dairy and the poultry yard. Farmers are said to be grasping; we think otherwise, as they, for lack of ambition, sell their milk to dealers and creameries. If the farmers' daughters made as good butter and cheese as their grandmothers did, there would be no need of protective milk associations; if farmers' daughters used incubators and raised and attended poultry, the present dearth of plump chickens and fat capons would cease.
Last March broiling chickens sold wholesale at thirty-eight cents per pound, and the same month capons reached twenty-eight cents per pound. These are remunerative prices, and better rates could be obtained by serving first-class hotels and restaurants. Dairy butter sold down to eighteen cents per pound last March, when more than one owner of dairy cows, through superior skill as a producer, and greater enterprise as a merchant, received one dollar per pound for butter, and his eager customers clamored for more.

Farming is said not to pay; farmers are always poor. Now just let the girls step in and see if they cannot make as good butter as the great creameries put on the market, and when they do, fathers, see to it that your daughters have their just share of your increased profit. It is "the ready penny," the actual possession of money, that we all desire, and this universal longing sends girls to the mill, the factory and the store. Farmers' daughters who remain at home are fed and clothed but rarely paid for their services. This is what so frequently discourages them. Then again many girls lack manual skill, and at home receive no training which tends to diminish this evil. They know nothing, therefore they "go out." The woman who would most benefit her sex would be the one who, having the means at her command, will place within the reach of farmers' daughters an education which would enable them to gain a comfortable living in the area of country pursuits. She would be a benefactress in two ways, as she would thin the ranks of wage earners and open new fields
