

MEMBERS OF THE Advisory Committee of the Charlottetown Unemployment Office met last night to discuss plans and means for relieving the unemployment situation which usually develops

Committee Makes Plans To Relieve Unemployment

The Advisory Committee of the Charlottetown National Employment Office met last night in the office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, to organize the annual campaign to combat winter unemployment. The Committee is temporarily without the service of a permanent chairman, and these duties were assumed for the time being by P. E. Palmer, who was representing the Electrical Contractors Association. Considerable ground work was laid, and a full discussion of employment problems was carried out. An encouraging picture of winter employment projects was revealed during the exchange of ideas. A number of good sized building projects now underway, will carry on throughout the winter. Taking part in the talks were: Elric Campbell of the Canadian Legion; P. E. Palmer, electrical contractor; Arthur Wright, retail trades; Eugene McCabe, carpenter's union; Louis Condon, manufacturers' association; and David Wright representing agriculture. The next meeting of the committee will be held in a week's time, when it is expected that representatives of the City Council, the Provincial Government, the service clubs and women's organizations will be present. In common with more than 200 Unemployment Insurance Offices in Canada, the National Employment Office in Charlottetown, will cooperate with the employment committee during the campaign. The Charlottetown Local Employment Advisory Committee will bend every effort with the assistance of local service clubs, the City Council and other bodies, to develop as many employment opportunities as possible. ## Says Fishermen More Aware Illegal Fishing Is Damaging

Officers of the protection branch of the Department of Fisheries in Prince Edward Island heard Fisheries Minister J. Angus MacLean tell them that fishermen generally were becoming aware that illegal fishing was detrimental to their own interests. Mr. MacLean briefly visited the protection officers who were meeting in Charlottetown on Tuesday and Wednesday in their annual district conference. The fisheries minister visited the Island capital in connection with a meeting of the Prince Edward Island Fisheries Federation. Briefly discussing the prevalence of lobster poaching in the Maritimes the Island-born cabinet minister expressed confidence that the protection branch was well able to handle the situation. He emphasized that law enforcement went hand-in-hand with education to wipe out illegal lobstering. Fishermen must realize, he said, conservation was necessary for their own protection. WORK REVIEWED Warren Farrer, district protection for Prince Edward Island, presided at the two-day session held in the federal building. All phases of protection work were reviewed and considerable attention was given to the compilation of statistics. D. A. MacFarlane of the markets and economics branch of the department's Maritime headquarters in Halifax explained the methods used in collection of fisheries statistics. Forrest Watson, chief protection officer for the Maritime area, Halifax, took part in the discussions which were attended by protection officers from all parts of the island. Protection officers attending included: N. W. MacLeod and L. J. Murphy, Summerside; P. E. McLellan, Souris; W. C. MacKay, Conroy; E. M. MacKay, Alberton; J. R. Perry, Tignish; N. E. MacLeod, Summerside; J. G. MacInnis, Morrell; E. P. MacDonald, Montague; N. N. Larabee, C. R. Palmer and L. D. Darrach, all of Charlottetown. Also in attendance were E. A. Horne, chief administrative officer for the Maritimes, Halifax, and H. R. Found, shellfish specialist at the Fisheries Research Board of Canada's station at Ellerslie, P. E. I.
