CHILD AND MOTHER.

Oh, mother, my love, if you'll give me your hand

And go where I ask you to wander, I will lead you away to a beautiful land, The dreamland that's waiting out yonder. We'll walk in the sweet posy garden out there, Where moonlight and starlight are streaming, And the flowers and the birds are filling the air With the fragrance and music of dreaming.

There'll be no little, tired out boy to undress, No questions of cares to perplex you. There'll be no little bruises or bumps to caress, Nor patching of stockings to vex you. For I'll rock you away on the silver dew stream And sing you asleep when you're weary, And no one shall know of our beautiful dream But you and your own little dearie.

And when I am tired I'll nestle my head In the bosom that soothed me so often, And the wide awake stars shall sing in my stead

A song which my dreaming shall soften. So, mother, my love, let me take your dear hand

And away through the starlight we'll wander, Away through the mist to the beautiful land, The dreamland that's waiting out yonder. —Eugene Field.

OPIUM SMOKING.

The Paraphernalia Necessary to Enjoy the Noxious Drug.

The method of smoking opium is not known to the average citizen, and when he detects a peculiar smell about Chinese laundries he does not suspect that it comes from the opium pipe smoked probably in the next room. There are plenty of people who think that the long stemmed pipes smoked by the laundrymen in front of their shops are filled with opium, and that it is the sum and substance of the process. They know nothing of lamps, yen hoks, and like paraphernalia necessary to enjoy the noxious drug. The small pipes smoked by the Chinamen contain Chinese tobacco, stronger than the American product, but substantially the same.

The "layout" for the smoking of opium consists first of a large stem, made of bamboo. This stem is between 2 1/2 and 3 inches in circumference. Almost midway of the stem sets a large clay bowl with only a small hole, such as would be made by a large darning needle, upon the top. Then there is a small lamp, which burns peanut or olive oil; then the yen hok, about the shape of a darning needle, to cook the opium with, and other like instruments for cleaning the pipe, and last the opium itself in a small jar or tin.

All these articles may be found on sale in at least one Chinese store in this city. They are received from a large importing house in Philadelphia, which supplies the whole south with these articles.

The opium looks very much like the crude licorice which is used for sweetening chewing tobacco. It comes to the merchants in large cans, weighing from one to ten pounds, and in the different qualities costs from $10 to $30 a pound. It is retailed over the counters out of a shaving mug, covered with paper, to keep it clean, and ladled out with a miniature butter paddle. When a Chinaman desires to purchase opium, he brings in a tin and designates in weight or money the amount he desires. The merchant then carefully weighs the tin in a pair of scales made from a small bamboo rod, balanced by a string tied in the middle. The tin is held upon a small piece of copper, tied upon one end. The exact weight of this is ascertained by moving a small copper weight along the beam. Then it is placed so much farther down, according to marks cut upon the bamboo, and the opium is gathered up in a lump upon the paddle and skillfully dropped into the tin. It is balanced to the fraction of a grain, and an expert in this line of business can judge almost exactly the weight desired each time. —Washington Post.

HORSE TALK.

Adri, by Adrian Wilkes, still keeps on her winning career.

Clarence K, a brother of Robbie P, 2:10 3/4, is in training at Auburn, Neb.

The report has gained currency that Jolie, Ill., is to be invaded by the Forsythe runners.

Frank Loomis will bring his last spring's sensation, Nettie Jefferson, 2:10 3/4, east again.

Robert McGregor at 26 years old has the fire of youth and the constitution of a horse of 10 years.

Dixie, 2:14 3/4, the pedigreed gelding, changed hands once for $45 before he became known to fame.

Alice Hood, by Goldsmith Star, dam of the trotter Proctor W, 2:19 3/4, died at Portland, Ind., recently.

Robert J weighs 15 pounds more than John R. Gentry, the latter's weight at this time being 945 pounds.

The great Canadian sire Superior, son of Wood's Hambletonian, recently broke his leg and is now in slings.

H. Kirkendall, a well known horseman and one of the pioneers of Montana, died recently of pneumonia.

John Young has 13 Axtells in training at Terre Haute. Fortunately he has no grain of superstition in his make up.

Old Lady Yeiser, now in her twenty-first year, the dam of Lottie Loraine, 2:06 3/4, will have no produce this season.

Phyllis Wilkes, the pacing mare exported to England last year, has not yet shown in that country anything like the speed she had in her native land.

TREES AND LUMBER.

It is said that timber cannot be properly seasoned by smoking.

The cells of woody fiber are only a thousandth of an inch long.

Some kinds of wood require eight years for effective seasoning.

It is possible in some cases to assist the process of seasoning by dissolving the sap of wood by immersion in water.

The beauty of the birdseye maple arises from the constrictions of its fibers. The cause of this peculiarity is unknown.

A cubic foot of the best English oak when green weighs 71 pounds 10 ounces; when seasoned, the wood is reduced to 43 pounds 8 ounces.

Experienced lumbermen say that in the process of seasoning wood should be occasionally repiled and decayed or defective pieces removed, lest they infect the others.

The durability of wood does not, as some suppose, depend on its weight. Larch, one of the lightest woods, and locust, one of the heaviest, are alike almost indestructible.

"Wind shakes" are circular cracks in a tree separating the different layers. They are supposed to be caused by wind, and greatly injure the lumber made from such a tree.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
